Elderly Woman Robbed By Two Men

An 85-year-old woman was robbed over the weekend by two men who fled over the School Street bridge.

Police said the men approached the woman from behind near School Street and the Parkway about 12:45 p.m. last Saturday. The woman was pushed to the ground and her purse stolen.

Police later found the purse, which was missing between $50 and $60 in cash, behind nearby Star Market.

The woman described the two men as white and in their late 20s, police said. She said one is about 5-foot-8 with a mustache and dark, shoulder-length hair and was wearing dark clothing.

The other suspect is about 6-foot-2 and clean-shaven. Police found a red jacket worn by one of the suspects behind Star Market.

Shipyard Designated Economic Target Area

State Sen. Michael Morrissey announced Tuesday that Gov. William Weld has designated the Fore River shipyard an Economic Target Area (ETA) under the provisions of the Economic Development Law which passed the Legislature last year.

The designation makes the shipyard eligible for tax incentives and development help in revitalizing the shipyard.

"This is a major step forward in the revitalization of the shipyard," Morrissey said. "The economic incentives contained in the Economic Development Package will make it easier to attract tenants and investors to the shipyard property and, when coupled with the federal incentives provided by Congress Gerry Studds, make the site more attractive to potential shipbuilders."

"Not only is the revitalization of the shipyard important for the tax base of Quincy and Braintree, but it will also help the ratepayers of the MWRA. The successful development of the yard will make it easier to sell the property, thereby removing it from the rolls of the MWRA and returning monies to the ratepayers who paid for the shipyard several years ago. This has the potential to be a big win for Quincy and Braintree and the MWRA ratepayer."

Morrissey also praised the governor for making the shipyard one of 14 communities or regions statewide that have been named Economic Target Areas.

"This is the first major step to helping revitalize and redevelopment the shipyard," Morrissey said.

Rep. Ronald Mariano said he also was thrilled with the governor's announcement.

"Now we have certain guarantees we can give people as we put together a package to make the shipyard more attractive to shipbuilders," said Mariano. "Hopefully, it will help us to get something positive going there. It's great news for Quincy."

Weld said the designations will give a boost to the Massachusetts economy.

"These designations are an important step to providing communities with every opportunity to attract businesses, encourage economic growth and create new jobs," said Weld. "The benefits of this program will ultimately strengthen the economy and increase employment throughout the state."

The shipyard became eligible for designation as an ETA through an amendment sponsored by Morrissey during the debate on the passage of the Economic Development Package. The amendment was specifically designed to make the yard eligible for designation as an ETA.

The City of Quincy and the Town of Braintree will now be eligible to apply for a designation of the shipyard as an Economic Opportunity Area, which provides tax incentives and real estate tax abatements for potential developers.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix, noting that Quincy 2000 was the agency that filed to have the city designated as an ETA, said Tuesday that the public-private organization will aggressively pursue the designation of several areas in the city as Economic Opportunity Areas.

D'Aprix named North Quincy, Wollaston, Quincy Center; the former Jordan Marsh Warehouse in Squantum and the shipyard as those areas.

Council On Aging Meeting Sept. 22

The Quincy Council on Aging will meet Thursday, Sept. 22 at 2 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Executive Director Brian Buckley will report on plans for the 1995 White House Conference on Aging and the recent visit of Secretary of Elder Affairs Franklin Olivierre to Quincy.

Olivierre announced at a special meeting of Gov. William Weld's Cabinet at City Hall—which was attended by Mayor James Sheets—that funding for local councils on aging through the Executive Office of Elder Affairs has been increased.

This was made possible through the Office of Elder Affairs formula grants and discretionary grants.

29.2% Voter Turnout Here

Romney, Roosevelt Studds, Morrissey Win

By ROBERT BOSWORTH
and MICHAEL WHALEN

Quincy voters were in political step with most of Massachusetts in Tuesday's primary elections, giving the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate to W. Mitt Romney and the Democratic nod for Governor to Mark Roosevelt.

On the local front, State Senator Michael Morrissey of Quincy easily rolled by his Brintree challenger Bernard Walsh.

Congressman Gerry E. Studds crushed Roger P. Ham, a LaRouche candidate, running out of Quincy.

Romney will square off with Democratic incumbent Senator Edward M. Kennedy in the Nov. 8 final election. Kennedy was unopposed Tuesday.

Roosevelt will take on Gov. William Weld in November. Weld and Lt. Gov. A. Paul Cellucci were unopposed on the Republican ballot Tuesday.

By his primary victory Tuesday, Morrissey is assured of a second Senate term. With no Republican candidate, he will be unopposed in November unless a write-in or sticker candidate appears on the scene which is unlikely.

Studds will face a little known Republican, Keith Jason Hemeon of Sandwich in November. Hemeon was unopposed Tuesday.

Morrissey said he was

U.S. Assistant Secretary Of Education Speaker

Della Chiesa Center To Be Dedicated Oct. 16

By MICHAEL WHALEN

U.S. Assistant Secretary for Elementary and Secondary Education Thomas Payzant will be guest speaker at the dedication of the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy on Sunday, Oct. 18 at 2 p.m.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon said he had been in contact with Dr. Payzant over a six-month period to see if the secretary's schedule would allow him to attend the dedication.

"We're extremely pleased to have such an important dignitary come to the dedication of one of our schools," said Creedon. "It's quite an honor."

Creedon added that Payzant has "an affection" for Quincy, since he attended both Wollaston Elementary and Central Junior High schools.

Payzant was confirmed by the Senate as assistant secretary for elementary and secondary education on Aug. 3, 1993. Prior to that, he served in the field of education for 30 years, beginning as a high school history teacher in Belmont. Immediately before his confirmation, he was serving as superintendent of the San Diego public schools, the eighth largest urban school district in the country.

Payzant received a bachelor of arts degree in American history and literature from Williams College in 1962, a master's degree in teaching from Harvard University in 1963, and a doctorate in education from Harvard in 1992. He has also participated in a number of community activities and has received several educational awards, including the Harold W. McGraw Jr. Prize in Education in December 1992.

The City Council vote on whether to allow a Hingham firm to build the Granite Crossing shopping center in Quincy Point, which would include a Wal-Mart store, will likely be taken next week.

At the request of Council President Michael Cheney, Atlantic Development of Hingham has agreed to extend the deadline date for the vote to Wednesday, Oct. 12.

The council, by law, originally had to vote on the matter by Sept. 27. However, the law allows the council to extend the deadline date with the permission of the developer.

Cheney has asked that a special council meeting be held for final discussion of the matter Thursday, Sept. 29 at 7 p.m. He said the vote will likely be taken that night, but it could be taken at the council's next regularly-scheduled meeting Monday, Oct. 3.

Cheney had said last week that he planned to schedule two special meetings, Sept. 28 and Sept. 29. He said Monday night, however, he felt one special meeting would suffice, especially since the council could conclude discussion Oct. 3 if necessary.

Atlantic Development is hoping to build a 135,000-square-foot Wal-Mart store, a 60,000 to 75,000-square-foot supermarket, and possibly another 15,000-square-foot store retail store if the supermarket does not fill the full 75,000 square feet, near The Falls condominium complex in Quincy Point.

The project has already been approved by several agencies, including the Quincy Planning Board, Quincy Conservation Commission, and state Department of Environmental Protection. Six City Council votes are needed for final approval.

Four councillors, including Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro whose ward includes the site, have said they will vote for the project. The others are Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio and Councillor Timothy Cahill.

Three other councillors, including Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan, and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, have said they are leaning in favor of the project.

Cheney and Councillor Joseph LaRaia have said they need more time to examine some of the is-ssues surrounding the proposed shopping center including the effect of traffic and a $600,000 mitigation package offered by the developers to the condominium owners. Cheney was scheduled to meet with Falls residents Tuesday night to discuss the mitigation package.

Mayor James Sheets who technically has no say in the matter, also came out in favor of the project

Public Hearing Oct. 3 On Newport Ave. Grant

The City Council will hold a public hearing Monday, Oct. 3 regarding a state grant that will fund planned improvements to the Newport Avenue Extension.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Officials announced last month that the city will soon receive a $2 million grant for the project from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. By law, Quincy must hold a public hearing and the City Council must vote to accept the grant before the funding can be received.

All interested residents are invited to voice their opinions on the issue at the hearing.

Two New Police Programs For Community

The Quincy Police Department, in an effort to initiate more interaction between city residents and police, will be holding two new programs beginning next month.

The first, to be called The Citizens Police Academy, will be held Thursdays from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the department for two eight-week sessions, Oct. 27 to Dec. 22 and April 6 (1995) to May 25. Each academy will be attended by 30 people.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said the purpose of the academy is to give residents a first-hand understanding of how the police department works.

"It will be a great opportunity for them to get involved with the police,"

he said.

Veteran Quincy Police officers will conduct the academy, which will cover a number of topics and be open to Quincy residents age 21 and over. Applications for the program can be picked up at the department, One Sea St.

Participants in the program must attend at least seven of the eight lessons as well as join a police officer on a "Ride-Along" through the city in order to receive a certificate of completion.

Mullen said the other new program, "Blow the Whistle on Crime," will also begin in October although a date has not been set. Mullen said he and Crime Prevention Officer Bob Hanna will pre-

"It's a good way to give the people the chance to speak to the chief," he said.

Mullen said a 20-minute video will be shown as part of the program. In addition, residents will receive a whistle and a pamphlet on senior crime. The chief noted that Fretter's of Quincy Avenue in Quincy for donating a television and VCR to the new program as well as past police programs.

Mullen noted that the Police Academy program is being funded by a Community Police Grant provided by the Massachusetts Department of Public Safety while "Blow the Whistle" is being paid for by the city's federally-funded Community Development Block Grant account.

Those interested in attending the Police Academy should call Hanna at 479-1212 ext. 349 or Lt. Vincent Flaherty, ext. 351. To participate in "Blow the Whistle," write to: Chief Francis Mullen, Quincy Police Department, One Sea St., Quincy, MA 02169.

City To Receive Over $13,000 In Community Policing Funds

The state has announced that Quincy will receive $13,149.59 in community policing funds.

Rep. Michael Bellotti, who helped secure the grant, said he was pleased to hear the news.

"Helping local police make our streets safer will always remain a priority for me at the State House. Knowing that community policing will make a difference in maintaining law and order in our community, I am truly pleased to have fought for, and won, Quincy's designation to receive funding," said Bellotti.

Quincy was not rewarded a grant last year. However, through Bellotti's efforts, a provision of the state's annual spending plan added more community policing money to the available program pool. With that, more communities are being served in 1994, the second year of the House-initiated crime fighting plan.

"Whether it be community policing funds, other state programs to help equip our law enforcement professionals or the adoption of tougher laws and sentencing procedures, my efforts to increase the public's safety will continue," said Bellotti.

Quincy 2000 Offering Over $4 Million For Small Business Loans

Those who have dreamed about starting their own businesses in Quincy will now be afforded the opportunity to do so, courtesy of Quincy 2000 and a group of local banks.

A ceremony was held Monday in the Quincy 2000 headquarters at Presidents Place to commemorate the official launching of the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool. The endeavor, which is also designed to help existing businesses expand, will consist of more than $4 million donated by at least 10 area banks.

"The purpose of the program is to give business people the opportunity to get small business loans," said Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix. He added that loans will range from a minimum $5,000 to a maximum $150,000.

Mayor James Sheets called the Loan Pool a "benchmark" in the growth of Quincy 2000, and said the program is a good example of the city's public and private sectors working together for the benefit of the entire community.

"I am fully convinced that if a city is going to be competitive, the various segments have to be together and work together," said Sheets. "That's happening in this city. We're on the cutting edge of change."

"This is one of the benchmark days in the City of Quincy. I just think that great things are going to continue to happen here in the city."

Sheets also commended the participating banks for putting aside their competition for the good of the community as a whole.

Currently, 10 banks are in the Loan Pool: Bank of Boston (who D'Aprix noted has initially agreed to be the servicing agent or "lead bank" of the program), Century Bank, Citizens Bank and Trust, Colonial Federal Savings Bank, Fleet Bank, Hibernia Savings Bank, Quincy Savings Bank, State Street Bank and Trust, Shawmut Bank, and USTrust. BayBank is soon expected to join, D'Aprix said.

He added that the Loan Pool totals between $4 million and $5 million.

D'Aprix said the program has been in the works for more than four months and credited Quincy 2000 Deputy Director Joseph Mannarino with doing much of the preparation. He added that Mannarino will meet with applicants interested in participating in the program.

D'Aprix said Quincy 2000 has already received "half a dozen" applications for the Loan Pool, and he expects many more to come in now that the program has been officially launched. Quincy 2000 plans a large-scale advertising campaign to help people become aware of the Loan Pool, he added.

Those who apply for loans will be judged by a Loan Committee consisting of representatives from Quincy 2000, the mayor's office, and the participating banks. Applicants will be judged in two areas, D'Aprix said: strength of business and credit criteria.

Loans will be made for the purpose of purchasing machinery and equipment, working capital and startup expenses and will normally be term loans, according to D'Aprix. The interest rate charged will be the agreed-upon prime rate plus 2 percent, and the servicing agent will retain one-half percent for servicing.

In addition, all loans will require an application fee of 1 percent of the borrowed amount, with a minimum fee of $100. The non-refundable $100 minimum will be due at the time of application and should be made payable to Quincy 2000 Corp. Repayment periods will range from one to five years and should be paid on a monthly basis, D'Aprix said.

For more information about the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool, call 847-1454.

7 City Food Programs To Receive Grants From Project Bread

Seven Quincy food programs will receive a total of $72,500 from Project Bread Thursday, Sept. 29 at the Marriott Long Wharf Hotel in Boston.

The funds were raised by participants in the 25th annual Walk for Hunger in Boston last May. In all, 464 food pantries, soup kitchens and homeless shelters throughout Massachusetts will receive grants totaling over $3 million.

Quincy programs that will receive funding include:

- American Red Cross, $3,000.
- DOVE Inc., $11,000.
- Father Bill's Place, $14,000.
- Protestant Social Service Bureau, $2,500.
- Quincy Community Action, $20,000.
- Quincy Crisis Center, $20,000.

•Seaside Advocacy Group, $2,000.

Father Bill's Place Executive Director Joseph Finn said grants from Project Bread literally help keep the homeless shelter going.

"I do not know how we could be in existence today without continual help from Project Bread," he said. "We serve 800 to 1,000 adults three meals a day and because of Project Bread we can do this. The support our organization receives throughout the year in the form of workshops, training, outreach information and simply answers to questions on hunger issues is vital to our existence."

"Other sources have become limited, but Project Bread has continually provided us the resources to serve the people of Quincy."

TAKE YOUR MEDICINE (CORRECTLY)

All those prescription and over-the-counter drugs in your medicine cabinet may be doing you more harm than good. Millions of Americans put themselves at risk of serious health problems every year either because they don't follow dosage directions precisely or because of interactions with other drugs. To make sure your medications work for you rather than against you, inform your doctor about any allergies, other medications, special diets or supplements, use of alcohol, tobacco, or other drugs. Then, before you leave the doctor's office, make sure you understand how to take your medications (with food? At what times of day?), what results to expect and what signs should signal a call back to the doctor. P.S. It is estimated that 20 to 25 percent of Americans don't take their prescription or over-the-counter medications correctly.

To reduce risk, avoid mixing medications without a physician's approval. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and myself offer a full range of cardiopulmonary services, including cardiac and respiratory therapy and rehabilitation. City Council Reunion Oct. 6

The Quincy Neighborhood Club will be the setting for a little Quincy political history and nostalgia Thursday, Oct. 6.

That's the date and place selected for the City Council reunion which has been in the planning stage the past three months.

The rare get-together is for all living former councillors and the present council.

When the event was first thought of, the number totaled 35: 26 former councillors and the present nine. But, sadly, the recent death of Patricia Toland has reduced the number to 34 and 25.

The reunion was the idea of former Mayor Frank McCauley, Dist. Atty. William Delahunt and former Dist. Atty. George Burke, all of whom served in the city council. Former Councillors Joanne Condon Walsh and Leo Kelly later joined them to help in putting it together.

"It will be an opportunity to renew acquaintances and reminisce about happenings in Quincy city government over the years," says McCauley, who is the historian and statistician for the event.

The original 35, McCauley has figured out, served a total of 262 1/2 years in the council. Pat Toland's death reduces that to 252 1/2.

McCAULEY

Present Councilor and former Mayor Joseph LaRaia holds the longevity record among the 34 with 19 years service and like the Eveready bunny, is still going. Mayor James Sheets is runner-up with 16 and former Councilor Jack Lydon third with 14.

LaRAIA

At age 89, Alfred Helfrich is the oldest of the 34 and the lone surviving Plan E city councillor. He served from 1950 to 1955 when Plan A was voted back in.

Thomas Gilmartin goes back the furthest in time of service. He was

Ward 6 councillor from 1946 to 1949. Now in his 80's, he still maintains a keen interest in politics by forecasting election results.

Incidentally, five of the 34 councillors went on to become mayor: Walter Hannon, LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, McCauley and Sheets.

Any of the 34 who have not yet acknowledged their invitations are asked to check in with McCauley at 479-6230.

It should be a night to remember.

TOM SULLIVAN, The Sun's retired sports editor, will be honored in his hometown of Randolph Friday, Oct. 7.

SULLIVAN

A member of the Class of 1937, Sullivan covered Randolph football and other sports for over 20 years for the Ledger.

His brother, Art, a three sports star, was inducted last year.

Tom came to The Sun when it was started in September, 1968, and covered Quincy and North Quincy sports from the first issue until his retirement last year.

He racked up a few honors while here:

He was inducted into the Quincy-North Quincy High School Football Hall of Fame, the Quincy High School and North Quincy High Schools Basketball Hall of Fame, and the Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame.

YOU MIGHT REMEMBER a column back in May about my tiger cat Maggie who died of lymphoma at age 15. It was like losing a member of the family.

A lot of nice people who had lost pets of their own took the time to write or call to express their sympathy and their feelings about beloved pets.

Long-time reader Mary Silva of Gannett R.D., Adams Shore, didn't write or call. But she did something else nice.

About the same time Maggie died, she lost her pet cat, Misty to whom she was attached. She soon afterward got another cat and because of the column about Maggie, she named her Maggie.

Thank you, Mary. It's nice to know there is another Maggie.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A postcard view of Blacks Creek in Merrymount taken from the bridge on Southern Artery facing the Bay. Originally known as the Wollaston River, the creek's source is St. Moritz pond whose fresh water flows from the Blue Hills of West Quincy down Furnace Brook to this area where it turns brackish as it meets the tidal waters from Quincy Bay. Likewise many public places that seemingly have lost their accessibility no one would consider swimming here today, nor can anyone rent a canoe from the canoe house in the distance which burned to the ground and went out of business in the late 1940's.

Time Is Running Out

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Time is running out. You need to act quickly to get your share of money before Wal-Mart receives final approval from the City Council.

Mr. MacKinnon and Wal-Mart are paying so many people to accept their project it's hard to keep track. Let's see now...there's the $150,000 to small business, $100,000 for demolition work in Quincy Center, $1 million for traffic improvements and $150,000 for the planned Court House Square in the Hancock parking area. The Falls Condo Association is getting $600,000; Mr. MacKinnon is also paying for the attorney to negotiate the mitigation package between himself and The Falls. Oops, I almost forgot the $60,000 to senior housing for a van and the money being paid to South Landing Condominiums.

So what that Wal-Mart has a proven track record of devastating local businesses and that an Arkansas judge ruled that the chain had engaged in predatory pricing practices [U.S. News And World Report, Oct. 25, 1993]. So what that Wal-Mart uses child slave labor in underdeveloped countries [The Toronto Star, Feb. 1, 1994]. Does it really matter that Wal-Mart is fiercely anti-union, compelling the National Labor Relations Board to seek redress in the courts earlier this month? [The Boston Globe, Aug. 31, 1994] Does it matter that just recently Wal-Mart was convicted of fraud and ordered to pay over $7 million? [The Wall Street Journal, Sept. 6, 1994]

As long as we can get money, don't you agree we really shouldn't have to be concerned with stuff like ethics and morals?

So instead of writing to our City Councillors asking them to vote against Wal-Mart, put your efforts into getting something for yourself. If you think you might need a new boat or vacation home, consider asking D.J. MacKinnon and Wal-Mart what they can do for you.

The sale of the City of Quincy to Wal-Mart for $2 million seems kinda cheap to me. Maybe our officials should hold out for $4 million.

Delighted At Atlantic Development, Wal-Mart $20 Million Investment

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I have been following the stories about Wal-Mart coming to Quincy with interest. Many people have mentioned how the jobs and taxes will be good for the Quincy area economy but I would like to address an issue that has received little attention.

When people talk about Wal-Mart "jobs," they usually mean people working in the store, but there is another way that Wal-Mart provides employment. There are many companies in Massachusetts that manufacture products sold in Wal-Marts across the country. My company, Roman Research, is one of them. We manufacture Simply Whispers, a line of hypoallergenic earnings sold in over 1500 Wal-Marts.

Based in Pembroke, the Simply Whispers factory and retail outlet employs over 100 people from all over the South Shore, including disabled adults from the "Road to Responsibility" workshops. My contract with Wal-Mart over the past eight years has provided millions of dollars in wages that have gone back into the regional economy.

Additional economic benefits accrue to my supplier companies, many of whom are local businesses.

My company is not alone. There are 250 other manufacturers in Massachusetts who manufacture goods for Wal-Mart. Wal-Mart purchased more than $534 million worth of merchandise from Massachusetts manufacturers in 1993. The success of Wal-Mart has provided thousands of manufacturing jobs in New England as well as the rest of the country.

Applications For Grants

Council, 381 Hancock St., North Quincy, MA 02171. Address applications to the attention of Arthur Keough.

Applications may also be dropped off at the North Quincy branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library. As a businesswoman and member of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, I am delighted that Atlantic Development and Wal-Mart are willing to make a $20 million investment in the Quincy area. This project will not only provide 500 jobs in the stores and 200 jobs in construction, but will be good for all the companies in the area that manufacture products sold in the proposed Wal-Mart and grocery store.

True friendship never dies, even after a half-century.

This was demonstrated by a group of Wollaston natives who recently held a very special reunion after more than 50 years apart. They are members of a club known as The Out Door Girls.

The Out Door Girls first banded together in 1935 on the playground of the Wollaston Elementary School when they were all 10 years old. Over the next few years, the club planned many parties, took dancing lessons and went skiing and skating together. They all attended Central Junior High School, after which some of the girls went to Quincy High School and some to Thayer Academy in Braintree.

Beyond that, the members of the club have seen one either very seldom, or not at all, in more than 50 years.

The club members include Nancy (Brewer) Munson of Falmouth, Eleanor (Bullock) Sellar of Halifax, Carol (Furlong) Whittaker of Braintree, Marilyn (Arey) McGeehan of Dresden, N.Y.; Sally (Arthur) Brissenden of Boulder, Colo.; Marilyn (Bullock) Voorhies of Solano Beach, Calif.; Peggy (Karcher) Hoagland of Chestertown, Maryland; Louise (Lynde) Wilson of Kennebunkport, Maine; Betsey Moreton of Black Mountain, N.C.; Mary Elizabeth (Clark) Selz of San Diego, Calif. and Helen Jane (Fretz) Whittam of Pocoono Lake, Pa.

A reunion was held Aug. 26-29 at Munson's summer home in East Falmouth. All except Selz and Whittam were able to attend. Also unable to take part in the event was Carol (Lechtaler) Hills of Wollaston, the only non-member of the club who was invited.

The women had the following comments about the occasion:

Munson: "You can tell how young we were when we named ourselves, when our group was first formed, The Out Door Girls, spelled just like that....We all feel very fortunate to have had so good a circle of friends—and to have our friendships survived 50 years."

Whittaker: "There seemed to be hardly any time lapse as we all bonded together just as we did a half-century ago. We all hope to repeat this beautiful weekend."

Wilson: "Seeing all The Out Door Girls again has done more for me than anyone will realize."

Hoagland: "As survivors of wars, recessions, the space age etc., we had many memorable stories to recapture and exchange."

Voorhies: "Best of all, we found that we respect, appreciate and genuinely like each other."

Brissenden: "It became a group like we once were, not so very different even after all our varying experiences and wanderings, and this was very satisfying."

McGeehan: "These friends have told me things that I had long forgotten. They have added a new dimension to my childhood which is very emotional to me."

Sellar: "How nine women who haven't seen each other as a group for 50-plus years could mesh so beautifully with one another as though it were yesterday quite overwhelms me."

And for all of The Out Door Girls, the overwhelming truth is this: True friendship never dies—even after a half-century.

Arthur Chandler's Wollaston Theatre:

Family Entertainment At A Reasonable Price

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Q. What made you decide to buy the Wollaston Theatre?

A. I really don't know, because it wasn't something that I was looking to do; it was just something that happened. Finding out that it was available, and asking a couple of questions, you know, finding out how much it might be and this and that. It just kept on going, and we ended up with it.

Q. And that was in 1979?

A. Well, actually, that was in late 1978 when we got started with the owner. And talks with her attorneys, the purchase and sale, and the agreements and all of that sort of thing. And that was time-consuming and had to be worked out. And I guess it went through the winter, and all the paperwork. I suppose the backchecking and everything else. And it ended up that it was signed, sealed and delivered, basically, July 1, 1979.

Q. What caused your interest in the theatre? Were you a movie buff when you were younger?

A. No, I'd go to the movies once in a while, but I wasn't a movie buff, and I'm really still not a movie buff as such. You know, movies pass through me. I see them, I can remember some of them, but I'm not a movie buff who remembers every movie that went through here. There's just too much to do, and, you know, keep looking ahead, to keep recalling what's been behind.

Q. It's a nice building, and has been around for a long time. How old is it?

A. It was built in 1926, or completed and opened in 1926—Nov. 15, I think, is the real date. It was built by Mr. Edward H. Sears, who was a building contractor, and he was the contractor who built the (former) Strand Theatre in Quincy Center the year before. And I always felt that where the Strand had a balcony, he saw that there could be problems, so therefore, when he built his own theatre, he made sure everything was on one floor with no balcony. Of course, this site was made for a smaller theatre, but in those days, you know, anything over 1,000 (seats) is still a pretty good-sized theatre. And we still have almost 1,100 seats now.

So it opened in November 1926, and it opened with vaudeville, and there were some movies, I think, almost from the beginning; and they also had stage productions. Through the years, the Wollaston Business Association put on their spectaculars every once in a while. Mostly, I think, it's been movies, and the Sears family had always owned it—we're only the second owners. But it was leased out to various groups or companies who ran it as a movie theatre. And then in 1971, Mrs. Harriet W. Sears (Edward's wife) took it over and ran it herself for seven years approximately until it closed. And then she sold it to us.

But basically, it's always been a movie theatre with films. And we've had own stage productions; back in 1980 and '84, we had very long-process Amateur Talent Nights—they ran 16 and 12 weeks, each one of them. And we had a good turnout at those, and every once in a while we've had other individual stage productions. We rent them out because we don't have the size and so forth to promote and produce them.

Q. The theatre has an almost historic feel to it.

A. Yes. It's 68 years old; it's listed on the National Historic Sites. A lot of people say, "Well, why don't you twin it (make it a twin theatre)?" But the minute you twin it, you lose the Wollaston Theatre. There's a lot of nostalgia for the Wollaston Theatre as such. It's a grand old theatre; it's showing its age, yes, but it's still the Wollaston Theatre. And our plans are, for as long as we have it, it'll be run as a single-screen theatre.

We have people come back who haven't been here since the 1930s and '40s and they say, "Oh, it's just exactly the way I remember it." That's the way we'd like to keep it. We try to run it as a family, neighborhood theatre; that when you

FULL NAME: Arthur M. Chandler

ADDRESS: Wollaston

OCCUPATION: owner and operator of the Wollaston Theatre since 1979. Previously worked in civil engineering for 28 years, mainly in the Greater Boston area

EDUCATION: graduated from Bourne High School, 1948; attended Tennessee Tech before serving during the Korean War; received associate's degree in engineering (1961) and business degree (1963) from Northeastern University

come back years later it's still here, still showing the good current, family-type movies, for the most part.

Q. And the building is listed as an historic site?

A. Yes, it's listed on the National Historic Sites. That's been probably five or six years or so now. It's been quite awhile.

Q. You still offer movies for only $1 two nights a week. Why did you start having "Dollar Nights"?

A. We have "Dollar Night" on Monday and Tuesday; that started out almost like a gimmick. Because in the beginning, things were slow, having to reopen and get restarted and so forth. And we decided we'd try something like the Boston Red Sox—every so often, have "Ladies' Night" and the man would pay regular price. So that's what we did.

Then jokingly, somebody said, "Well, how do you know they're a lady?" And if you remember back in 1980, how things were in those days, you had a hard time telling the men from the women or the boys from the girls. Therefore, we gave a "Ladies' Night" card, that started out basically because you appeared to be non-male, etc., and it was only good on Tuesday.

And then this went on for a while, and the men kept looking for a "Men's Night," so we said we'd use the "Ladies' Night" card for a "Him and Her Night," and that never worked out. And yet the men are still looking for a "Men's Night." So we finally said, okay, Monday and Tuesday is "Dollar Night" for everybody. And that was fine with the men, but not for the women, because they went up one side and down the other on the men: "You male chauvinists, you couldn't stand it because we were getting a break."

But we've done very well through the years, and several times we've come close to selling out at 1,000 seats.

Q. Your regular price is how much now?

A. The regular price is $3, but I'm sure that very shortly we'll be going up, probably to $4. I mean, things just, you know, rise.

Q. But even $4 is still a great price today. How can you afford to offer such low prices?

A. Well, we do a lot of the work ourselves. Everybody here basically does a little bit of everything, so that I don't have to have an extra person to do this because this one is doing something else. Everybody does everything. I think you can do it pretty much with volume; people appreciate the low prices.

Q. You get movies a little later than the larger theatres. Is that also part of the reason the prices are lower?

A. Yes, but you have to understand the whole process. When a movie first comes out, it goes to what they call the first-run movies, which is like Quincy Center, Braintree, Dedham, etc. And they can play it for as long as they want. Then when they feel that they have reached the end of the line, they release it to the neighborhood theatres.

We all come under basically the same rental agreement, which is a percentage, but by the time it gets to us the percentage is a lot different because the total money is a lot different. You know, everybody's paying $7 and they're rushing out to give them (the other theatres) their $7; well, by the time it (the movie) gets here, most of the people have probably already seen it. So it's an evening out, and that basically is the reason for the lower pricing.

Q. Business must be particularly good in the summer.

A. Yes, and it varies from year to year, depending on the quality of the movies. We've had some spectacular years where five or six weeks out of two months we've been into the 900s (900-plus seats filled), but you don't do that every year, because of the quality of the movie. But the summer is usually the best time, because the kids are out of school; the vacations are going on, but there's always someone around.

Q. Besides owning the theatre, you serve as president of the Quincy Citizens Association. What do you see as the role of the QCA in the community?

A. Well, I think from the beginning, it's a continuing of being a voice of the people. If they've got something that's bothering them, or they want to make a point of view known or heard, they can usually do it through the QCA. We're open to the taxpayers of the city, and this is the same way it was when it first started back in 1967.

We've always tried to be a voice of the people, and whatever the issues may be, we try to let the city or whomever it may be know what the feelings are.

Q. You're also a member of the Wollaston Business Association.

A. Well, I got involved, but I really haven't been able to go to the meetings, because when they have the meetings that's when I'm starting to work at night. I'm like 12 hours out of sequence with everybody. But I do try to keep up with what's going on; I'm concerned with what's going on in our community. Because this is where our people walk and work and park and drive and the whole bit.

Q. What do you enjoy most about working and living in the city?

A. I think probably that Quincy is Quincy. I was born here, but I grew up down the Cape, and when I came out of the service my wife and I originally lived in Cambridge. But Cambridge is Cambridge; it's a metropolis down there. So we wanted to move, and I wanted to come back to Quincy. Quincy already had the schools and the sewers and the drains and all that kind of stuff, and I wanted to come back because it was a nice community, and it still is.

But I think I came back to and got involved in Quincy because Quincy is Quincy. It's not just a place where I live; Quincy is Quincy and I'd like to become part of it. I live here because I want to live here, and I want to take part in everything.

Atlantic, St. Ann's Schools Receive Conservation Grants

The Institutional Conservation Program has awarded grants to the Atlantic Middle School in North Quincy and St. Ann's School in Wollaston.

"These conservation measures will increase energy efficiency in the schools, thus leading to savings in energy dollars," said Rep. Michael Bellotti when he recently made the announcement.

Bellotti said the recent installation of these types of energy conservation measures at the McCormack Building in Boston saved Massachusetts taxpayers thousands of dollars. The savings gained by conserving energy can be used for further energy saving measures or wherever the facility needs the extra funds.

"By reducing the need for energy, the release of pollutants into the air is reduced as well," said Bellotti. "This helps make for a cleaner and healthier environment."

Up To 3,000 Volunteers Expected This Saturday Quincy Serve-a-Thon Organizer Optimistic

By LIAM FITZGERALD
He's never done anything quite like it, but Ken Highfield is optimistic the inaugural Quincy Serve-a-thon day Saturday will go on without a hitch.

"It will definitely be a learning experience," Highfield said. "Especially since this is the first one any of us have done. I really hope it will go well."

Highfield, a Quincy native, is hoping between 1,500 to 3,000 volunteers from the Quincy area will lend a hand with a number of projects throughout the city, from installing playground equipment at Kendall Park, cleaning Faxon Park and picking up at empty lots to painting and removing graffiti from public buildings.

While City Year, which attracts thousands of volunteers each fall to help Boston's poorest neighborhoods, uses its proceeds to finance its urban service corps, the Quincy Serve-a-thon will donate its proceeds to two important centers in the area—the Quincy Crisis Center and The Open Door teen outreach center in Germantown.

"Since I am involved with both places and I felt they serve a great purpose in the city, I decided to help them out," Highfield said. "That way, all the money that people gain from pledges will go to these two centers and help them continue the great work they do."

In addition to the park cleanup and restoration of public buildings, organizers plan to have volunteers going door-to-door collecting canned goods for the Protestant Social Service Bureau's food pantry and doing repairs for senior citizens.

Highfield left Quincy for Sudbury six years ago to be closer to his job at Digital Equipment Corp., which he has since left.

He had the brainstorm for the upcoming event on the way home from a City Year Serve-a-thon last year, when a feeling of accomplishment came over him because of what he did that day.

"That was a terrific day because we got so much done," Highfield said. "There were about 40 of us painting a four-story, 40-room senior citizens home in Roxbury. In that one day, we did a lot. The woman in charge was so grateful, because she said she would never have been able to get it done with the lack of funds and aid she was stuck with."

"Everyone there I felt left with a great sense of accomplishment, that they were able to help someone in need," He added. "I thought, 'Why can't the same thing happen in Quincy?' There's no reason it can't, so I decided to make it happen."

Highfield brought his idea to Mayor James Sheets last fall, who agreed to Highfield's plan to use city equipment and employees, if necessary.

According to Department of Public Works Program Manager Michael Wheelwright, the city will donate "six or seven" pieces of equipment to the cause as well as about a dozen volunteers from the DPW, Quincy Emergency Management and Quincy Traffic Department.

Wheelwright said the equipment and manpower will be donated at no cost to the city.

Highfield and the 15-member steering committee helping to plan the event are thrilled about the support he has received from Sheets and a number of local businesses, including Stop 'n' Shop, Photo Quick, Home Depot and Jillian's Balloons, that have donated over $4,000 to the cause so far.

"I can't believe the amount of support we've received from so many people in Quincy," Highfield said. "So the way we are looking at it, it's a win-win situation. The people who help out will feel good about lending a hand, while the two centers will be grateful for the funds collected from the pledges."

Highfield said the crisis center feeds 200 people on a daily basis, and the money gathered from soliciting pledges will go toward bringing more food and help to the center.

The Open Door, in its fifth year of operation, provides a drop-in center, tutoring, support groups and a place for teens to spend time together.

The day will begin at 8 a.m. at Pageant Field, where doughnuts, coffee and muffins will be available. After going through some exercises, the groups will head out with their project coordinators and work until about 3:30 p.m.

Everyone who takes part in the Serve-a-thon is invited back to Pageant Field to "celebrate the work they've done that day," Highfield said.

Will there be another Quincy Serve-a-thon next year?

"Well, it depends on how well this one goes," Highfield said. "If it goes well, I want to do one next year that involves all the places in Quincy that feed people and are involved with kids. That would be the plan—to have all the places share in the proceeds."

Board Of Governors Installed

'A New Beginning' For Quincy College

The installation of the Board of Governors this week was hailed as "an historical day" and "a new beginning" for Quincy College.

The 13-member board was administered the oath of office by Judge Warren A. Powers, associate justice of Quincy District Court at ceremonies Monday at the Common Market, West Quincy.

At the organizational meeting following the swearing in, Atty. Daniel Raymondi was elected chairman with 12 votes. Richard Hart of Hingham, abstained from voting, saying he did not think it appropriate that the vice chairman of the School Committee should be chairman of the college Board of Governors.

Hart had nominated Atty. Matthew McDonnell of Quincy who declined the nomination and backed Raymondi.

Atty. Theresa Lord of Quincy and Philip McCue of Cohasset were unanimously elected first and second vice chairmen, respectively.

Donald Young, interim president of Quincy College, was elected secretary and Miriam Shaheen, clerk.

The board decided to meet on Monday evenings, on the Monday's the City Council does not meet. The first meeting is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 26, at 7:15 p.m. in the Saville Hall boardroom at Quincy College. The meeting is open to the public.

"This is an historical day for Quincy College," Raymondi said. "It is the beginning of a new era assuring Quincy College of keeping pace with the times."

"This is extremely important," said Mayor James Sheets of the installation of the Board of Governors. "It is a new beginning for Quincy College."

Sheets cited the work done by School Committeewoman Linda Stice as chairman of the Governance Study Committee. He also thanked School Supt. Eugene Creedon and the City Council for passing the new governing board into existence, and members of the school committees down through the years.

The makeup of the Board of Governors: Dr. Joseph Nicastro, Atty. Peter O'Neill, Raymondi and Lord, all of Quincy, six year term.

John A. Farmer, Geraldine Lewis, McCue and Hart, four year term.

"IT IS A new beginning for Quincy College," said Mayor James Sheets.

City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, John J. McKenna, Jr., Rep. and School Committeeman Ronald J. Mariano, all of Quincy; Rev. Michael W. Walker of Brockton and McDonnell, of Quincy, two year term.

A governance change at the college became necessary after the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) ruled that Quincy College had outgrown its right to be governed by the School Committee. NEASC officials said the college had to establish a new governing board of trustees or risk losing its accreditation.

Sheets' home-rule petition for the establishment of the new board was approved earlier this year by the City Council, state Legislature and Gov. William Weld.

The first major issue to be addressed by the board will be the appointment of a permanent president at the college, a search that may extend into next year. Young has expressed interest in remaining at the college, but a national search to fill the position is also under consideration.

DANIEL RAYMONDI takes his oath from Judge Warren Powers as a member of the new Quincy College Board of Governors. Raymondi was chosen to serve as the board's chairman.

DONALD YOUNG, Quincy College interim president, welcomes the new board of governors and guests.

PHILIP MCCUE (seated, center) hands pen to fellow Quincy College Board of Governors member Peter O'Neill to as City Clerk Joseph Shea (standing) and board member Thomas Fabrizio look on. McCue was named second vice chairman of the board.

Board Sets Strict Guidelines On Sale Of New Beer Product

By LISA CONNELL
City License Board officials have set strict guidelines for how a new Boston-brewed Sam Adams beer product can be sold. Triple Bock, the new item, is 36 proof and contains about 17 percent alcohol, three times as much as regular brands of beer.

This product is dangerous to the uninformed person, said Quincy City Liquor Inspector Detective Sgt. Richard Laracy.

This is not to be treated as a beer but as a liqueur, said Police Chief Francis Mullen.

"Other communities have recognized this too," said Mullen. "This is not a beer product and is not to be treated like other beer products."

The guidelines set at last week's meeting stipulate:

- Do not display Sam Adams Triple Bock near or around regular beer
- do not display or sell it in a refrigerated state
- a sign, written in one inch letters, must be posted near Triple Bock product that states "This is not a regular beer product."

The suggested retail price per bottle is $4 or about $100 a case.

All those who plan to carry this item and have any questions concerning the board's ruling, are asked to contact Quincy Police Liquor Inspector Det. Sgt. Richard Laracy.

According to Laracy, there is no state law that regulates the alcohol content or percentage of alcohol in beers sold and served in bars and clubs throughout the commonwealth.

Jackson and Company of Boston, promoter of Triple Bock and all of the beer products that entrepreneur Jim Koch produces, sees this as an upscale, high-end product, one that for reasons of taste and price will not appeal to the group that the board fears may get itself into trouble.

The state ABCC says the License Board in Quincy and in other cities and towns throughout the commonwealth, is perfectly within its rights to set guidelines relating to the sale of Triple Bock and other alcohol products.

"This is not a thirst-quenching, carbonated product," said Sally Jackson, principal of the public relations firm that markets all Sam Adams products.

Jackson explained the concept behind Triple Bock. "It's an after-dinner or dessert beer. This product is designed to stretch peoples' thinking about beer and expand it to the high end; it will be as fine a beer as any wine or cognac," she said.

Jackson feels the manufacturer's concept of the product is already being misunderstood.

"This is not an attempt [by Koch] to create a high alcohol beer," said Jackson. "Triple Bock is not being marketed to the underage drinker or the quantity drinker. None of our products are created to appeal to this market."

The packaging and the price lend themselves to an upscale market as well.

The thick, slightly sweet beverage, will be packaged in a blue bottle with 24-karat gold lettering.

Aged in oak whiskey barrels for four months, Triple Bock uses the ingredients found in all beers- barley, hops, water and yeast- but in much larger quantities, especially in the amount of hops used in the brewing process. This, a touch of maple syrup and two types of yeast, account for its potency.

School Zone Task Force Established In North Quincy

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers announces the establishment of a new School Zone Task Force in North Quincy.

Ayers said the task force has been formed to review and recommend safety options for the area that will be submitted for approval to Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon and the Quincy Traffic Commission.

"The mission of the School Zone Task Force is to develop different alternatives to make school zone safety a priority," he said.

Ayers noted that faded stop signs have been replaced, "No Parking" signs have been added, pedestrian crosswalks have been repainted and funding is being explored for additional traffic light in the area.

"Presently, we are reviewing a proposal for the placement of a crossing guard at the intersection of Faxon Road and Hollis Avenue to determine if one is warranted," he added.

Ayers said the task force has reviewed a previously-received suggestion from the Traffic Commission of making Faxon Road a one-way street from Glover Avenue to Billings Road during school pick up times (7:30 to 8:30 a.m. and 2 to 3 p.m. on school days only). That option is being implemented this week, Sept. 19-23 on a trial basis to provide documentation of its effectiveness.

Ayers added that the plan was developed by Gillon with support from the School Department and the Traffic Division. He also said he will inform his constituents of any further action taken.

North Visits Falmouth Friday

Nee's Three TDs Power Raiders, 22-8

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

If you were among the 400-plus North Quincy supporters who made the trip to Stoughton for last Friday's football game, you were treated to a fantastic second half show as the Red Raiders opened the season with a 22-8 victory.

North will play Friday at Falmouth, a team which opened the season with a 12-6 win against Dennis-Yarmouth. The Raiders won last year's meeting 40-16 and are 3-1 against the Clippers since 1990.

When North had trouble getting things together in the first half against Stoughton and headed to the locker room trailing, 8-0, head coach Ken McPhee had some changes to make.

"We made some changes in our offensive blocking in the second half," said the coach after the game. "They (Stoughton) were doing things to us in the first half and we had to make some adjustments."

Shawn Nee was the overall star for North. His totals included 15 carries for 148 yards, four catches for 37 yards, three touchdowns (including a 53-yarder on the first play from scrimmage in the second half), two extra points and three tackles on defense.

"Derek Epps made a great block," said Nee, commenting on his long touchdown run. "We're a second half team and we gave it to them."

Brian Walsh returned the opening kickoff of the second half to the 47 yard line to set up Nee's first touchdown. A Sean Dolbear pass to Eric Zimmerman for two points tied the score at 8-8.

The Raiders played excellent defense in the second half, allowing the Black Knights only 22 yards and one first down.

"They were more comfortable in the second half," said defensive coordinator Earl Metzler. "They were happy with their assignments and were able to play a bit more reckless."

The Raiders took advantage of poor Stoughton ball handling on fourth down which allowed them to get great field position in the third quarter, which they turned into a touchdown. With the ball on the Black Knight 24 yard line, Nee ran for 9 and then 15 yards for the score. His extra point kick gave North their first lead of the game at 15-8.

After the Red Raider defense held Stoughton at bay in the fourth quarter, North took the ball for a one-play, 28-yard drive with Nee scoring with 1:19 to play. He kicked the final point to give North the 22-8 win.

Raider quarterback Dolbear, in his first varsity start, completed 6 of 14 passes for 47 yards. Four of those passes were completed to Nee.

Other players who contributed to the offense were Zimmerman, Walsh, Epps (one catch for 5 yards), Keith Martinson, Glen Peterson (six carries for 21 yards), Kenny Burke and Jamie Karvelis.

Defensively Toby Odom led the team with five tackles, followed by Fernandez and Walsh with four each. Others who made defensive contributions were Epps, Fred Perry, Tim Zaniboni, Bob Ragusa, Chris Ritchie, Charlie Plaskasovitis and Joe Renzi.

Falmouth At A Glance

Record: 1-0, beat Dennis-Yarmouth, 12-6, last week on the road. 2-7-1 last season; 1-6-1 and tied for seventh in OCL.

Coach: Ed Winslow (20th season, 106-76-10).

Previous Meeting: North Quincy won, 40-16. Shawn Nee ran for 215 yards to pace the win.

Offense: Falmouth has loads of talent in the backfield but the question is whether they'll have the horses up front. Mike Andrews has started three years as a defensive back and will now be called upon to handle the chores at QB. Sophomore running back Willie Ford (190 pounds) will also be a force.

Defense: Again, the backfield is the most experienced group. If NQ's Dave Carney and his linemates can overpower a relatively weak Falmouth front, Nee could have another big day against the Clippers.

Player to watch: Andrews had both Falmouth TDs in last week's win.

Stoughton's only touchdown came with 5:02 left in the half, when Jay

The game was scoreless in the third quarter when Apaches defensive lineman Chris Carthas sacked the Manets in the end zone for a safety. They took the 2-0 lead into the fourth.

Early in the final quarter, Apaches quarterback Chris Bregoli went 5 yards around the left end for a touchdown. He then hit Frank McNamara for a two-point conversion which gave North Quincy a 10-0 lead.

Bregoli closed out the scoring late in the quarter when connected with Matt O'Day for a 60-yard touchdown pass. The conversion attempt failed.

Other Apaches who played well on offense were Chris Licciardi, Pat Dolbear and Corey Awed. The offensive line also did a great job blocking, particularly Will Tracey and Mike Reidy. Carthas, Bregoli, Fred Elfman and Devin O'Brien helped stifle the Manets' offense.

The Manets' defense was also impressive. On two different occasions they made amazing goal-line stands. The Apaches had a first-and-goal from the 2-yard line and a first-and-goal from the 4 but were unable to capitalize on either. Linebackers John Katsarikas and Mike Chenette were defensive keys. QB/DB Dan Kelly also played well.

In Sunday's late game, the Quincy Point Panthers (1-1) beat the West Quincy Elks (0-2), 20-14.

Jonathon Brillo of the Panthers opened the scoring in dazzling fashion when he raced 65 yards for a touchdown on the game's third play from scrimmage. He also recorded the two-point conversion.

Tom Daley picked a loose ball to set up another score for the Panthers. Facing a third-and-five situation with the ball on the Elks' 20, Brillo took the pitch from QB Jeremy Theberge and raced in for six. The conversion was no good and Point took the 14-0 lead into the half.

The winning club added another score in the second half to take a 20-0 lead but had to fend off a furious comeback bid by the West Quincy boys.

Jason Oriola and Mike Clancy were the keys to the Elks' effort which brought them to within one TD of tying the contest. The Panthers had several defensive standouts including Larry Antonellis, Michael Ramponi, Sean Burke and James Bennett.

In opening week action in the QYFL, the Apaches beat the Panthers, 6-0, thanks to a 25-yard touchdown run by Bregoli.

The Manets topped the Elks.

Showdown With B-R At Home Friday

Brown, Palaza Spark Presidents, 13-0

By KERRY BYRNE
Woody Hayes would have smiled upon the Quincy High football team Saturday at Marshfield.

The Presidents pounded out a methodical 13-0 non-league win over the Marshfield Rams in the opener for both teams. They dominated both sides of the line of scrimmage behind the crushing runs of tailback Sam Brown and the destructive defensive play of tackle Butch Palaza. Quincy also put the ball in the air only twice - just the type of attack that would make the legendary Ohio State coach happy.

The Presidents will look to do the same Friday at 7 p.m. when they host Bridgewater-Raynham in their home opener and the first Old Colony League match for both teams. B-R is a perennial OCL power and Quincy head coach Jack Raymer said the game is the "biggest we've played in the five years since we joined the Old Colony League. A win gives us a shot at the league title."

Against Marshfield, Quincy set the tone on their first possession when they went 95 yards for a touchdown on 13 consecutive running plays. "High school teams just don't do that," said Quincy offensive coordinator Bob Noble, a man whose job has become infinitely easier under his new offensive scheme called "Give it to Sam."

Sam, 230-pound tailback Brown that is, was impressive throughout the game. On that first drive he carried the ball 10 times for 74 yards and scored on a 4-yard run (Greg Santoro kicked the extra point). He cracked the 100-yard barrier on Quincy's second possession and by halftime the massive runner had 147 yards on 19 attempts, an average of 7.7 yards per carry.

Quincy scored their other TD late in the second quarter when they took over on the Marshfield 30. Three plays of Brown, Brown, Brown (17, 17 and 5 yards) put the ball in the end zone. The two-point conversion effort failed. Brown finished the game with 197 yards on 32 carries.

"I expected to do well," said Brown after the game. "The pressure was on me to do the job and my offensive line was great."

There is no question that linemen Jeff Burrell, Pete Kolsen, Matt Strauchon, Mike Feeley and Palaza were the dominant forces in the game.

Their job in the trenches also helped ease quarterback Mark Glynn into his unexpected leadership role. The sophomore was called upon to throw the ball only twice. Late in the first half he connected with Mike Sheffer for a 34-yard gain that was nullified by a penalty. His second half attempt fell incomplete.

"I was proud of our offensive line," said Raymer. "They controlled the ball all day. The passing game was there, we just didn't use it."

If Brown was the man on offense, it was Palaza, a two-year starter on the offensive line, who made a name for himself in his first varsity game on defense. The 6-foot-4-inch, 275-pound senior tackle made four tackles for losses, including three quarterback sacks.

Palaza jokingly expres-

Bridgewater-Raynham At A Glance

Record: 1-0, beat Canton, 32-7, last week at Canton. 7-3 last season; 6-2 and tied for second in the OCL.

Coach: Dan Buron (Second season, 8-3).

Previous Meeting: Quincy jumped to an early 14-0 lead last year, before falling apart late in the first half and losing, 27-14.

Offense: B-R traditionally ran the wishbone but switched to the I-formation under Buron last season. They will throw the ball more this season, especially against Quincy with its inexperienced secondary.

Defense: Quincy will again look to use the ground game, this time against a DL that has little experience but does have size. Two-hundred-pound defensive back Steve Medeiros had nine INTs last season. QB-DB Jeff Dimarzio had a pick last season against Quincy.

Player to watch: RB Matt Pauline, two rushing TDs last week. Three TDs against Quincy last year.

sed disappointment with the coaching staff after the game: "I feel deprived that they kept me off defense until senior year," he said.

Palaza was not the only one to run roughshod over the Marshfield offense. Senior end Mike Flagg was in on one sack with Feeley and linebacker Bill Dunn. He made another tackle for an 8-yard loss, forced one fumble and recovered another. Linemen John Moss and Jay Fennelly and linebackers Jason Bennett and Ed Anderson also made things a living hell for the Marshfield offense. The President defense made eight stops for losses and Marshfield quarterback Mike Morino was leveled on nearly every pass attempt.

At halftime the Rams had a grand total of -4 yards of offense. A second half explosion gave them 23 yards in the contest. They recorded just three first downs and made two short-lived trips into Quincy territory.

Defensive backs Chris McArdle, Matt Miller, Terry Bowman, Santoro and Sheffer limited Morino to a 4 for 10 passing day.

Miller led Quincy with four unassisted tackles.

"We replaced nine players on defense this year," said Raymer. "We were really concerned about the D today but they came to play. We stopped a tough Wing-T offense to defend against."

Raymer, Noble and defensive coordinator Bob Keuther know things will not be so easy Friday night when they play a tough Bridgewater-Raynham team.

Despite the impressive first-half performance against Marshfield, Quincy looked merely mortal in the second half. The coaches know it will take a complete four-quarter effort if they are to knock off an opponent that buried Canton last week, 32-7.

Nearly 1000 Participate In Degan Road Race

By ROBERT BOSWORTH
Stephen Warren of Stoughton and James Lencki of Quincy were the overall winners in the second annual U.S. Marshal William F. Degan Memorial Road Race Sunday in Quincy.

Warren won the open division in the 10K race crossing the finish line at 33:52, two seconds ahead of John Saville of Brockton. Mike Drummy of Malden was third with a time of 34:35.

In the 5K race, the 17-year-old Lencki cut the tape in 17:23, one full minute ahead of his nearest competitor. John Mulker of West Roxbury was second (18:23) and Joseph Cecil of Somerville third (18:25).

Tracey Corrigan of Weymouth and Denise Kane-Orton of North Weymouth were the top female runners in the 10K and 5K races respectively.

The annual race, founded in memory of North Quincy native Bill Degan who was tragically killed in the line of duty as a U.S. marshal in 1992, attracted nearly 1000 runners and walkers. Organizers hope the race will become the state's third largest to only the Boston Marathon and Falmouth Road Race over the next 5 to 10 years.

The 10K and 5K races both began and ended at Veterans' Memorial Stadium in Quincy. Conditions were ideal as participants traveled the course under dry, sunny conditions.

A number of well-known people ran in the races, including Gov. William Weld, U.S. Senate candidate Mitt Romney, former Sen. Paul Harold, Rep. Michael Bellotti, City Councillors Tim Cahill and Bruce Ayers and Quincy High Principal Lloyd Hill. Members of the Degan family also participated.

Weld joined Mayor James Sheets at the starting line. They each thanked the participants for remembering Bill Degan.

"If Bill Degan were here, he'd win this race," Weld told the runners moments before the start. Then, the governor added, "I'm sure he's looking down on all of you and in that respect, he's already won."

Before Sheets fired the starting gun, Rev. Cornelius Heery, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, blessed the event.

Organizer Dan Stock said the event will raise approximately $9,000 for the Quincy D.A.R.E. drug-prevention program and local U.S. Marine Corps charities such as Toys for Tots.

Other winners in the 10K race were:

Male:

•Junior Division 16 and under: Gary Moore of Scituate, 41:27.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

The rush is on.

Running backs Shawn Nee of North Quincy and Sam Brown of Quincy both had outstanding opening day efforts on the gridiron and the two could be locked in a heated battle for the Old Colony League rushing title throughout the season.

Brown had the biggest day in terms of yards, 197 to 148, but Nee had the better average per carry, 9.9 to 6.1. The numbers are a solid reflection of the different running styles the young men bring to the field. Brown is a workhorse, Nee a thoroughbred. Brown goes 5 yards, 8 yards, 6 yards, 10 yards. Nee goes 2 yards, 4 yards, 3 yards, 50 yards.

Brown is pounding, punishing, bulldozing. Nee is slashing, cutting, hi-stepping.

Brown won't dazzle you with speed or fancy footwork, but heaven help anyone who stands in his way. Nee won't barrel over too many 250-pound defensive linemen but he will leave them standing befuddled, jock strap in hand.

Brown snarls and says "here I come, try and stop me." Nee smirks as he says "there I go, try and catch me."

Regardless of the style, the results are the same. Brown will run well, Nee will run well. But the question is this: Who will have run farthest by season's end?

We may not know until about high noon on Nov. 24.

That couldn't have been him running a one-pass attack against Marshfield last week. No way. I think someone has kidnapped Raymer and put him in charge of the New England Patriots while Bill Parcells is stalking the sideline for Quincy. Or maybe their brains were switched by aliens at an off-season football clinic when they weren't looking.

It's only logical. Raymer earned his Riverboat Gambler moniker due to an offensive strategy that resembled sandlot football. "Third-and-inches? How 'bout the hook & lateral?" His track record shows that he can barely call a play without the word pass coming out of his mouth. But last week Quincy threw the ball just once.

Parcells, on the other hand, built Super Bowl champions around the ground game. Ten seconds left and we're trailing by six with 80 yards to go? How 'bout Joe Morris off tackle! But suddenly quarterback Drew Bledsoe is putting the ball in the air 50 times per game.

Seeing that was Raymer roaming the sidelines during Quincy's win over Marshfield, and that was Parcells calling the shots during New England's win at Cincinnati, the kidnapping theory holds no water.

However, any sane person realizes that extraterrestrials have the ability to switch brains. For beings that can reach Earth from 2 million light-years away, brain switching is merely a trivial pursuit. And we all know Quincy is a hot-bed of alien sightings and visitations. One of them told me they come to Quincy for the exciting downtown nightlife, the great beaches and the half-price appetizers at Cronin's Public House during Monday Night Football.

But before you buy into the stunningly clear logic of my Raymer-Parcells-off-season-alien-brain-switching theory, consider this one other option: isn't it funny that you never see Parcells and Raymer in the same place?

Hmmm....

While on the subject of football, how do you feel about Turkey Day? We want to know.

As part of our Thanksgiving football preview issue, we'll be highlighting some of your fondest memories of the greatest day in high school sports. Whether you were a butterfly-filled player, jubilant cheerleader or proud parent, what is it you remember most about the Quincy-North Quincy Turkey Day game?

Was it the first time you ran out of the locker room as a sophomore and laid your eyes upon the 10,000 people who ringed the stadium? Was it the game-winning TD you scored to send the hated rival home with the big L? Was it slugging down beers at Pageant Field before the game at 8:30 in the morning with a bunch of scraggly louts you call your friends?

Whatever it is, send me a note and we'll include it in our Turkey Day preview issue. All letter should be sent to The Quincy Sun, c/o Kerry Byrne, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy, Ma. 02169. Any questions should be directed to me a 471-3100.

$65 Million In State

Mortgage Funds Now Available

Rep. Michael Bellotti announces that $65 million in home ownership resources are now available.

The funds, which are expected to benefit approximately 650 households, can be accessed through the Massachusetts Housing Finance Authority (MHFA).

"This program is a great opportunity for people to realize their dream of home ownership," said Bellotti. "Considering the reduced housing prices across the state coupled with the program's low interest rate, this is the right time for low and moderate income families to buy a home."

Participating lenders are already accepting applications for the mortgages which will be made available at the fixed, 30-year interest rate of 6.99 percent. In addition to the low interest rate the program requires a minimum down payment of only 5 percent of the home's selling price.

MHFA has stated that the funds will be accessible only to parties who have already signed a purchase and sale agreement, but cautioned prospective buyers not to rush to sign an agreement because there will be another offering late this year, according to Bellotti.

MHFA has assisted more than 28,000 families with their various programs since its inception in 1979. During this time, it has channeled more than $1.6 billion in private sector investments into Massachusetts cities and towns.

For more information, call Bellotti's office at 722-2210 or MHFA's consumer line at 451-2766.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Thank God for memory, that most gracious artist, who softens the hard things in our life, and makes more beautiful the beautiful ones.

As we grow older memory becomes a treasure storehouse.

The high lights of our years are there... vivid pictures of beauties appreciated. The heart-warming reminiscences of friends we've known... The tender thoughts of family and events that have happened... The satisfaction of recalling work well done... The feeling that we have meant something to those who meant so much to us... highlights stored in memory's treasure house to be recalled at will to encourage and sustain us whenever we need them...

"Memory is a capricious and arbitrary creature. You never can tell what pebble she will pick up from the shore of life to keep among her treasures, or what inconspicuous flower of the field she will preserve as the symbol of 'thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears'... And yet I do not doubt that the most important things are always the best remembered" - Henry Van Dyke

Crime Watch

How To Avoid Becoming An Attacker's Victim

- Be alert for the unexpected.
 - While you are walking, keep your mind on what is going on around you.
- Don't take unnecessary chances.
 - Walk confidently, know where you are going.
 - Wherever possible, walk with another person.
 - Stay near people. Walking in deserted areas only invites trouble.
 - Stay in well-lit areas.
 - Avoid shortcuts.
- If you are followed:
 - Cross the street.
 - Reverse direction.
- If you are still followed:
 - Go to a business that is open and call the police.
 - In residential areas, go to a home and ask for help.
 - Attract attention. Yell, scream, flag down a passing car. You may also carry a whistle, blow it to attract attention.
 - Act suspicious. Keep looking back at the person following you to let that person know you can't be taken by surprise. Never confront the individual.
- If you are attacked:
 - Yell and scream to attract attention and scare the attacker off.
 - Swing an umbrella or briefcase, or anything you have in your hand, at the attacker's head.
 - Make a scene. Take your attacker by surprise.
 - Jab the attacker with your elbow.
 - Bite him hard.
 - Twist your body to break free from the attacker's hold.
 - Scratch at his face with your fingernails.
 - Bend the attacker's fingers back.
 - Kick the attacker in the shin area.
 - Knee the attacker in the groin.
 - Any of the above methods may cause the attacker to release you and give you a chance to get away from him.
- Get a description of your attacker. Try to remember things such as:
 - Height
 - Weight
 - Approximate age
 - Skin tone
 - Hair color
 - Color of eyes
 - Color and type of clothing
 - Any jewelry he may be wearing.
 - Any scars, tattoos or disabilities
 - Odors you may detect about his person, such as alcohol, drugs, cologne.
- Anything that you may have been suspicious of prior to the attack, a motor vehicle that may have passed you several times or someone who may have been watching you.
 - Anything the attacker may say to you. If he spoke in an accent.
 - A description of any weapon used.
- Should I carry a weapon?

We do not believe that you should carry a weapon unless you are thoroughly trained in its use and, if applicable, are licensed to carry it.

Two thoughts to remember:

 - Anything you use as a weapon can be taken from you and be used against you.
 - You might be better off using the time it would take getting the weapon out, to get out of the situation or attract attention.
- What about self-defense training?

Karate, judo and other martial arts can improve your self-defense skills, but you must remember that it takes years of practice to become good at these skills.
- What if I'm not being physically attacked, but I am being robbed?
 - If you do not feel that you are in physical danger we suggest that you comply with the robber's demands. Give him whatever he wants. Chances are he will leave the area without harming you.

very satisfied with his impressive showing, particularly in the new precincts of the district.

For example, in Norwell's three precincts in the district, Morrissey had 444 votes to Walsh's 156. Norwell was drawn into the district last year. The senator also piled up big vote totals to sweep the district.

In Braintree, Walsh's hometown, Morrissey ran about 60 to 40 percent ahead of his challenger. In Holbrook's four precincts, Morrissey had 807 votes to Walsh's 222.

In coasting to victory, Morrissey polled 8,183 votes in Quincy compared to Walsh's 2,066.

Morrissey attributed his victory to hard work, experience as a state legislator, and a solid campaign organization.

"I like to think it's my experience as a legislator and that people realize I know how to get things done and that I speak out on issues. I have a history of standing up for the people who elect me on Beacon Hill.

"I also think we ran a positive campaign. We talked about the issues and people were able to see my record and see the work that I've done."

Romney swamped John R. Lakin in Quincy 2,371 to 372 votes according to unofficial figures at press time late Tuesday night.

Roosevelt piled up 4,615 votes in Quincy to 2,179 for Michael J. Barrett and 1,953 for George J. Bachrach.

Marc D. Draisen, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, took Quincy with 3,773 votes to 3,486 for Robert K. Massie but the latter was leading in the state at press time.

William F. Galvin, Democratic candidate for Secretary of State won Quincy and the state. His Quincy vote was 6,571 to 2,182 for Augusto F. Grace.

House Minority Leader Peter Forman, a Republican candidate for Secretary of State, carried Quincy over Arthur Chase, 1,561 to 844. Chase, however, was the statewide leader at press time.

Studds turned back Ham's challenge, 6,622 to 3,158.

Matthias J. Mulvey, Quincy city building inspector and a Weymouth resident, carried that town and Quincy in the four-man race for the Democratic County Commissioner nomination.

But the returns throughout Norfolk County were incomplete at The Sun's press time.

The vote in Quincy was 3,293 for Mulvey, Peter H. Collins of Milton 3,241; Thomas J. Reynolds of Braintree 1806; and 669 for Edward Milano of Stoughton.

The winner of that primary will meet Republican incumbent Bruce Olsen of Stoughton in November. Olsen, who was unopposed in the primary, polled 1906 votes in Quincy. Kennedy had 6,787 votes but 4,112 blanks in Quincy.

Register of Deeds Barry Hannon of Braintree also had no Democratic opposition and no Republican challenger in November, assuring him of re-election. He polled 7422 votes in Quincy unofficially.

Norfolk County Clerk of Courts Nicholas Barbadoro, former long-time Quincy resident now living in Braintree, was unopposed in the Democratic primary but will face Republican Michael Mushnick of Millis in November. Barbadoro had 7,134 votes in Quincy to Mushnick's 1,806.

Dist. Atty. William Delahunt of Quincy is virtually re-elected. He had no Democratic opponent in the primary and has no Republican contender in November. Delahunt got 8,282 votes in Quincy.

Two of Quincy's three state representatives will be able to sit out the final election in November unless write-in or sticker candidates appear on the scene.

Michael Bellotti, First Norfolk District, and Ronald Mariano, Third Norfolk District, were unopposed in the Democratic primary and there were no Republican candidates.

Rep. Stephen Tobin, Second Norfolk District, faced no Democratic challenge in the primary. Stephen Williams was unopposed on the Republican side. They will square off in November.

In the governor's council race, John Kerrigan of Quincy won his hometown with 6,270. Incumbent Christopher Iannella had 3,282 votes in Quincy.

YOU AUTO KNOW

STEERING CLEAR OF TORQUE STEER

When a car drifts to one side upon acceleration, then drifts to the other upon deceleration, the problem is generally referred to as torque steer. Cars that exhibit this tendency from the day that they are new may have a design flaw that may never be corrected. However, if the problem develops over time, it may be corrected by turning attention to the engine stabilizers. These are brackets that keep the engine from twisting either too far forward or too far to the rear when power is applied in a front-wheel-drive car. Either the rubber bushings on the engine stabilizers are worn or the rubber motor mounts that hold the engine and transaxle assembly in place might be worn or broken. If so, they must be replaced.

HINT: Torque steer may also be caused by collisions in which the engine/transaxle alignment is altered.

Our technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO take a personal interest in our customers and in their auto care problems. Make us your first stop and chances are you will never choose to go elsewhere. Service is our policy. Whether you are having a major problem with your vehicle or simply want us to check it for you, rely on us. If you are not yet familiar with us, stop by 258 Quincy Ave., E. To Help Decide Winner Of Governor's Council Race Kerrigan-Iannella Recount Here Saturday

By ROBERT BOSWORTH
As part of a district-wide recount, the Quincy Board of Registrars will count ballots by hand Saturday to help determine the winner of last week's Governor's Council contest in the fourth district.

On Monday, incumbent Christopher Iannella claimed victory in the Democratic primary, but challenger John Kerrigan of Quincy demanded a recount.

According to City Clerk and Board Chairman Joseph Shea, the recount will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday in the second floor conference room City Hall annex. "I am hopeful we can get it (the recount) done on Saturday. We'll go until we're done, Shea said Tuesday.

Preliminary results showed Iannella, 41, trailing Kerrigan by 34 votes in the district race which involves 17 communities including Quincy. However, unofficial results with the Secretary of State's Election Division Monday showed Iannella with 30,861 votes to Kerrigan's 30,789, a margin of 72 votes.

Kerrigan filed for a district-wide recount yesterday. He submitted petitions in Boston and Quincy with approximately 500 signatures, according to Quincy City Clerk Joseph Shea. About half of those signatures, 246, were Quincy voters, Shea said.

Iannella's apparent victory margin falls within the 0.5 percent required for a recount. The recount must be done by Monday according to state law, Shea said.

In Quincy, Shea said the recount will cost the city between $5,000 and $7,000. He said he expects the recount to take "at least a day, maybe two."

According to the city's election office, Kerrigan defeated Iannella in Quincy, 6,009 to 3,147, a margin of 2,862 votes. There were 1,313 blanks in the contest.

Shea said he does not anticipate a significant change in the totals after 8 Councillors Now In Support Council To Give Wal-Mart O.K.

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The City Council will approve the proposed Granite Center shopping center in Quincy Point, which would include a Wal-Mart store, when it votes on the matter tonight (Thursday).

The project needs only one more council vote to be passed unanimously.

At press time, Councillor Joseph LaRaia and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said they will vote in favor of the project, which guarantees its success by eliminating the possibility of any legal challenge to the final vote. Their votes brought the total number of councillors who support the project to eight.

Only six of nine City Council votes are necessary for the project to pass. Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson is the only remaining councillor to not publicly state how he will vote on the matter, although he has said he is leaning in favor.

LaRaia said he scrutinized the project as closely as possible, but ultimately decided that the developer of the project, Atlantic Development Corp. of Hingham, has addressed every issue related to the proposed shopping center.

"They seem to have covered just about everything under the sun," he said. "Everything down the line has been addressed."

LaRaia added that he has tried to look at the project's overall impact on the community, including the effect on nearby residents, business owners and the environment. Based on his research, he said, the positives outweigh the negatives.

"At this point, I have very little reason not to support it," he said.

Ayers said he also will support the project, provided that the developer meets all requirements related to area traffic. He noted that he based his decision on the information he has received on the proposed shopping center and the fact that the Quincy Planning Board has voted to support the project.

Council President Michael Cheney and Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan both said Tuesday morning they will vote in favor of the project. Others who have already said the same include Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, whose ward includes the site; Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio and Councillor Timothy Cahill.

Cheney, who announced his intentions at a press conference, said Atlantic Development has met all necessary zoning requirements as well as dealt with all other issues related to the project such as noise, traffic and retail concerns.

"I have taken this project and turned it inside and out and shaken it to find any flaws," said Cheney. "Every issue that has come up has been addressed more than adequately. I give this project 100 percent unconditional support."

Cheney added that the special permit he was drafting regarding the project was still undergoing minor "final changes" Tuesday and would not be completed until Wednesday morning. However, that was just a formality of "crossing the T's and dotting the I's," he said.

Phelan said he too will support the proposed shopping center because the project has received approval from all necessary boards. Phelan specifically singled out the Planning Board, which he said did an "excellent job" in reviewing the project before passing it on to the City Council for consideration.

"I would say I'm going to vote in favor," he said.

Because the number of favorable votes now total eight, there is no way the votes of Cahill and DeCristofaro can be challenged in court. City Solicitor Stephen McGrath has suggested in the past that because the two missed a public hearing on the project, the possibility existed that their votes could be legally challenged if the final vote on the project were a close

Search Begins For Interim College President

The new Quincy College Board of Governors has begun a search for a new interim college president.

The board voted unanimously to find an interim president, who will run the college for one year, at its first meeting Monday night. The two-year school is presently headed by Interim College President Donald Young.

Board member Ronald Mariano introduced the measure to search for an interim president. Although officials have said in the past that a permanent president should be hired as quickly as possible, Mariano said appointing an interim president will give the 13-member board time to work together as a group and familiarize itself with other college matters before committing on a matter as important as the presidency.

The board began accepting resumes and applications for the interim position Tuesday and will continue to do so through Oct. 24.

Board Chairman Daniel Raymonds said the process outlined by Mariano calls for a five-member screening team to meet Oct. 24 to Nov. 4 to select five candidates to be interviewed by the full board of governors.

The screening team will include three board members appointed by the chairman—Mariano, Theresa Lord and Philip McCue. The others will be a member of the faculty senate, appointed by the president of the Quincy Education Association; and one member of the professional staff, chosen by the president of their bargaining unit.

The five candidates will

Ayers Seeking Input From School, Traffic Officials On Chain's License Request

By LISA CONNELL
Until he hears from school officials and City Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon as to how a proposed fast food restaurant will impact the quality of life for students and home owners in the North Quincy area, Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers will ask License Board officials to put on hold a request from D'Angelo's/Pizza Hut for a common virtuals proximity to North Quincy High School.

The nationally known pizza and sandwich shop wants to build a restaurant at the site of the former Merit gasoline shop, directly next to North Quincy High School on Hancock St.

At a neighborhood meeting held last Thursday evening, Ayers said residents requested that the city purchase the land by eminent domain because of its close

Board Puts Hold On Requests For Entertainment Dates

By LISA CONNELL
License Board officials voted Tuesday to place on file a request by The Varsity Club for four one-day entertainment licenses, allowing club owner Adam Kessler the chance to re-apply for the request when sentiment among board members and area residents may be more favorable towards Kessler's desire to "grow his business."

The action puts Kessler's request in a holding position.

Kessler's proposal for musical entertainment at the 33 Independence Ave. met with opposition from area residents whose concerns have more to do with alleged incidences of fighting and loud noise outside the building than with the activities inside the club itself.

He is seeking the license for four dates: Oct. 16, Oct. 23, Nov. 20 and Dec. 29.

License Board Vice Chairman and Building Inspector Mathias Mulvey explained to Kessler and his business partner, Amy Finocchiaro, that if the board votes on the request and votes against it, the vote cannot be acted upon again. "If the vote is negative, then it's done."

"It sounds like no one wants to support this thing on the board," said Kessler.

"That's right," said Fire Chief Thomas Gorman.

"I'm not prepared to vote for something if the neighborhood doesn't want it. I think the board feels the same way," said Mulvey.

Kessler can file his request for the entertainment licenses with the License Board again, and be up before the board in two or three weeks.

Police Chief Francis Mullen suggested to Kessler and Finocchiaro that they sit down with Fabrizio and neighborhood residents to see if "we can work something out."

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio said while Kessler "does do a good job inside" and that there have been little or no problems with regard to the club's operations, his main concern about the club's request was that it might lead to "something that we may have to take back in the future; it'll be more difficult then."

Fabrizio, who has been coming before the License Board since January, 1990, with concerns about the Varsity Club, said, "it's not to Adam Kessler that I address these remarks but to the whole concept; ...this is opening a can of worms and may lead to problems as experienced at the site before [Kessler became manager]."

Fabrizio said Kessler's entertainment plans are not consistent with "the continuation of the operation" as he described to neighborhood residents last January when he became club manager.

"I think my business should be allowed to grow. I'm asking for something that's going to be for three months," said Kessler.

SORTING OUT THE FAT

"No Cholesterol!" promises the label on the peanut butter jar. Does that mean that someone trying to cut down on dietary fat can load up on the gooey brown stuff? Absolutely not. Cholesterol is a waxy substance that is manufactured naturally in a person's liver. It is also found in animal products such as meat, eggs and butter. Fat, which is totally different from cholesterol, is a high-calorie, greasy substance found both in animal and some vegetable products. When you eat fatty foods, your body revs up its cholesterol production to help process the incoming fat. While some types of dietary fats are better for you than others, too much of any kind of fat in the diet is a leading cause of high blood cholesterol.

P.S. Lowering your blood cholesterol reduces your risk of having a heart attack or stroke.

To many, a low-fat diet sounds healthy—but they fear they can eat no more of their favorite foods. You'd be surprised what a difference slight modifications to your diet can make in your overall health. For more information, visit COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy or call myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550. Office hours by appointment. Blanks And Dandelions

Is Ted Kennedy really in trouble? The blanks he drew in the Quincy vote in last week's primary election are seen by many observers as another indicator, in addition to recent polls, that he is. But that may not be an accurate reading.

Those "political dandelions" beginning to sprout on front lawns in town could be a better barometer forecasting dark clouds for Kennedy in November.

The "dandelions" are those Mitt Romney signs that are appearing more and more in front of homes around town.

"I've never seen anything like it," says former state Senator Paul Harold. "You just don't see political signs on front lawns for candidates running for as high an office as U.S. Senate."

Front lawns, he says, are where you expect to find signs for local candidates—state senate, state representative, county commissioner in state elections and mayor, city councillor and school committee in city elections.

"The U.S. Senate fights are not usually fought at the grass roots level but on TV," Harold says.

But the signs are sprouting in front of homes on strategic main streets such as Southern Artery, Sea St., Quincy Shore Drive, Newport Ave. and are beginning to show up on side streets.

Harold is a Democrat so you know where his allegiance is. But U.S. Senate campaign signs on front lawns are so unusual you can't help but notice them, he says.

Former Mayor Frank McCauley, a Republican, says he's seeing the signs, too and finds them impressive. They apparently are the work of Romney's Quincy coordinator, Paul O'Malley of Wollaston.

McCauley has been with Romney since January and they have developed a close association. Romney was at the recent 40th wedding anniversary reception of McCauley and his wife, Sandra.

"We have a tight-knit organization here in Quincy," says McCauley. "There's quite a group of Romney supporters here."

What about November?

"I think he (Romney) has a real good shot at it," says McCauley.

And what about those Kennedy blanks here in last week's Quincy vote?

Kennedy, running unopposed, got 6,506 votes to 3,963 blanks. That's 62 percent votes and 38 percent blanks.

He was lower in votes and higher in blanks than four other Democrats running unopposed state-wide or county-wide:

KENNEDY

HAROLD

Atty. Gen. Scott Harshbarger polled 7,655 votes (73 percent) and 2,184 blanks (27 percent); Auditor Joseph DeNucci 7,351 votes (70 percent) and 3,118 blanks (30 percent); Dist. Atty. William Delahunt 7,918 votes (76 percent) and 2,551 blanks (24 percent); and Register of Deeds Barry Hamon 7,099 votes (68 percent) and 3,370 blanks (32 percent).

But Kennedy blanks really aren't anything new.

Last time out in 1988 and running unopposed in the Democratic primary, he got 6,287 in Quincy to 3,116 blanks. Almost the same as last week.

And, of course, he went on to trounce Joseph Malone here and in the state in the final election that year. Kennedy got 24,967 votes here to Malone's 14,279. (There were 1,463 blanks).

But there might be another indicator of trouble brewing for him.

City Clerk Joseph Shea noticed last week that there seemed to be a more than usual number of unenrolled voters who became Republicans for the day and then switched back to unenrolled.

"They obviously came to vote for Romney," says Shea.

But, he adds:

"I certainly wouldn't count Ted out. It looks like a good horse race but I wouldn't write him off."

Quincy has long been a Democratic stronghold with Democrats (25,000) outnumbering Republicans (6,100) and unenrolled (12,000) combined.

So ordinarily you could consider this Kennedy country.

But those "dandelions" on the front lawns might be saying something. But, then, dandelions don't vote.

SPEAKING OF KENNEDY, he will be here in Quincy Sunday, Oct. 23 as keynote speaker at the Quincy Democratic City Committee seventh annual fundraiser brunch. It will be held at 10 a.m. at the Bryan VFW Post on Broad St.

Committee Chairman Neal Sullivan hit the nail on the head. This year's U.S. Senate campaign (Massachusetts) he says "will be the most closely watched political race in the country."

READERS HAVE BEEN asking who is that well-known Quincy personality who is spending nights in a tent in his backyard. As reported her last week, he says he's out there because he loves the great outdoors. His wife says he's out there because she can't stand his cigarette smoking and the stench it leaves in the house.

Well, I really can't give you his name. But I can give you a clue: he lives in West Quincy, likes to ski, climbs Mount Washington at least once a year, and canoes down the Sacco River. He also knows a lot more about roots than he once did.

'JumpStart' Program At Crane Library

The Prudential, in cooperation with the American Library Association (ALA), plans to give children living in Quincy a "JumpStart" on the wonders of reading and learning with a new program this fall.

The JumpStart program encourages parents and teachers to bring children in Grades 1-3 to the Thomas Crane Public Library to receive their library cards and explore wonders of the library.

Participating schools will receive JumpStart packages that will include a 10-page, four-color newsletter for parents and a classroom poster and stickers for children. JumpStart is a program designed to bring together a new partnership of parents, schools, libraries and business on behalf of children.

The newsletter, designed to take home, offers tips to parents on motivating children to read and explains how the library and librarians can help children acquire the skill of reading early in life.

THIS IS A 1909 postcard view of the old Baker Yacht Basin on the Town River in Quincy Point. Today the site of Bay Pointe Marina, this well protected mooring site was the homeport and winter quarters for numerous steam driven excursion boats of that era, including the second boat from the right which was a side wheeled paddle steamer named Developer Says Letter On Wal-Mart 'Misleading'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Sylvia Mignon's recent letter ("Time is Running Out," Quincy Sun, Sept. 22) alleging that Atlantic Development is somehow buying the City of Quincy in order to win approval to build the Granite Crossing shopping center is cynical and misleading.

In her letter, Mignon objects to our comprehensive mitigation efforts. The reason we are investing $2 million to fund off-site mitigation is because Atlantic Development is doing its best to be a good neighbor. We have hired the best traffic engineers we could find and asked them to develop a plan to improve traffic flow throughout Quincy Point. Their solution will cost us $1 million, it will correct existing problems, account for our project, accommodate future growth and benefit everyone living in or passing through the area.

We asked members of Quincy 2000, marketing experts and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association to analyze the impact of Granite Crossing on the downtown retail district. They devised a plan to turn a potential problem into an opportunity for the downtown businesses. Of course, these real solutions cost real money. We will be helping to prepare the old Cummings and Child World building for Decelle, funding a comprehensive marketing campaign that will increase business activity for everyone in the city, and providing technical assistance to help develop Court House Square in the Hancock Street parking area. These projects will benefit every business in Quincy, including Granite Crossing. I can assure you that Atlantic Development would not contribute to them if we did not believe in their merit.

Mignon objects to the mitigation package designed to improve The Falls condominiums and minimize the impact of Granite Crossing on Falls residents. At the same time, she suggests that people should "put your efforts into getting something for yourself." We strongly object to her suggestion that people should view this development as an opportunity to get something for themselves. The vast majority of people have not taken that approach and have focused on legitimate concerns. As a resident of The Falls, she should respect the vote taken by her own condominium association, which was over 80 percent in favor of working with us to develop an appropriate mitigation package and build Granite Crossing.

Mignon also criticizes the senior citizens for wanting to connect the 14 senior citizen housing facilities with the downtown and other Quincy retail establishments. Possibly because Mignon just moved to Quincy this year, she does not understand or appreciate the needs of the senior citizen community. We are very proud to be able to help with this senior shuttle service, many seniors do not have automobiles and are not able to find adequate transportation to service their needs. The proposed shuttle has been a long-term goal of the city and service that will benefit both the senior community and the local businesses.

Finally, while Mignon continually blames Wal-Mart for all the wrongs of society, the fact remains that time and again, the company is rated as one of the 100 best companies to work for in the United States. That kind of recognition is earned by treating your suppliers and employees with dignity and fairness while delivering quality products and services to your customers. I am sure that is why we have received an overwhelmingly positive response from Quincy residents who are interested in working at Wal-Mart when it opens.

Atlantic Development has proposed investing more than $20 million to make Granite Crossing a model retail development for the City of Quincy. This is at a time when most developers are investing in the suburbs. As a part of that process, we are investing about $2 million, 10 percent of the total investment, to fund off-site mitigation projects to address the concerns of businesses and residents in Quincy.

We do not want to just mitigate concerns related to Granite Crossing, we want to help make Quincy the most attractive place to live, work, and yes, shop on the South Shore. This is a project I believe almost everyone in Quincy is anxiously waiting.

By PAUL HAROLD

Red Sox fever hit the city in a big way this week.

At city Hall, Councillor Clifford Marshall offered a resolution congratulating the team on its American League pennant victory. Meanwhile, in front of the building, a "Go Red Sox Go" sign was hung by order of Mayor James McIntyre. Its official unveiling was supervised by Dagmar Peurala of the Mayor's office, Barbara Cristina of the tax department, Josephine Camali and Shirley Cronin of the clerk's office and Iris Carry of the treasurer's office.

At the Adams School, Miss, Nancy Kelly's fifth grade class made foot high letter spelling out "Go Red Sox Beat St. Louis" and displayed them in the front windows.

Meanwhile, in North Quincy, members of the Cardinals, who were staying at the Sheraton Motor Inn were welcomed to the city by good sports including Police Chief Francis Finn, Auditor Alex Smith and Clerk of Courts Dennis Ryan. Among those team members staying at North Quincy were Stan Musial and Bob Gibson.

PLANS TO ADD BEACH AND PARKING AT WOLLASTON

The city's plans to alter Wollaston Beach won praise but no commitment from the MDC this week. The plan was presented by Mayor McIntyre to MDC Commissioner Howard Whitmore.

The re-routing of Quincy Shore Drive from Black's Creek to Fenno St. would straighten out the road and pull it back from the ocean.

McIntyre noted that the advantage of the plan was the creation of 700 yards of new beach a 300 car parking lot and a small picnic area. It would also make the roadway safer.

Both city and state officials hoped that these plans if adopted could be constructed in conjunction with the scheduled reconstruction of conduits under Quincy Shore Drive at Black's Creek.

Governor's Ad Discriminates Against Overweight

[A copy of the following letter was sent to The Quincy Sun for publication:]

Dear Governor Weld:

I implore you to stop running your ad depicting your opponents as overweight buffoons waddling around, bumping into each other and falling backward over a table, as described by Peter Howe in The Boston Globe on Sept. 9.

As an overweight, or more accurately, as a fat person, I face insensitive and discriminating barriers on a daily basis. Because it is so easy to stereotype and laugh at fat people, some accept it as appropriate behavior. I find it offensive and extremely painful.

Leaders by their very nature have followers. If you and your consultants find it humorous to depict fat people in a negative tone, it opens the door for your administration to discrimination against all fat or overweight people. I'm sure this is not your intention, but it could be the result.

By now you are probably wondering why I have enclosed an elastic band with this letter. It is to get your attention. You remember, when people don't see the obvious we give them an elastic band and tell them to snap out of it. Well Governor, the ad is obviously very insensitive.

OUR Policy On ENGAGEMENT Photographs And Wedding ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Chelsea Passes Away; Owner Thanks Supporters

[In July 1993, The Quincy Sun printed a story about Chelsea, a terminally-ill Doberman Pinscher that had helped her owner, North Quincy native Ann Sava, begin a program called "Partners For The Disabled." The program has helped a number of people cope with disabilities. Other stories and letters about Chelsea have since been printed. A copy of the following letter, dated Sept. 24, was submitted to The Sun for publication.]

Dear Quincy Sun readers:
It is with much sadness that I must let you know that Chelsea passed away last night. It was peaceful, though, of which I am most grateful. Just like every night, I kissed her and told her I loved her. When morning came, she was gone.

I do not know where to begin, but I am so grateful to all of you. Special thanks to Mike Whalen and Tom Gorman, for their true caring and help in keeping the public informed regarding Chelsea's illness and her medical fund.

Thank you to all of you who so compassionately went out of your way to send cards, and bones, and love and prayers and donated to her fund. All of this caring gave Chelsea extra quality time. You gave us both a special gift: the extra time to build memories to last a lifetime.

Chelsea was able to visit all the schools last year and see all the kids who always loved her so. Many of these schools had fund-raisers that made it possible to treat Chelsea and give her this extra time. We love you all.

Chelsea and I got to have a final walk at World's End in Hingham. A place where she spent a lot of her time the first two years. The place where I first decided to not give up and created our program, turning something bad (my disability) into something good. I could not have done it without Chelsea. She was the one with the courage.

We got to celebrate her eighth birthday, with the second graders in Miss Clara Irvine's class at the Lincoln-Hancock School in Quincy. It was a very special day. My thanks to the school, students, parents and staff for their kindness. And thank you, Quincy Sun, for such wonderful coverage of Chelsea's special day. We also wish to thank Dr. Jean Duddy of Angell Memorial Hospital for her love, care and support.

There is an emptiness in my heart, a hole in the world. Chelsea touched so many and because of her, I have found some of the most wonderful friends. I have learned what true friendship is. Being there at the darkest moments as well as the brightest. I have seen people open their hearts, and have learned that despite all the tragedies of the world, the coldness of so many, and the crime that surrounds us, that there is also love. A selfless giving from perfect strangers, as well as true friends, all to give my gentle Chelsea a chance at extra quality time.

Life for me will never be the same, but I will forever carry with me the love that came from all of you. We could not have done it without you and for that, I will be eternally grateful.

Just before my mother passed away, she said to me, "I'm not going to say goodbye, because I will always be with you." I know Chelsea will always be with me.

Wal-Mart's Commitment Goes Well Beyond Its Doors

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As you know, Wal-Mart would very much like to become a member of the Quincy retail community. We think it's a good company and we are sure that area residents will agree once you get to know us. Ten years ago I began working at Wal-Mart as an hourly associate and I'd like to share some facts with you and your readers about who we are.

Wal-Mart's retail family is made up of more than 500,000 people. Over 57 percent of our management team began as hourly associates. We hire associates locally and offer a benefits package that includes personal time, holiday pay, store discounts, profit sharing and stock purchase plans which allow associates to become shareholders in the company.

Wal-Mart was recently recognized in Robert Levering's book, "The 100 Best Companies to Work For In America," published in 1993 and in The New York Times which stated that "Wal-Mart's jobs are some of the best available in these hard times."

I am proud to work for a company that values its associates but Wal-Mart's commitment goes well beyond its doors. Wal-Mart cares about communities. As an example of the company's enthusiastic and committed charitable efforts, we've contributed more than $45 million since 1988 to the satellite hospitals of the Children's Miracle Network, including $12 million in 1994 alone. Thousands of other charities also receive much-needed support from us each year and in every case, it's our associates who decide which organizations should be served.

Wal-Mart is pro-associate and pro-community. We are a proud retail company with a dedicated group of associates committed to serving your community.

Seeks Sponsors Of WW II Subchasers For Reunion

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

During WW II, the George Lawley and Sons Shipyard at Neponset built 23 173-foot, steel-hulled subchasers for the U.S. Navy. The National Group of the Patrol Craft Sailors Association (P.C.S.A.) will host a general reunion in Danvers in 1996. The P.C.S.A. is a national group of ex-Navy men who served aboard these subchasers.

We are looking for one or more sponsors of these vessels so they or their children can be invited to the reunion by the crews of the ships they sponsored:

On the 10th of June, 1942, Mrs. Donald Smith, wife of the superintendent of machinery for the Lawley shipyard, christened the USS P.C.-469 for service in the Coast Guard. Her two sons, Donald Jr., age 10, and Roy, age 7, were in attendance.

On the 15th of August, 1942, Miss Ruth Ester Whiting, daughter of George D. Whiting, Lawley Shipyard General Manager, christened the P.C.-619. Her crew would like to present her with a copy of the ship's history and an invitation to the reunion to meet some of her crew. The Whiting's lived on Edwards Lane in Quincy during the war years.

Also, a Miss Edna

Wants City Council To Support Wal-Mart

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I live in Ward 2 and I have been following the stories about Wal-Mart and the shopping center coming to Quincy Avenue. I have been concerned for some time that if this project does not get built that some smart developer will use this land for subsidized apartments. I have friends who lived in South Boston when the Columbia Point Housing Project was built. It changed the character of the area forever and ruined it. The Wal-Mart land is over 40 acres, about the size of Columbia Point.

I would like to see that land used for a shopping center that would pay taxes to the city and have jobs for the people of Quincy. I definitely do not want to see that land used for low-income housing. They were going to build over 1,000 condos on that land and a developer could even fit even more apartments on that piece of property and they would pay much less in taxes to the city.

Also, there would be hundreds of children who would need to go to school in Quincy. The school system would have to hire more teachers and maybe even build a new school to educate all of those kids. This expense would certainly far outweigh any possible taxes that would be generated on the property. Any big low income housing project would require more police, fire and social service expenses that would be paid for by the city.

I am also concerned about the property values of the homes in the area. This neighborhood has a nice combination of residences and businesses but a large low-income housing project will do nothing for the values in the area. I would think that such a project would hurt all of the values of the condos at The Falls. The shopping center people are going to spend millions of dollars to do nice landscaping and fix the roads. I am sure that anybody who builds subsidized housing would not spend any money to make the area look better. As long as the landlord gets his Section 8 checks, he doesn't care what the neighborhood looks like.

I hope the City Council votes for the shopping center. It will be the best thing for Quincy because we need the jobs and tax dollars, not another Columbia Point in Quincy Point.

Convinced Wal-Mart Is 'Good Deal For The City'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I have lived in Quincy for many years and I hope the City Council votes quickly to allow the Wal-Mart shopping center to be built.

For many months I have been following all of the stories in the newspaper and now I am convinced that this is a good deal for the city. The developer seems to be doing everything the city wants. I think that he has bent over backwards to do what The Falls condo residents wanted. It seemed like there were only a few people there who made a lot of noise. I saw the names in the paper whenever anyone was quoted.

I am very glad that some big company will be paying taxes to the city. I am also very glad that my taxes did not go up this year. My tax bills are too high already. I hope other businesses come to Quincy.

I want the city councillors to work with the developer and make sure that all of the traffic problems are taken care of.

A STICKER FOR DETAILS

According to federal law, all cars sold in this country must clearly display a window sticker that reveals important facts about the car. The sticker, technically known as a Monroney sticker, must show: the manufacturer's suggested retail price (including all its factory installed options), a destination charge for importing the vehicle from its point of assembly or port of importation to the dealer, and EPA fuel economy estimates. Although this same information is also displayed on the windows of light trucks (which include passenger vans and most 4-wheel-drives), the law does not require it to be. In most cases, the dealer supplements the federally mandated sticker with a second window sticker that lists accessories installed at the dealership and other charges.

HINT: Dealers do not receive a discount on the destination charge listed on the window.

Daniela Sever Raises $1,225 For Children Charities

North Quincy dentist Dr. Daniela Sever helped raise $1,225 for five Massachusetts charities for children by participating in the Ride for Kids bicycle trek.

Dr. Sever biked 50 miles through Mansfield, Easton, Bridgewater and other towns to help the children's charities, including the Robert. F. Kennedy Action Corps, the Italian Home for Children,

"I've never ridden that far," she said. "It was tough, but worth it. I'm glad I could help raise money for disadvantaged kids."

The annual Rodman Ride for Kids raises money for children with absent parents, parents with substance abuse problems, and kids at risk from guns, drugs, and violence.

Dr. Sever, originally from Czechoslovakia, was brought to the U.S. at age 15 by her parents who fled after a USSR military takeover of her home

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

The Watcher's Guide To A Safe Community*

By reducing opportunities for crime, looking out for your neighbors, and acting as extra eyes and ears for law enforcement, you as a member of a Watch group can improve the quality of life in your community.

First, check security in your own home. Your police department may provide a free home security survey.

Make sure there are good locks on exterior doors and windows and use them. Don't forget to lock up when you go out, even if it's only for a few minutes.

Trim shrubbery that hides doorways or windows and join Operation Identification to mark valuables. If you leave for a vacation, use timers on lights and radios and make your home appear lived-in and have a neighbor take in your mail and newspapers.

Make an effort to know your neighbors and their daily routines. Keep your block map near the telephone for emergencies.

Check your neighborhood for things that might contribute to crime like poor street lighting, abandoned cars, vacant lots littered with debris, or boarded-up building.

An important responsibility of Watchers is to report anything suspicious to the police department. Look for:

- Someone running from a car or home.
- Someone screaming. If you can't determine what the screams are for, call the police and report it.
- Someone going door-to-door in the neighborhood or looking into windows and parked cars.
- A person who seems to have no purpose wandering in the neighborhood.
- Any unusual or suspicious noise that you can't explain, such as breaking glass, or pounding.
- Vehicles moving slowly, without lights, or with no apparent destination.
- Business transactions conducted from a vehicle. This could involve the sale of drugs or stolen goods.
- Offers of merchandise at ridiculously low prices. They're probably stolen.
- Property carried by persons on foot at an unusual hour or place, especially if the person is running.
- Property being removed from closed businesses or residences known to be unoccupied.
- A stranger entering a neighbor's home or apartment that appears to be unoccupied.
- A stranger in a car stopping to beckon to a child.
- A child resisting the advances of an adult.

Quincy Children Graduate From Lung Assn. Program

The American Lung Association of Greater Norfolk County recently graduated more than 50 children from Quincy and other local communities from its "Open Airways" program in Quincy.

The program was designed to help children with asthma learn to manage their disease and to avoid pollutants in the air, such as secondhand smoke, that can trigger asthma attacks. It was hosted by the South Shore YMCA in Quincy.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield helped fund the program with $5,000 it donated to the Lung Association's "Healthy Kids" program through the Needham Track Club's annual Great Bear Run.

Donations to Christmas Seals help the Lung Association continue its fight against all lung diseases as well as asthma, which affects more than 10 million people across the country. Currently in Massachusetts there are 90,000 children who suffer from asthma.

THE QUINCY DEFENSIVE line gets a good jump Saturday against Bridgewater-Raynham. The President defense shut down the always-strong Trojan running game for most of the contest. However, two long second-half runs provided the margin of victory for B-R.

QUINCY RUNNING BACK Sam Brown turns the corner without a defender in sight Saturday against Bridgewater-Raynham. Despite the miserable field conditions, Brown had his second 100-yard-plus outing of the season against the big and beefy B-R defense. Brown has rushed for over 300 yards in just two games.

Play At Taunton Friday

Quincy Wins Stats, Loses Game, 22-13

By KERRY BYRNE

Football coaches will tell you there is only one statistic that matters: the final score.

In a battle of Old Colony League heavyweights, Bridgewater-Raynham beat Quincy, 22-13, Saturday at rain-soaked Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Quincy had the upper hand in every statistical category but the one that goes in the record book. Presidents' head coach Jack Raymer would prefer it the other way around.

"Statistics don't mean anything because this is a game we wanted to win," he said.

The Presidents look to pad their stats and chalk up a win when they play at Taunton (2-0) Friday night at 7 o'clock. Quincy beat Taunton 25-6 last season.

A look at the numbers in Saturday's game would make you think it was Quincy's day: B-R's star running back Matt Pauline was held to just 26 yards on nine carries. President Sam Brown had 112 yards. The visitors mounted just two drives of more than three plays and quarterback Jeff DiMarzio completed just 3 of 10 passes for 30 yards. Quincy went three-and-out only twice and sophomore QB Mark Glynn threw for 136 yards and a TD. B-R picked up no first downs in the second half and just four in the entire ball game. Quincy had nine in the game.

The Presidents led 13-0 midway through the second quarter and 13-6 at the half, but two long second-half runs by the Trojans proved to be the difference in the contest. An 84-yard TD by Derek Lennon on his only carry of the game and a 51-yard TD by DiMarzio - both were followed by successful two-point conversion efforts - provided all the offense B-R needed to insure the win. Except for the two scoring runs the Trojans had just 3 yards of offense in the second half.

The Presidents have been unable to beat Bridgewater-Raynham in six tries since joining the OCL.

"Do these guys have your number?" Raymer was asked after game.

"Do they? I don't know," he said. "We played very well all game, then we have their quarterback pinned and he gets outside us for a long run. This was de ja vu of last year when they beat us on a fourth-and-long Record: 2-0, beat Plymouth South, 20-5, last week at home. 3-6-1 last season, 1-6-1 and tied for seventh in OCL.

Coach: Bob Lane (Eighth season, 41-31-1).

Previous Meeting: Quincy won 25-6 at home. Sam Brown and Terry Bowman both scored TDs for Quincy.

Offense: The Tigers try to spread the defense with their four-wideout run-and-shoot attack. QB Steve Santos is also a threat to run the ball. RB Ed Holt is a slippery runner.

Defense: With a relatively small defensive group, Lane goes with a four-man front to emphasize his team speed at linebacker. This defense could be ineffective if he tries to use it against the Presidents. Look for the Tigers to can this defense and jam the line of scrimmage in order to stop the run.

In the second quarter Raymer reemerged in his role as the Riverboat Gambler and called for the ol' halfback pass. Bowman took the ball and threw a strike to Sheffer for a 52-yard touchdown play that made the score 13-0.

not a team that can get behind and we got to work on diversifying the attack. And, hey, Glynn did a great job passing, especially in the first half." The sophomore completed 7 of 9 attempts (3 for 3 and 101 yards in the first half) in just his second varsity start.

A 10-play, 53-yard drive by the Trojans in the second period made the score 13-6 at the half. Ed Anderson blocked the extra-point kick attempt. It was B-R's only true drive of the game.

"We played well defensively but we didn't help ourselves because offensively we couldn't sustain a drive in the second half. But we'll get better as they year goes on. We'll be able to mix up our offense a little bit better," said Raymer.

The President defense did look sharp throughout as they held the high-powered Trojan offense to 206 yards, 135 of which came on the two long touchdown runs.

Defensive linemen Mike Flagg, Butch Palaza, Mike Feeley and John Moss and middle linebacker Jason Bennett all made tackles behind the line of scrimmage for Quincy.

Pint-sized defensive backs Matt Miller, Chris McArdle and Sheffer all performed brilliantly against the much larger B-R receivers. On three different occasions the 5-foot-7-inch Sheffer robbed 6-foot-3-inch tight end Joe Rich of catches and McArdle recovered a Trojan fumble on the game's first play from scrimmage. Linebackers Bill Dunn and Anderson helped stifle Bridgewater-Raynham's tough inside running game.

Tight ends Santoro and Jon Ryan, offensive linemen Palaza, Feeley, Matt Strauchon, Peter Kolson and Jeff Burrell, and fullback Dunn paved the way for Brown's second 100-yard game in as many outings this year.

The loss put a dent in Quincy's hopes for an OCL title and a Super Bowl, but Raymer is still optimistic. "I don't think there will be a team to go undefeated in the league this season. We're still in the hunt," he said.

Bill Reardon, a 1991 graduate of Quincy High School, is a senior cornerback and captain. Dave Pacino, a 1994 graduate of North Quincy High, is a nose guard and has already seen playing time as a freshman in Stonehill's first three games.

Reardon has been a second team all-league selection the past two seasons.

Both had outstanding high school careers in Quincy.

Reardon was a captain of the 1990 Quincy squad that went 8-1-1 and narrowly missed a Super Bowl appearance. Pacino was a two-way starter as a junior on the 11-0 1992 North Quincy team that won the Div. 1B Super Bowl.

Home Opener Friday Against Plymouth South

North Quincy Clipped By Falmouth, 27-8

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

When North Quincy traveled to Falmouth last Saturday, head coach Ken McPhee didn't expect the Clippers to play the game of a lifetime.

The Clipper defense shut down Shawn Nee and the offense shined in a 27-8 win.

North will try to regroup Friday in their long-awaited home opener at Veterans' Memorial Stadium against Plymouth South. Plymouth comes in at 0-2, losing to Plymouth North and Taunton. Last year a combined Plymouth squad defeated North, 22-21.

"We got banged up pretty good," said McPhee after the Falmouth game. "They're a pretty good, physical football team. I didn't think they would be, but they are."

Another factor that caught McPhee off guard was the total shutdown of Nee. Nee was held to just 48 yards on 14 carries. Falmouth proved to have the best ground game on this night as they outran North 231 yards to 56 and had 12 first downs to NQ's seven.

Each team's first possession went by quickly. On Falmouth's second possession, quarterback Mike Andrews, a converted defensive end, faked a handoff to Willie Ford and raced 57 yards for the Clippers' first score. Kevin Creighton's kick made it 7-0 with 4:22 left in the first quarter.

The second quarter started with Falmouth controlling the ball. This did not last long as Derek Epps intercepted and Andrews pass at the North 21. North gave the ball back on a fumble (one of three Raider turnovers in the game) on the very next play.

Falmouth then went on their second scoring drive due to the solid running of Ford and Eric Ayers. With 4:35 left in the half, Ayers took it in from 1 yard out. Creighton's kick made it 14-0.

The Clippers took a 21-0 lead with 2:01 in the half when Ford ran 19 yards for the touchdown. An Andrews 14-yard run highlighted the drive.

A Sean Dolbear-led drive got North on the board with 1:10 left in the half. Dolbear threw a 20-yard scoring strike to Jerry Fernandez and connected with Eric Zimmerman for the two-point conversion to make the score 21-8 at the half. Dolbear completed 8 of 18 passes for 139 yards in the game.

Last week North showed they were a second-half team when Nee rushed for 112 yards and three touchdowns at Stoughton. This week he could not duplicate the feat due to a swarming Clipper defense that forced the Raiders to put the ball in the air.

Dolbear completed a 45-yard bomb to Fernandez to keep alive NQ's first drive of the second half. North kept the ball for the first six-and-a-half minutes of the quarter, but were stopped on the Clipper 17. It was one of three times the Raiders got within the Falmouth 25 but could not put it in.

North had another good chance in the fourth when Dolbear connected with Epps for a 34-yard gain but they could not sustain the drive.

Falmouth scored their final touchdown with 3:05 left when Andrews ran it in from 4 yards out for his second score of the night. The extra point kick was blocked.

Plymouth South At A Glance

Record: 0-2, lost to Taunton 20-5, on the road last week. Last season record not applicable; played with Plymouth North as the combined Plymouth High football team. MIAA ordered the schools to play separately. Coach: Donald Dorr (first year; 28-12 in four seasons at Barnstable). Dorr has a tough job, he was hired just days before practice began in August.

Previous Meeting: None. Last year North Quincy lost 22-21 to the combined Plymouth High team. Offense: Plymouth South has showed little in the way of offense this year. They were blanked by Plymouth North 34-0 in their first outing. A first-quarter field goal against Taunton last week was cause for great celebration along the PS bench.

Defense: Plymouth South has some size but lack of team speed could be the biggest factor as they try to contain the fleet feet of Shawn Nee. Nee should rebound from last week's performance with a big night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Player to watch: RB/DB Mark Fitzsimmons.

North received fine defensive performances from Epps, Fernandez,

Glen Peterson, Brian Walsh, Fred Perry and

Walsh, Defense Give NQ Jayvees Two Wins

By PETE ZOIA
Brian Walsh has run wild and the defense has been outstanding as the North Quincy High junior varsity football team recorded two shutout wins in their first two games this year.

The JV Red Raiders opened with a 22-0 win over Stoughton and followed with a 26-0 win over Falmouth this past Monday.

brilliant running of last year with TD runs of 45 and 32 yards in the win over Stoughton. Chris Ritchie closed out the scoring with a 29-yard TD. Tom Coughlin and Jim Randle added two-pointers on passes from Tim Semchenko.

Stellar defense in the second half prevented Stoughton from recording even one first down. Paul Greely, Mike Ferguson, Charlie Ross and Ray Shubocki led the swarming Red Raider defense. Ferguson came up with a key interception.

Also praised by coaches Tom Carter and Pete Chrisom were Norm Cornell, Steve Steinfeld, Joe McCarthy, Chris Washburn and Paul Picciano.

Walsh was again the big gun in the win over Falmouth. The powerful runner went around the left end for a 27-yard touchdown run, caught a 12-yard pass from Semchenko for his second score, and ran back a kickoff 84 yards for his third TD of the day.

Chris Walsh added the final six on an 8-yard run. Walsh banged in for the two-point conversion - his 19th and 20th points on the day.

"It was a great team effort all-around," said coaches Carter and Chrisom.

Fond Memories Of A 'Special Season'

Quincy 1956 Football Team Holds Reunion

By KERRY BYRNE

Memories of youth and of a 'special season' burned brightly when the players, coaches and cheerleaders from the 1956 Quincy High football team gathered at Cesare's Restaurant in Weymouth.

Perhaps the theme of the evening was best summed up by former Quincy High gym instructor Betty (Silverman) Aronson, "When you get right down to it, what is life but memories? I just hope they're all good ones."

For all involved it was a celebration of the memories of a remarkable team.

The season opened poorly for the 1956 Presidents - or 'Prexy' as they were often called by the local papers in those days.

"We lost our first four games," said the team's head coach Bill Sullivan. "The wolves were howling for my head, I'll tell ya. Somehow we turned it around."

His team went on to win their last five games, including a memorable 19-13 win over North Quincy on Thanksgiving. After the game the Quincy fans followed the school band down Hancock St. to greet the muddled players and celebrate their victory over the North Quincy boys and celebrate the conclusion of a winning season few thought possible five weeks earlier.

"Right from the start of the season this team had a very special feel," said Sullivan, who explained how they could be so successful in gathering teammates, coaches and cheerleaders together after some 37 football seasons have come and gone: "They definitely were a together, tight-knit group, yeah, they were special."

It was the memories of the turnaround that led Ron Ivil, an all-scholastic fullback from that squad, to gather the troops together one more time.

The dinner gathering led to the numerous discussions we've all had at one time.

"D'ya remember the time..."

"D'ya remember the play when..."

But it was the speech of Sullivan, in his aging but still vibrant coach's voice, that not only highlighted the evening but best described the memories being shared and best epitomized the small piece of the American experience that is high school football.

"I won't be long, I promise you," he said when he took the floor, but by the time he was done you wished he had said more.

"Friends use to say to me, how can you get so worked up in the locker room? And how do those boys fall for all that rah-rah stuff?"

"Well," he said, pausing, then his voice rising, "they never knew what it was to be in the locker room. They never felt the butterflies that came up in your throat and almost choked you so that you couldn't breathe. They never knew that two minutes could seem like an eternity and you felt that if I don't get out there soon you're gonna break in two."

"They never knew that this experience, these emotions, were the closest thing to going into combat against the enemy that anybody could ever experience. And they never sat in there the last few minutes and heard the band play the victory song with the notes floating in through the door and the cheerleaders out there yelling to the crowd 'give em a big cheer when they come out'. These things you all have experienced."

These experiences are universal among football players, whether they played with Sullivan in the 1930s, with Ivil under Sullivan in the 1950s, or today under coaches Ken McPhee and Jack Raymer.

But the players of the 50s had some peculiarities that Sullivan, along with coaches John Chrusciel and Marty Finnegan, found distressing.

"That era was a difficult time," said Sullivan. "Up until the early 50s, most kids had a 1940s outlook on the world, but then things changed. Kids wanted cars and needed jobs to get 'em - we didn't get as many out for the team as we used to." Keep in mind that 1956 was also the year Elvis exploded on to the music scene with a string of No. 1 hits.

These facts were decried in a Pat Horne story in the Quincy Patriot Ledger that year: "Coach Bill Sullivan is another member of the growing group of high school football coaches who are convinced that rock 'n roll and the hot rod are knocking the pins out from underneath the schoolboy football program. 'The modern crazes are not the only things responsible for this lack of interest in football among the high school boys, but...it seems that the boys would rather go dancing or listen to a jam session than put on a football uniform,'" said Sullivan.

To Sullivan, the boys of 1956 were bucking the trend, fending off the peer pressure of the day so that they could play the game he, and they, loved. The fact that they did so on a team that at one point was 0-4 made their togetherness, and their remarkable transformation into a winning team, even more meaningful.

Said Ivil: "The highlight of that season was taking five in a row, showing to the coaches and the rest of the public that we had some real character."

But almost to a man, the single most memorable experience was their 19-13 win on Thanksgiving. A win meant sweet memories of a long win streak. A loss meant the streak was for naught and the record a losing one.

The Presidents scored three second-half touchdowns to overcome a 6-0 halftime deficit. Noel Balducci crossed the end zone with his second score of the day to give Quincy the winning margin. A pass to Ivil for the extra point capped the scoring. Balducci scored thanks to a 14-play drive that went primarily behind left-side linemen Earl Alsop, Nick Gelsomini and Jim Claire.

Scores by Balducci and Sonny Seppala gave Quincy a 12-6 lead in the second half before Ken Mahoney's 57-yard pass to George Doring for a TD and the conversion late in the third quarter gave the Red Raiders a 13-12 lead and set up Balducci's fourth quarter heroics.

The conclusion of the five-game win streak left the Quincy boys craving to play coach Henry Arlenson's 9-0 Weymouth squad which beat the Presidents 14-6 earlier in the season.

According to Ivil, the Wildcats backed down, refusing to jeopardize their Class A state title and a trip to Florida with a game against the rejuvenated Quincy team.

It is memories like that, of a once hopeless team instilling fear in the most powerful opponent, that brought this team together 38 years later.

"Memories," said Ivil, "a lot of good memories, that's what brought us together."

Ivil wanted to thank That's Italian, The Jewelry

Factory Outlet, Hearthstone Florists, Niko's Restaurant, David Teixeira and Robert Ivil for their efforts in making the reunion possible.

Soccer

Good Start For NQ Boys In Tough OCL

The North Quincy boys' soccer team is off to a 1-3-1 start this season, not bad for a non-soccer power in the Old Colony League, considered by many to be the best league in eastern Mass.

"This is one of our best starts in a long time, especially in this league," said head coach Jim Johnston.

North will take on OCL and crosstown rival Quincy Saturday at 7 p.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

The Red Raiders opened the season with a 1-1 tie against the newly formed Plymouth South Panthers. Until this season Plymouth South played with Plymouth North as a combined Plymouth High team.

Jim Finn netted the North Quincy goal.

NQ's first win came at home against Barnstable, 2-1.

Junior Shawn Johnson

and freshman Shing Vien were the Red Raider goal scorers.

Johnston has been very pleased with the performance of his team so far. "We have a very young team but they're all good soccer players. They've played Quincy Youth Soccer and have come up through the system and we're pleased with that. In the past we had kids who were great athletes but not necessarily soccer players," he said.

"We are looking forward to our big game Saturday."

Senior defenseman Ralph DiMattia and Jared Rowland have been the anchors on the North Quincy defense. Freshman Colin Shea has also seen some action at fullback.

Senior keeper Tom Meade has made several outstanding saves for the Red Raiders.

Quincy Girls Tie NB, Play North Saturday

In their best offensive showing since last season, the Quincy High girls' soccer team tied the New Bedford Whalers, 4-4, last week in New Bedford.

Coach Sonya Herring hopes her girls will have the same firepower Saturday when they play North Quincy at Veterans' Memorial Stadium at 5:30 p.m.

Quincy's Kelly Howard was the top weapon in the New Bedford game. The junior netted three goals, including the game-tying tally with just minutes remaining.

Strong defense by the likes of seniors Jessica Barry and Amy Devin, and freshman Janet Kane, and freshman Jessica DiBona helped keep the Whalers in check.

Last Wednesday, the Presidents fell to a tough Plymouth South squad, 5-1.

Kara McSweeney notched the lone Quincy goal.

Monday, the Presidents played one of their best halves of soccer in a long time. They trailed the powerful Falmouth Clippers just 2-0 at the break.

"They looked so good," said head coach Sonya Herring. "They played so well in that half. They really looked impressive."

A second half explosion gave the Clippers a big win.

The game was originally scheduled for Friday night but had to be rescheduled due to rain.

License Board Puts Hold On Varsity Club's Request For 4 Entertainment Dates

Kessler volunteered for a review by the board to see if any "great grief and aggravation" was caused anyone if the entertainment licenses were approved.

"I'm asking for the opportunity to show that we can handle it. Since I've taken over the Varsity Club, we've done a lot with it. I'm asking for a little fairness and the chance to try to do a good job," he said. I'll ask for a review by the board to see if anyone is caused "great grief and aggravation."

Barbara Elsayed, a resident since 1940 at 38 Independence Ave., presented the board with a petition signed by 30 area residents in opposition to Kessler's request.

"It's a nightmare, a horror show," said Elsayed of the noise outside the club in the late evening.

Mary Palmer of 70

Federal Ave., said that "the problem is not what goes on inside the club, it's what goes on outside. Adam Kessler is one person; he can't control what goes on outside."

"Does this establishment belong in that area?" asked Palmer.

The area, according to Mulvey, is zoned for business and residential sites.

"The License Board doesn't have formal complaints about the club's operation," said Mulvey, who also said he wasn't aware of any problems in that area as described by Elsayed and other abutters.

Mullen, steering the focus of the meeting back to the issue of the request for the specific entertainment licenses, called on City Liquor Inspector Det. Sgt. Richard Laracy to answer complaints by residential abutters of illegal parking and alleged fist-fighting in a nearby lot.

Laracy said an assigned police detail to the club attempted to ticket cars parked in spots designated by "no parking signs" only to be stopped by the residents who live in nearby homes.

"It's okay for the neighbors to park there, but not [patrons of] the Varsity Club," said Laracy.

Laracy said he had recently reviewed a police report of all incidents involving the club and found them all to be minor offenses.

"I am not defending Mr. Kessler," said Laracy. "He doesn't mean anything to me, he's just another licensee." According to Laracy, Kessler holds one of the city's 152 liquor licenses.

Anne Corcoran of 57 Independence Ave., credited Kessler with doing a nice job of sprucing up the property and making a concerted effort to work with the neighbors, but said that he has no control over how people act once outside the club.

"He has to suffer the ramifications of that," said Corcoran.

Council To Give Wal-Mart O.K.

one. However, with six other councillors already in support of the project, such a challenge is now impossible.

The Granite Crossing project has been approved by a number of boards, including the Planning Board, Quincy Conservation Commission and state Department of Environmental Protection. The City Council, which must grant final approval to the project, is scheduled to vote on the matter at a special meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at Quincy City Hall.

Atlantic Development has proposed construction of a shopping center that would include a 135,000-square-foot Wal-Mart store, a 60,000 to 75,000-square-foot supermarket, and possibly another 15,000-square-foot retail store if the supermarket does not fill the full 75,000 square feet. The site, located in Quincy Point, is near The Falls condominium complex.

Proponents of the project say it will create 200 construction jobs, 500 permanent jobs, traffic improvements to Falls Boulevard and a minimum $600,000 in tax revenue for the city. In addition, the developer has offered a $600,000 mitigation package to the condominium owners.

Atlantic Development has also offered $1 million to improve the traffic situation in the area. Cheney recently had suggested that Atlantic Development build a second entrance on Quincy Avenue and pay for all the land and permitting costs if Wal-Mart traffic proves to be worse than anticipated, although he said Tuesday he does not think that will be necessary.

Opponents of the proposed shopping center have said it will bring down property values at The Falls and have a harmful economic effect on Quincy's downtown shopping district.

Results of a study by Byrne-McKinney Associates of Boston recently showed that values could fall on 12 of the 120 units at The Falls that would have a view of the shopping center but that the others would show no increase. Cheney has said his permit will require Atlantic Development to make up any financial loss to the owners of the 12 affected condominiums.

However, Falls resident Sylvia Mignon, one of the most outspoken members of a group that calls itself "We're Against the Wal," has said the issue is not about money but about quality of life.

Mignon said at press time she is disappointed by the councillors' support of the project, adding that she plans to weigh her options about what, if any, action she will take after tonight's vote.

Search Begins For Interim College President

be allowed to make five-minute presentations to the full board, whose members will then have 55 minutes to question them. Raymond said three of the candidates will be interviewed Nov. 7 and two on Nov. 14, at which time the five candidates will be reduced to three finalists.

Raymond said the board will bring in the three finalists in for a second interview Nov. 21. He added that the new interim president may be chosen that same evening or at a later date.

Young, whose contract as interim president has expired, has expressed interest in applying for the new interim position as well as serving as the college's permanent president. He was appointed interim president last year by School Supt. Eugene Creedon following the firing of former President O. Clayton Johnson.

Officials have said opening the field to more candidates for the interim position is not due to a lack of confidence in Young, who has worked in higher education most of his career. He has taught English at a number of schools, including Boston University, Eastern Nazarene College and Quincy College, and has also served as dean of academic affairs at Eastern Nazarene.

Raymond said applications and resumes for the interim position may be sent to Miriam Shaheen, clerk of the board of governors, at 32 Harrington Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.

Friday's recount.

"I expect very few changes. It was a very tight election and it went very, very smoothly."

The winner of the Democratic primary is virtually assured the seat on the council since there is no Republican opponent on the ballot in November. The term of the $10,400-year-seat is two years.

Kerrigan is a former Boston city councillor and Boston School Committee member.

Members of the Governor's Council mainly vote on judicial and clerk of courts appointments

The last recount in Quincy was for school committee in November of 1993. In that recount, Sean Barry and Christine Cedrone ended up tied for the seat. A joint convention of the City Council and School Committee selected Barry over Cedrone.

Arthur Chandler's Wollaston Theatre:

Family Entertainment At A Reasonable Price

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. What made you decide to buy the Wollaston Theatre?

A. I really don't know, because it wasn't something that I was looking to do; it was just something that happened. Finding out that it was available, and asking a couple of questions, you know, finding out how much it might be and this and that. It just kept on going, and we ended up with it.

Q. And that was in 1979?

A. Well, actually, that was in late 1978 when we got started with the owner. And talks with her attorneys, the purchase and sale, and the agreements and all of that sort of thing. And that was time-consuming and had to be worked out. And I guess it went through the winter, and all the paperwork, I suppose the backchecking and everything else. And it ended up that it was signed, sealed and delivered, basically, July 1, 1979.

Q. What caused your interest in the theatre? Were you a movie buff when you were younger?

A. No, I'd go to the movies once in a while, but I wasn't a movie buff, and I'm really still not a movie buff as such. You know, movies pass through me. I see them, I can remember some of them, but I'm not a movie buff who remembers every movie that went through here. There's just too much to do, and, you know, keep looking ahead, to keep recalling what's been behind.

Q. It's a nice building, and has been around for a long time. How old is it?

A. It was built in 1926, or completed and opened in 1926—Nov. 15, I think, is the real date. It was built by Mr. Edward H. Sears, who was a building contractor, and he was the contractor who built the (former) Strand Theatre in Quincy Center the year before. And I always felt that where the Strand had a balcony, he saw that there could be problems, so therefore, when he built his own theatre, he made sure everything was on one floor with no balcony. Of course, this site was made for a smaller theatre, but in those days, you know, anything over 1,000 (seats) is still a pretty good-sized theatre. And we still have almost 1,100 seats now.

So it opened in November 1926, and it opened with vaudeville, and there were some movies, I think, almost from the beginning; and they also had stage productions. Through the years, the Wollaston Business Association put on their spectaculars every once in a while. Mostly, I think, it's been movies, and the Sears family had always owned it—we're only the second owners. But it was leased out to various groups or companies who ran it as a movie theatre. And then in 1971, Mrs. Harriet W. Sears (Edward's wife) took it over and ran it herself for seven years approximately until it closed. And then she sold it to us.

But basically, it's always been a movie theatre with films. And we've had own stage productions; back in 1980 and '84, we had very long-process Amateur Talent Nights—they ran 16 and 12 weeks, each one of them. And we had a good turnout at those, and every once in a while we've had other individual stage productions. We rent them out because we don't have the size and so forth to promote and produce them.

Q. The theatre has an almost historic feel to it.

A. Yes. It's 68 years old; it's listed on the National Historic Sites. A lot of people say, "Well, why don't you 'twin' it (make it a twin theatre)?" But the minute you twin it, you lose the Wollaston Theatre. There's a lot of nostalgia for the Wollaston Theatre as such. It's a grand old theatre; it's showing its age, yes, but it's still the Wollaston Theatre. And our plans are, for as long as we have it, it'll be run as a single-screen theatre.

We have people come back who haven't been here since the 1930s and '40s and they say, "Oh, it's just exactly the way I remember it." That's the way we'd like to keep it. We try to run it as a family, neighborhood theatre; that when you

ARTHUR CHANDLER, owner of the Wollaston Theatre since 1979, spends a lot of time working at his family-oriented, neighborhood theatre. And sometimes, he even finds time to relax.

FULL NAME: Arthur M. Chandler

ADDRESS: Wollaston

OCCUPATION: owner and operator of the Wollaston Theatre since 1979. Previously worked in civil engineering for 28 years, mainly in the Greater Boston area

EDUCATION: graduated from Bourne High School, 1948; attended Tennessee Tech before serving during the Korean War; received associate's degree in engineering (1961) and business degree (1963) from Northeastern University

come back years later it's still here, still showing the good current, family-type movies, for the most part.

Q. And the building is listed as an historic site?

A. Yes, it's listed on the National Historic Sites. That's been probably five or six years or so now. It's been quite awhile.

Q. You still offer movies for only $1 two nights a week. Why did you start having "Dollar Nights?"

A. We have "Dollar Night" on Monday and Tuesday; that started out almost like a gimmick. Because in the beginning, things were slow, having to reopen and get restarted and so forth. And we decided we'd try something like the Boston Red Sox—every so often, have "Ladies' Night" and the man would pay regular price. So that's what we did.

Then jokingly, somebody said, "Well, how do you know they're a lady?" And if you remember back in 1980, how things were in those days, you had a hard time telling the men from the women or the boys from the girls. Therefore, we gave a "Ladies' Night" card, that started out basically because you appeared to be non-male, etc., and it was only good on Tuesday.

And then this went on for a while, and the men kept looking for a "Men's Night," so we said we'd use the "Ladies' Night" card for a "Him and Her Night," and that never worked out. And yet the men are still looking for a "Men's Night." So we finally said, okay, Monday and Tuesday is "Dollar Night" for everybody. And that was fine with the men, but not for the women, because they went up one side and down the other on the men: "You male chauvinists, you couldn't stand it because we were getting a break."

But we've done very well through the years, and several times we've come close to selling out at 1,000 seats.

Q. Your regular price is how much now?

A. The regular price is $3, but I'm sure that very shortly we'll be going up, probably to $4. I mean, things just, you know, rise.

Q. But even $4 is still a great price today. How can you afford to offer such low prices?

A. Well, we do a lot of the work ourselves. Everybody here basically does a little bit of everything, so that I don't have to have an extra person to do this because this one is doing something else. Everybody does everything. I think you can do it pretty much with volume; people appreciate the low prices.

Q. You get movies a little later than the larger theatres. Is that also part of the reason the prices are lower?

A. Yes, but you have to understand the whole process. When a movie first comes out, it goes to what they call the first-run movies, which is like Quincy Center, Braintree, Dedham, etc. And they can play it for as long as they want. Then when they feel that they have reached the end of the line, they release it to the neighborhood theatres.

We all come under basically the same rental agreement, which is a percentage, but by the time it gets to us the percentage is a lot different because the total money is a lot different. You know, everybody's paying $7 and they're rushing out to give them (the other theatres) their $7; well, by the time it (the movie) gets here, most of the people have probably already seen it. So it's an evening out, and that basically is the reason for the lower pricing.

Q. Business must be particularly good in the summer.

A. Yes, and it varies from year to year, depending on the quality of the movies. We've had some spectacular years where five or six weeks out of two months we've been into the 900s (900-plus seats filled), but you don't do that every year, because of the quality of the movie. But the summer is usually the best time, because the kids are out of school; the vacations are going on, but there's always someone around.

Q. Besides owning the theatre, you serve as president of the Quincy Citizens Association. What do you see as the role of the QCA in the community?

A. Well, I think from the beginning, it's a continuing of being a voice of the people. If they've got something that's bothering them, or they want to make a point of view known or heard, they can usually do it through the QCA. We're open to the taxpayers of the city, and this is the same way it was when it first started back in 1967.

We've always tried to be a voice of the people, and whatever the issues may be, we try to let the city or whomever it may be know what the feelings are.

Q. You're also a member of the Wollaston Business Association.

A. Well, I get involved, but I really haven't been able to go to the meetings, because when they have the meetings that's when I'm starting to work at night. I'm like 12 hours out of sequence with everybody. But I do try to keep up with what's going on; I'm concerned with what's going on in our community. Because this is where our people walk and work and park and drive and the whole bit.

Q. What do you enjoy most about working and living in the city?

A. I think probably that Quincy is Quincy. I was born here, but I grew up down the Cape, and when I came out of the service my wife and I originally lived in Cambridge. But Cambridge is Cambridge; it's a metropolis down there. So we wanted to move, and I wanted to come back to Quincy. Quincy already had the schools and the sewers and the drains and all that kind of stuff, and I wanted to come back because it was a nice community, and it still is.

But I think I came back to and got involved in Quincy because Quincy is Quincy. It's not just a place where I live; Quincy is Quincy and I'd like to become part of it. I live here because I want to live here, and I want to take part in everything.

Hockey

St. Moritz Opens Season With Win On The Road

The St. Moritz Devils squirt major hockey team opened the 1994-95 season with a 4-2 road win over the Middlesex Islanders in Stoneham.

The game proved to be an aggressive affair, yet virtually penalty free.

The Devils were down 2-0 in the second period due to a Jake Henney goal in the first and an unassisted break away tally by Mike McHugh in the second.

Facing a deficit and a tough opponent, the Devils beared down hard on the Islander defense. Their work paid off when Chris Follett of Hanover netted two in the final two minutes of the second period; the first, an unassisted slap shot to the top right shelf; the second, set up by the brilliant passing of Milton's Kevin Lynch and South Boston's Pat Balaconis.

Outstanding defense by Quincy Granite Boys Miah Hasson and Kevin Patten kept the Islanders scoreless the rest of the way.

James McDonald of Everett scored the game-winner in the final period. He was assisted by Hasson. Eleven seconds later Ryan McInnis of Wellesley notched the insurance goal.

The St. Moritz road warriors found themselves on the losing end of a 4-3 score in a game played in Enfield, Conn. against the Springfield Junior Olympics.

In contrast to the first game, this contest was marred by a slew of penalties. The Devils were called for six infractions during the second period alone. Twice during the middle session the naughty Devils were skating with a 5-on-3 disadvantage, but both times they held the fort without giving up a goal. Tim Egan of Braintree and Rich Howe of Milton were particularly impressive on the blue line.

Quincy's Steve Segalla netted the game's first goal on a slap shot that was set up by McInnis. However, the Olympics put the game out of reach with four straight goals.

In a frenzied effort to tie the game, Lynch (from Segalla) and Brett Wood of Newton both lit the lamp to bring the Devils to within one.

It appeared the St. Moritz club had a chance to tie the contest when Springfield was penalized for tripping with under two minutes to play.

Unfortunately for the local bladeboys, the zamboni came on to the ice and the game was called!

Cross Country

North Runners Bow To Powerful Plymouth S.

Last season Plymouth High was the state champion in cross country. Some felt the MIAA-ordered splitting of the Plymouth athletic teams into their respective Plymouth North and Plymouth South High Schools would weaken the cross country programs at those schools.

"Forget about it," said North Quincy High cross country coach Geoff Hennessy. The Plymouth South Panthers easily dispensed of his boys and girls during the opening meet for both schools last Thursday.

The North boys lost 15-50.

The Panther boys found the 3.1-mile course at Pageant Field much to their liking as they placed eight runners ahead of the first Red Raider, Greg Burke.

Burke spent the week fighting a bad cold but, with a time of 19 minutes, 31 seconds, still managed to run 42 seconds faster than his best time of 1993.

Other North scorers were freshman Brian Linskey (19:33), Kevin McCue, Joe Linskey and Steve Cannon. Promising freshman prospect Mike Devin took a tumble over a log and was unable to finish.

The North boys have no seniors this year.

In 1993 the North Quincy girls were the surprise team of the Old Colony League. In the opener last year they punted Plymouth, but this season Plymouth South returned the favor with 15-47 victory.

A mere 16-second gap separated PS's top six runners. "A tight pack like that wins state meets and to date I can only see perhaps Newton North having that kind of depth," said a shocked Hennessy following the meet.

"Everyone is thinking that Falmouth and Barnstable are going for the title, but I'm afraid Plymouth South is going to crash the party," he added. PS blanked Brockton, 15-45, the previous week.

The top North Quincy finishers were Laura Blaikie (seventh) and Kelly Duggan (eighth). Other scorers were Ursula Feurtado, Carrie Jarvie and Diane McGunigle.

North was scheduled to travel to Falmouth Tuesday (Sept. 27) and hosts Barnstable today (Thursday).

Several North runners performed well at Saturday's Bay State Invitational at Franklin Field.

In the varsity race, Blaikie just missed a medal with a 23rd place finish. Duggan finished No. 48.

Cannon and Brian O'Donnell both had top 50 finishes for the varsity boys.

McGunigle collected a medal for her 15th place finish in the J.V. girls' 2.5-mile race. Colleen Cotter, Diane Jordan, Feurtado, Amy Drysdale, Jarvie, Rebecca Gordan, Christine Sullivan and Danielle Rinella also ran well.

The top J.V. boys finishers were McCue, Matt Quinn, Jimmy Wan, Bill Graney, Ted McGillicuddy, Andy Myers, Jeff Chu and Peter Connolly.

For the freshman girls, Kristen Keohane, Jasmine Gonzalez, Deanna Rinella, Diane Yu and Sharon Lee were the top NQ runners in the 2.0-mile race.

For the boys, Devin placed 12th in the freshman 2.0 race. Other strong runners were Brian Linskey, Joe Linskey, Jason Newhall and Chris Duffy.

State Offers College Courses For High School Students

Qualified public high school juniors and seniors who have a B or better grade point average may now be eligible to take public college and university courses for both high school and college credit beginning this fall and free of charge. The announcement was made recently by Sen. Michael Morrissey, along with Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin.

Morrissey sees this program as a unique opportunity for young adults to explore possible future collegiate endeavors.

"High school students have a lot of questions and concerns regarding higher education curriculum. The Dual Enrollment program will help alleviate any fears or concerns they might have as well as give them an opportunity to advance in their academic achievements," he said.

Tobin said the students of the Commonwealth deserve a challenging program like the one being offered by the Education Reform Act. I am sure the students in Quincy will take an avid interest in it.

"This is a tremendous program for the young adults of our Commonwealth who want to challenge themselves with advanced education," said Mariano.

"This program provides a perfect opportunity for college-bound students to not only acclimate themselves with a college curriculum, but also to continue their academic endeavors beyond their usual capacity," said Bellotti.

The Dual Enrollment program, developed under the Education Reform Act of 1993, allows high school students who earn 3.0 grade point averages and/or who are recommended for participation by high school educators, and who comply with the respective higher education institution's admissions criteria, to enroll in public college or university academic or occupational courses at the state's expense. Governor William Weld and the Legislature appropriated $500,000 for Dual Enrollment in the FY95 budget.

For more information on the Dual Enrollment program, call the Executive Office of Education at 727-1313.

Quincy College Will Keep Its Accreditation

The possibility of Quincy College losing its accreditation has been eliminated.

The New England Association of Schools and Colleges has dropped its plan to put the college on probation. The announcement was made Monday night by Interim College President Donald Young at the first meeting of the college's new board of governors.

NEASC officials cited the creation of the new college board as the reason for their decision.

Young called the ruling "great news" for the college. Mayor James Sheets agreed, saying the college would certainly have been put on probation if not for the establishment of the board of governors.

"That threat was never a hollow threat," said Sheets. "The New England Association of Schools and Colleges doesn't play games."

Probationary status could have jeopardized the school's ability to retain its accreditation, which likely would have had an impact on its ability to attract and keep students. Loss of accreditation would also have meant the college was no longer eligible to receive federal grants.

The probation issue first surfaced two years ago, when NEASC officials ruled that the college had outgrown its governance by the city's School Committee. The NEASC said the school had to establish a new independent board of governors to oversee the college.

However, the NEASC deferred its decision on probation to the give the college a chance to establish the new board.

Sheets' home-rule petition for the establishment of the board was approved earlier this year by the City Council, state Legislature and Gov. William Weld, eliminating any and all of the NEASC's concerns.

Leaf Collection Begins Oct. 24

The Quincy Department of Public Works has announced that leaf collection in the City of Quincy will be held Monday, Oct. 24 through Friday, Dec. 2.

Leaves will be picked up curbside in appropriate containers placed to one side from residents' recycling bins and trash barrels on regularly-scheduled trash pickup days.

The DPW considers barrels and reusable containers, large paper sacks designed for leaves, and clear plastic bags to be appropriate containers.

In 1989, 3,000 tons of leaves and yard waste was collected; in 1990, 4,200 tons; in 1991, 2,900 tons; in 1992, 3,500 tons and in 1993, 4,100 tons. The DPW estimates that six weeks will provide residents enough weekend and weekday time to clean their yards.

Leaf and yard waste drop off for Quincy residents will also continue at the DPW Corporation Yard, 55 Sea St. (rear), Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

St. Chrysostom's

Flea Market

St. Chrysostom's Church, 1 Linden St., Wollaston, will hold a flea market Saturday, Oct. 1, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Tables are available on a first-come, first-serve basis.

24 Residents On IRS Unclaimed Refund List

Twenty-four Quincy residents are owed unclaimed federal tax refunds from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

Boston IRS District Director Francine Crowley said the IRS is currently in possession of more than $800,000 in refund checks belonging to people throughout the state.

"The IRS has $832,065.81 in unclaimed refund checks for some 1,496 Massachusetts residents," said Crowley. "The checks, that have been returned by the Postal Service as undeliverable, range in size from $1 to $40,343."

Quincy residents on the list include:

Bertha A. Healy, Paul A. Lasbua, Joseph M. and Lorraine Leonard, Sandra A. Lyon, James C. Phillips, Marcio Martins, Robert J. Callahan, John De-co Scott, Nicole DePalma (Elizabeth Richardi, ex-ec.), Jon C. Andre, Diamond Campbell, Thomas J. and Maria Barrett.

Carolann G. and Robert G. Duguay, Lean C. Kry, Dennis C. Grund, David J. Walsh, Lloyd F. Nolan, Prek Troshani, Chi Hung Tsoi, Erin T. Madigan, Jonathan B. and Jo Anne L. Ward, Dong D. Nguyen, Thomas A. Casey, Matthew Colantonio.

The IRS is encouraging taxpayers who think they are due a refund to call 1-800-829-1040.

Crowley said every year, thousands of checks are returned because the address on the tax return was not legible or the taxpayer moved and did not leave a forwarding address.

Those faced with the problem are asked to request the one-page IRS form, Form 8822 ("Change of Address") by calling 1-800-829-3676.

Board Grants Trial Entertainment License

The Quincy License Board granted a request from Stoooges Restaurant & Pub, 1626 Hancock St for an Entertainment License on a 90-day trial basis, at Tuesday's board meeting.

The motion was made by Fire Chief Thomas Gorman who said in the event the license is transferred, the entertainment license does not go with it.

Cynthia Conley, owner of the restaurant told the board that Karaoke had been successful, but was "dying down". Citing "tough times in Quincy Square" Conley said offering a live band and dancing would keep her patrons at her establishment after they have eaten rather than going elsewhere.

The '96 capacity restaurant would have live entertainment and dancing on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays. Conley said the noise from any band would be equal to that of Karaoke.

City Clerk Joseph Shea told Conley to notify the board when the entertainment begins.

2 Asian Patrolmen Join Quincy Police

Two Asian patrolmen have joined the Quincy Police Department.

The new officers, Bruce Trieu, 29, of Quincy, and Kent Yee, 28, of West Roxbury, were sworn-in by City Clerk Joseph Shea at a City Hall ceremony Tuesday. The first two Asian members of the city's police force were welcomed by Mayor James Sheets, Police Chief Francis Mullen and City Council President Michael Cheney.

City officials said the two officers will help the city's police force serve Quincy's Asian community which comprises 12 to 14 percent of the 86,000 local population.

Yee, a U.S. citizen who was born in Boston, is coming to the Quincy force from the Boston Police Department as a lateral transfer. He formerly served as a police officer in Newton and at Boston University.

Yee, who is fluent in Chinese, will officially join the police department Tuesday, Oct. 11 when he will begin training in CAD (computer aid dispatching), Quincy Police Department procedure manual and policies; firearms training, in-service training updates, and abbreviated field training program.

"Officer Yee will then be ready to go out and serve the citizens of Quincy," Mullen said.

Trieu, a native of Vietnam, moved to the United States 20 years ago and was naturalized in 1981. Fluent in Vietnamese, Cantonese and other Chinese dialects, he has a degree from the University of Massachusetts at Boston in psychology, management and communications.

A former desk officer for Tufts University, Officer Trieu will attend a 17-week Police Academy in Canton starting next Tuesday, Mullen said.

The newest Quincy police officers said they are eager to begin their duties and serve Quincy.

"I am excited to be here. I'm sure I'll be an asset for the community. I realize there's a need for Asian officers and I hope to do the very best I can," said Yee.

Trieu agreed. "I'm excited and I look forward to graduating (from the Police Academy) so that I can serve the people of Quincy," he said.

Yee and Trieu will earn an annual base salary of $23,304, said Personnel Director Kathleen Yaeger. The money for the salaries is available in the police budget because of retirements, she said.

Quincy has one of the area's largest Asian populations, more than 10,000 residents, and many do not speak English.

Until now, there has not been a Cantonese or Chinese-speaking officer or officer of Asian background among more than 200 members on the Quincy police force.

Mayor James Sheets said the city has tried for years to find Asian-American officers, but dozens have been eliminated because they could not speak Cantonese fluently.

On Tuesday, Sheets called the appointments a "benchmark" day in the city's history.

"It is a benchmark day here in the City of Quincy. We're very proud of (Yee and Trieu) because you are two very outstanding candidates joining our police department," the mayor said.

Sheets said Yee and Trieu are the latest additions to the city's Asian-American population which has already made many contributions to the community. He said some of the city's best public school students are Asian-Americans, noting 45 percent of the high school honor societies are Asian-American pupils.

The mayor also said Asian-Americans contribute strong family values which are "sorely lacking" in today's society.

"We simply do not not transmit moral values that people need to make the right decisions. We're fortunate to have an Asian

$600,000 Appropriated For City Sidewalk Repairs

The City Council Monday night appropriated $600,000 for repairs to sidewalks throughout the city.

Mayor James Sheets announced his attention to ask the council for the money--$100,000 for each of Quincy's wards--last month. The funds were taken from the city's free cash account.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said the work is expected to begin next spring. He noted that the streets that are in the worst shape will be given priority.

"It's a pretty hefty list," said Colton. "There are hundreds of sidewalk repairs needed."

Councillors agreed to provide Colton with a list of streets in their wards that need the most work.

A DIET THAT'S NOT SO HOT

There is no question that obesity is a factor in a number of health problems, including heart disease. So when a new diet hits the headlines, people pay attention. One of the latest entries in the battle of the bulge is the spicy food diet, in which foods such as chili peppers and mustard are eaten in large quantities. The theory is that such foods push up the body's metabolism, causing fat to burn at a higher rate. Researchers have found that spicy foods CAN trigger the release of chemicals that tell the body to burn more calories, but the body also appears to get used to eating hot food fairly quickly and settles back into normal metabolic patterns. In short, spicy foods are not a hot ticket to weight loss.

P.S. Frequent ups and downs in weight are hard on the body. Adopt healthy habits you can live with for a lifetime.

To maintain your health, nothing beats a balanced diet, proper nutrition, and regular exercise. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE (472-2550), we offer comprehensive health care with a focus on heart problems and their prevention. We are conveniently located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. Call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli if you have questions. We can inform you what adjustments you can make in your diet and exercise to best maintain your health. Office hours are by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Now, Kennedy 'Dandelions'

Look for more political "dandelions"—these for Senator Kennedy—sprouting on Quincy front lawns.

The Kennedy camp is making telephone call to Quincy residents lining up lawns to place campaign signs on.

The goal apparently, is to offset those signs for Republican challenger Mitt Romney that are on a number of Quincy lawns as reported here last week.

As former Senator Paul Harold noted, it is rare indeed for campaign signs for an office as high as the U.S. Senate to be seen on lawns. Lawns are usually turf for local candidates.

Now, with both camps campaigning at the grass roots level, it would seem to be another indicator of how close a horse race the Kennedy-Romney battle is.

KENNEDY

ANOTHER ELIGIBLE BACHELOR

In Quincy's political ranks has tied the marital knot. Rep. Michael Bellotti, 31, and pretty Gayle Tracey, 26, of South Boston eloped Saturday. They were married at the home of a friend in the Berkshires town of Lee. His brother, BELLOTTI Tom, was the best man.

About 10 close friends were on hand for the wedding and reception following in Stockbridge.

Bellotti says he and his bride who was an administrative assistant in the state Senate, met a year ago.

"We had been talking about getting married for sometime," he says. "And Saturday we just decided to do it."

And, adds the bridegroom, romantically: "We are very much in love. This is a new chapter in my life."

He says they may have a more formal ceremony and reception in Quincy later. They have the blessing of his father, former Atty. Gen. Frank Bellotti and his mother, Maggie.

In the meanwhile they are house-hunting.

YOU MIGHT SAY Quincy's Tobin family could start their own police department and bigger than that of some towns.

TOBIN

Quincy District Court Clerk Arthur Tobin and his wife, Shirley, will be in New Braintree tomorrow to see son, Bruce, graduate from the Massachusetts State Police Academy.

Bruce will become the seventh member of the family in the law enforcement profession.

Another son, Brian, who is Bruce's twin, is a Quincy police officer. Two of the senior Tobin's brothers are police officers: Tim in Quincy and Tom with the Highway Patrol in California.

Two of his nephews, Kevin and Paul Tobin are Quincy and Weymouth police officers. His daughter, Kelly, is in operations planning at the Quincy Police Department. And soon, joining the family will be Quincy officer Don Greenwood. He and Kelly will be married Oct. 16.

And, four of the youngest of the 14 grandchildren say they want to be police officers when they grow up. (And one wants to be a firefighter).

THOSE OF US fortunate to have known him lost a good friend Monday with the death of Vincent "O'Bie" Contrino, long-time owner of Vincent's Barbershop in South Quincy. Vinnie, who was 80, fought a several years battle against illness.

Getting you hair cut at his place was like going to a club. Customers knew one another by first name. And if you wanted to know how any election was going all you had to do was listen to the talk, and sometimes the inevitable arguments.

Vinnie was a friend to all his customers. And when one was ill or confined to his home, he would make house calls to them.

He was a loyal reader of The Sun. In fact, he saved every issue of The Sun for its first 10 years and presented them to me on our 10th anniversary in 1978. And they came in handy. He had copies we no longer had and we were able to preserve them.

We're going to miss him.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1913 POSTCARD is a view of what then was the Wollaston Beach Inn located at the corner of Beach St. and the boulevard. After 80 years, all of the buildings in this view are pretty much still the same. The little shop in the center with the Wollaston Beach Inn sign was used over the years to sell refreshments of all sorts. At the time of this picture, an ice cream sign was on the front door. For a period of time it was a grocery store. Notice the policeman on the corner and the horse and carriage heading up to Billings Road.

Wal-Mart Will Help Quincy's Economy

Editor, The Quincy Sun

Thank God, the Quincy City Council took an objective understanding to the construction of a Wal-Mart over on Quincy Ave. in Quincy Point.

For months, proponents and opponents have debated the issue in the newspapers and at public meetings. No project is ever the perfect one but the Atlantic Construction Co. officials developing the project have done the best job possible in mitigating negative side effects. Opponents had their day and lost but in the end, we will all be winners when Wal-Mart opens its doors to Quincy consumers and those from nearby communities. Jobs will be created, consumers will have more choices and taxpayers will be helped by additional property taxes from the Wal-Mart chain.

Wal-Mart will certainly help Quincy's economy. It was especially a necessity following the news that the South Shore Plaza was doubling in size in next-door Braintree. Braintree has a history of accepting growth, Quincy must not fall behind out of misguided fear of the unknown.

Kudos, also, to City

Councillor Joe LaRaia on his proposal for an urban mall to be located in the parking lot across from the Quincy Courthouse. I like it and can only think about many similar malls located up in the City of Montreal. Older cities don't have to completely surrender to sprawling suburban malls. There is still room for some competition. Building a mall such as the Cambridge Galleria over near Lechmere Square isn't a bad idea. I give LaRaia credit for proposing such an innovative idea. It shows true leadership. Better to have good foresight than 20-20 hindsight, isn't it? A Quincyside Galleria-type mall and the new Wal-Mart could only have a positive effect on Downtown Quincy.

Quincy needs to stop standing still in fright and start moving again. We can't bring back Shopperstown USA but we don't have to settle for a ghost town either. It is time for Quincy pols to look toward the 21st century and help Quincy move forward into it with confidence.

Says Wal-Mart Will Cause The End Of Downtown

Editor: The Quincy Sun:

It's been a long, tough road since moving into my first home in February. The happiness of becoming a first-time home buyer lasted less than a month. Then D.J. McKinnon came to town with Wal-Mart in tow. I thought to myself, this can't be, it's only a joke. The city officials will never allow a mega-retail giant to build a store of 140,000 plus square feet in the middle of a residential neighborhood. Well, the jokes on me. Little did I know you could purchase the City of Quincy for $2 million. If I'd known that at the beginning, things could have been different.

It's now Thursday, Sept. 29, the night of the City Council vote. Is it over, or has it just begun? I say it has just begun. If all goes as D.J. McKinnon plans, the construction for Wal-Mart will start in January of 1995. With the prediction of a grand opening approximately 18 months later, I give Quincy Center the life expectancy of three years.

I guess the joke won't be on me after all. If history repeats itself in Quincy, say good-bye to the downtown. They said it couldn't happen here. It happened in Texas, Illinois, New Jersey and now in California. Why not Quincy? Do you think Wal-Mart cares about the damage they do? No, they just leave town leaving behind of course the 140,000 plus square foot empty building at the top of the hill, at the end of a small side street as Falls Blvd, my driveway.

What's left then? Certainly not the residents of The Falls. They already put their homes up for sale. Yes, that's right, most of those people did just move in this past February and March. The city politicians didn't care about us. We weren't here to vote in the last election and probably won't be here for the next election. This registered voter will come back and say I told you so.

You see, it's not over. It won't be over for a few years now.

Let The Chips Fall Where They May

Editor, The Quincy Sun

The U.S. Senate race in Massachusetts is getting national attention because, for the first time in 32 years, a young contender for the office, Mitt Romney, appears to have more than a fighting chance to unseat the incumbent, Edward Kennedy, whose retirement is long overdue. But there is a problem.

Both of these men, because of their strong pro-abortion stands, have shown a callous disregard for the value of human life, and that presents a dilemma for pro-life voters.

The solution for these voters would be to blank both candidates - and let the chips fall where they may. It might be called sacrificing notes, but, in doing so, pro-life voters will have preserved their integrity and they will have not abandoned their commitment to the unborn baby.

Ellis Pushes For New Library In North Quincy

By PAUL HAROLD

City Council President William Ellis, in a letter to the board of the Thomas Crane Public Library, pushed for construction of the new branch library in North Quincy.

Oct. 6-12, 1961
33 Years Ago

Ellis noted that the $150,000 order sent by the mayor for council approval clearly stated that the branch be built in North Quincy.

Subsequent to council action, the school committee refused to convey land adjacent to North Quincy High School for the new branch, forcing the library board to search for a new site. Included in new sites, however, were two in North Quincy and two in Houghton Neck.

Ellis insisted in his letter, "The fact that one site proved to be unavailable is no reason to make a sharp change in plans and go to another section of the city."

TAXPAYERS ASSOCIATION HAILS NEW TRANSIT ACT

George Yarrington, executive director of the Quincy Taxpayers Association hailed the new South Shore Transportation Act as the most outstanding achievement of the state legislature.

The act would provide rapid transit for the region, but first required that public support in affected communities (Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth and Hingham) be measured by referendum.

Yarrington's praise of the transit legislation was in the QTA's 29th annual report.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

House Approves $230,000 For Adams Site, First Parish Church

The U.S. House of Representatives has approved a request by U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds for $230,000 for the Adams National Historic Site and United First Parish Church in Quincy.

The bill also contains $150,000 for the completion of a study of the Boston Harbor Islands. The National Park Service needs the additional money to finish its study of whether to make the 30 islands a National Recreation Area as a way to increase conservation of the islands and tourism throughout the region.

The study is expected to be completed later this month.

"Making these magnificent islands part of the National Park System has been a top priority for me," said Studds. "I'm pleased the House appropriated the money needed to finish the study."

Of the $230,000 increase for Quincy, half will go to the Adams Site for operating expenses and to continue recently established visitor service programs. The other $115,000 will be used for technical assistance in rehabilitating United First Parish Church, one of the four locations that make up the Adams Site. Known as "Church of the Presidents," it contains the crypts of former Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives.

The increase in operations funds for the Adams Site brings its annual budget to more than $1.3 million for FY95, which began Oct. 1. The $115,000 for the church is a new appropriation. The Park Service cannot directly rehabilitate an active church such as United First Parish, but it is permitted to provide technical assistance in the form of historic surveys and archaeology reports. The church plans to raise several million in private donations to begin needed structural and exterior repairs.

The money was continued in the House-Senate conference report on H.R. 4602, the Interior Department Appropriations, which the House approved today by a voice vote. The measure now goes to the Senate, where it is expected to pass.

Moves To Former Myles Standish School Beechwood Center Now Beechwood On The Bay

Beechwood Community Life Center has relocated from 225 Fenn St. in Wollaston to the former Myles Standish School at 440 East Squantum St. near the entrance to Marina Bay in Squantum.

The new Beechwood on the Bay, which offers a full schedule of pre-school, after school and elder action programs, as well as a music school, adult education and cultural enrichment programs will expand services and programs for all ages as a result of its move. Beechwood is a non-profit, intergenerational service, care and enrichment center.

"We are convinced that Beechwood's commitment to quality care and lifelong learning and its contribution to the City of Quincy will be immeasurably enhanced at the new location," said Executive Director Sharron Beals. "We intend to use the site's rich history and highly visible location to guide and enrich future programs and development."

Beechwood on the Bay's new location is the site of an original American Indian community life center. In 1910, it was the site of the first New England Air Show and later became Dennison Airport where local citizens took flights or learned to fly. The center abuts the former Squantum Air Base which replaced the civilian airport in World War II.

Beals said she plans to develop the cultural and historic significance of the site through community involvement, grants development, center activities and programming.

"I feel Beechwood's intergenerational services will be more of an asset to city, reflecting the many dimensions of Quincy's community life," she said.

Beals said since she took over as Beechwood's executive director in 1990, she and a volunteer board of directors have been successful in developing the center to be 95 percent self-supporting.

Beechwood's move to the bay, guided by Mayor James Sheets, has garnered strong support from the business community. Area business people who actively participated on its transition committee include:

Charles Simpson Jr., Quincy Savings Bank; Robert Curry, Curry Ace Hardware; Jay Asher, WJDA; Terry Fancher, South Shore Chamber of Commerce; Thomas Galvin, Boston Gear; John Graham, Graham Communications; Janet Latham, Eastern Nazarene College; Ronald Zoolek, South Shore Chamber of Commerce; Doris Sinkovich, Quincy Hospital; Atty. William McDonald; William Lucey, O'Connor & Drew; Edmund O'Leary, Feenan Financial Group; Michael Joyce, Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lebane; James Mullane, CPA; and Frank Miller, Wollaston Market.

Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall's Brain-tree Alternative Corps, the Quincy Department of Public Works, civic and service organizations, volunteers of all ages, and Beechwood staff, members and attendees donated time, materials and goodwill during the 90-day renovation project. Quincy Serve-a-Thon volunteers also assisted on moving day last Saturday.

"The success of this move and uninterrupted programming and services was dependent on the readiness of the site and full support from the city," said Beals. "The extraordinary response from both the city and business community was gratifying, reinforcing the important role Beechwood plays in enhancing business and community life throughout Quincy and the surrounding areas."

A Milestone For The Yard Rock Cafe Club Celebrates 30 Years In Quincy

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

Joseph Hajjar, owner of and bartender at The Yard Rock Cafe, celebrated a special birthday last Saturday as his family-run bar marked its 30th anniversary.

The Yard Rock, 132 East Howard St., Quincy, has become a staple in the city's bar and club circuit for many different reasons, according to Hajjar.

During an interview at his historic bar, Hajjar, 44, of Quincy, remembered the earlier years of the business, traced its evolution and described the atmosphere of The Yard Rock.

Thirty years ago, Joe's Lunch opened with Joseph Hajjar Sr. and his wife Nancy as the initial owners.

"It is a genuinely family-run business," said Hajjar, son of the original owners. "Everyone helped contribute."

After working 10 years at Quincy Motor Club, Joe Hajjar became the owner in October 1981 when his parents retired.

The name The Yard Rock originated in May 1989 from Steven Murphy, a Quincy guitarist and a close friend of Hajjar's. Murphy also went on to become the first blues performer at The Yard Rock.

"He (Murphy) wanted to raise money for a girl who was hit by a car on Sea Street and we thought him performing was a good way," said Hajjar.

Today, The Yard Rock operates out of what is now also known as Joe's Pub.

Although he is not a graduate of any college or university, Hajjar said he earned a "doctorate degree in streetology" in his 13 years at Joe's Pub and The Yard Rock.

"I have finely tuned my person skills as well as kept in touch with my clientele," he said. "You could never gain the same amount of psychological and social skills I have amassed at any college."

"When the owner is the bartender, which I am, you really get to know your customers on a personal level."

Inducted into the National Bartenders Hall of Fame in 1989, Hajjar said his bar was a big attraction to the Quincy Shipyard before it closed. Because of the large numbers of customers from the shipyard, Hajjar said his bar was "stigmatized."

"We were stigmatized as a hard hat, all-male, working environment business," he said.

But as times have changed, so have Hajjar and The Yard Rock.

In 1986, Hajjar, trying to remain successful after the shipyard closed, began experimenting with new ideas. One was the construction of an indoor basketball court which received national attention during the National Basketball Association Playoffs.

"The basketball court was the lead into our whole new life," he said. "We even conducted interviews with television stations during the playoffs."

But despite his many transitions, Hajjar has not forgotten the people who helped make him the success he is today.

Various different-colored hard hats representing everyone from supervisors to machine operators line the aged wooden walls of the bar surrounded by photographs of The Three Stooges and other memorabilia from the past. Each hard hat symbolizes a different occupation as well as the different personalities of the people who went to his bar.

"I don't think of it as a memorial but rather a remembrance. A lot of my remembrances from the '60s are on the walls," he said, pointing to the numerous Three Stooges and Little Rascals photographs as well as the pictures of himself and the bar during their younger days.

Hajjar said the atmosphere which The Yard Rock tries to promote is one of nostalgia and aesthetics.

"The people are greeted by a nostalgic feeling, an atmosphere, that is very much present here," he said.

He also noted that he takes pride in the many social and community endeavors he has taken. From instigating a nationally-recognized "Say No To Cocaine" program to raising money for Muscular Dystrophy, Hajjar has been involved in many different charities.

"You can be rich many different ways. It's not always a matter of financial status," he said.

"You can be rich financially, but it's more important to be rich as a person and give something back to the community."

The Yard Rock Cafe has evolved from the traditional barroom environment of the shipyard workers to a more contemporary, "hip" club, Hajjar said.

"I would describe this bar as the best bar around," he said. "I don't like to call it a bar now; it has evolved into a music room. We are one of the most recognized social rooms in New England."

Even though The Yard Rock features only blues and rock music—including such performers as Clutch Grabwell and 15-year-old guitar phenom Monster Mike—Hajjar thinks he attracts a diverse audience.

"Usually a generation gap exists between the older generation and the younger generation, especially where music is concerned, but that is not the case with my customers and me," said Hajjar. "Sometimes I'll have a younger customer tell me their parents recommended the bar and, as a result, they wanted to check it out. And that is proof of how music can bridge the different generations."

Hajjar said his bar attracts not only young and old but also people from various social backgrounds, professions and cultures.

"When people come to The Yard Rock, they're coming to see good bands at an affordable price, and I think I provide that," he said.

Different Opinions And Values

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I was quite disturbed by Mr. MacKinnon's personal attack on me in his letter in last week's Quincy Sun.

Mr. MacKinnon's statements that I criticized senior citizens for wanting more and better transportation and that I do not understand the needs of senior citizens are completely false. I resent any suggestion that my views in opposition to Wal-Mart translate into a desire to withhold services from the elderly.

I have many years of professional social work experience in advocating for services for the elderly. In the 1980s in Massachusetts I was instrumental in bringing to light the fact that low income senior citizens did not have the same access to nursing home care as those who could afford to pay. I have completed research and published articles on the health care and social needs of the elderly. I have great personal interest as well; my mother relocated from out-of-state to live in senior housing in Quincy. Mr. MacKinnon stated that because I just recently moved to Quincy I fail to understand the needs of the senior citizen community. By his own logic, Mr. MacKinnon has no understanding because he lives in Hingham.

As a university professor, I often remind my students we can have different opinions and values than others but that it is important to disagree in a respectful manner. Personal attacks can only serve to aggravate and cloud the issues further.

Humane Society Raising Funds For Spay-Neuter Program

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Statistics show that every three seconds two animals die in an animal shelter throughout our nation! Approximately 13 to 17 million dogs and cats in the United States are killed each year. The pounds are full of wonderful pets that are "put to sleep," a term that simply sanitizes the act. So many unclaimed and unwanted pets forces us to face the reality of overpopulation. The South Shore Humane Society therefore, concentrates on its spay/neuter program in the hope that with fewer born, fewer will die.

Established in 1974 as a non-profit organization, according to the Internal Revenue Code, our society works with 13 area veterinarians.

Approximately 3,000 kittens are born in the United States every hour! The cumulative offspring from one female cat can total 420,715 cats in seven years. Two-thirds of our calls relate to cats, domestic or feral (wild or homeless). In this day and age, when you allow your cat to go out, you are putting it at grave danger and risk, and with the rabies epidemic outbreak, we advise that you keep your cat indoors where it will remain healthy and safe and can learn to be happy.

The South Shore Humane Society is raising funds toward its spay/neuter program by selling the Entertainment Book. Each book contains hundreds of "Two-for-One" discounts for fine dining, family dining, movies, sports activities, special attractions and hotels...50 percent on almost everything. The Entertainment Book is being sold by the society for $30. To order your book, contact Althea Griffin, president, at 335-0661.

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

How To Report A Suspected Crime

The police need to have accurate information as quickly as possible about a suspicious activity or crime in progress.

•Give your name and identify yourself as a member or a Watch group.

•Describe the event in as brief a manner as possible. Where, when, how, and who did it?

•Tell if the crime is in progress or if it has occurred.

•Describe the suspect—what sex, race, age, height, weight, hair color, clothing, accent, beard or mustache, and distinctive characteristics or clothing.

•Describe the vehicle if one was involved—color, make, model, year, license plate, special markings, dents, which way did it go?

Keep Neighborhood Watch Going And Growing

Just because crime declines, don't let your Neighborhood Watch group die. Stay alert and aware, be neighborly, and look to other activities to enhance community safety and well-being.

•Conduct home security surveys and Operation Identification for elderly and handicapped residents.

•Organize meetings that focus on current issues such as isolation of the elderly, drug abuse, crime in schools, after school programs, child safety, and victim services.

•Publish a newsletter that gives local crime news, recognizes block captains and other persons who have helped the police by reporting, and highlights community activities.

•Make a resource list for your Watch group of numbers to call for emergencies, child abuse, victim services, lighting, street repair, mediation services, youth activities, etc.

•Work with local building code officials to require adequate locks and other security devices in new homes and buildings.

•Organize a community clean-up day.

•Start a Safe Home Program for children.

•Don't forget events like a Fourth of July parade or a pot luck dinner that give neighbors a chance to get together.

Remember, Watch Groups are not vigilantes and do not assume the role of the police. They only ask citizens to be alert, observant, and caring and serve as extra eyes and ears for law enforcement and for their neighbors.

If you have any questions, or would like to start a neighborhood watch group, write to:

Chief Francis E. Mullen, Quincy Police Dept., One Sea St., Quincy, MA 02169.

October Is National Car Care Month

October is National Car Care Month, when the automotive service industry and many community organizations focus attention on the need for conscientious vehicle maintenance.

Administered by the Car Care Council, the campaign includes voluntary vehicle emission and safety checks in locations throughout the country.

"Year after year our check lanes identify hundreds of vehicles whose exhaust pipes are dumping contaminants into the air we breathe," notes Council President Don Midgley. "Nearly 14 percent of the thousands of vehicles we've checked have failed our fairly liberal emission tests. More often than not, the cause can be traced to something as simple as a dirty air filter, a worn spark plug or lack of routine tune-up maintenance."

Midgley insists periodic maintenance is the first step in reducing harmful emissions.

"We hear about plans for alternate fuel, alcohol blends, even car-pooling or restricted driving in some localities," he says. "One proposal is the 'Junk the Clunkers' plan, offering a bounty on older cars to get them off the road."

"But as we get rid of the older cars the pollution problem doesn't necessarily go away. Even a late model vehicle, with its various functions, becomes a polluter when it's denied regular maintenance. In fact, 7 percent of late model cars failed the emissions test, meaning they were wasting fuel as well."

Watch for an October Car Care Month event in your community.

Winter Tips

By PETER PALMER

Now that winter is around the corner with its snow, ice and frigid cold weather, is your car going to make it?

Petar's Automotive reminds motorists of the importance of preventive maintenance. Among the procedures that should be considered:

Changing the anti-freeze should be done every two years. Things to be done regularly include checking the hoses for cracks and wear, checking clamps, checking the thermostat and gasket so heat blows efficiently for the cold weather, flushing out the radiator and replacing with new anti-freeze.

Other important procedures include pressure testing the system for leaks in the radiator, checking the radiator for efficient cooling fins, checking electrical fan operation to cool down the radiator, checking proper operation of the defroster, checking operation of the blenders and heater control cable.

It makes no sense to wait for a breakdown. Have your car checked and repaired before the winter gets here. Find the problems with your car before they find you.

RED RAIDER JAMIE Karvelis (No. 47) looks to make a block as running back Shawn Nee fights for yardage. Nee got good protection all night as he ran for 123 yards, his second 100-yard-plus outing in three games this season.

Host Barnstable Friday

Nee Returns To Form, North Wins, 27-7

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

In North Quincy's 27-7 home-opening victory last Friday night, fans took notice of two things: another strong Shawn Nee performance and a preview of the Red Raiders' football future.

North takes the field again Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium when the Red Raiders of Barnstable come to town. Barnstable is 1-2 this season, beating Weymouth, 10-6, last week. North lost last season's meeting with Barnstable, 13-3.

Nee, coming off just 49 rushing yards a week ago, exploded in the first half, rushing for 110 of his 123 yards, including a 65-yard touchdown run in the first quarter that helped North take the lead.

Another outstanding performance was turned in by sophomore Brian Walsh. Walsh caught three passes for 47 yards and played superb defense. "Walsh is coming around very well," said head coach Ken McPhee. "He is turning into a very fine player."

Others starring on offense included quarterback Sean Dolbear (9 of 14 for 160 yards and one touchdown), Derek Epps, Jamie Karvelis, Keith Martinson and Glenn Peterson. Dolbear also rushed for a touchdown.

"This was Dolbear's best game at quarterback by far this year," said McPhee. "He passed the ball very well tonight."

The defense also played well, allowing the Panthers 24 yards of total offense in the second half. They also sacked the Plymouth South quarterback four times, including twice in a three-play span late in the first quarter to help the offense get the ball back with a tie score. Great performances were turned in by Walsh, Sean Kennerman, Chris Ritchie, Rob Ragusa, Toby Odom, Kenny Burke and Derek Epps. McPhee had high praise for Odom and Ragusa, who recorded several key tackles and two-and-a-half sacks.

North received an early scare when the Panthers, on their second possession of the game, went on a six-play, 79-yard drive capped by Danny Moyer's score from 9 yards out with 3:11 left in the first. Tommy Aldanado kicked the extra point for the surprising 7-0 lead. The touchdown sparked a Super Bowl-like celebration among the Panther players and fans as it was the first touchdown scored in the school's brief history.

On the ensuing kickoff, Epps returned the ball to

Barnstable At A Glance

Record: 1-2, beat Weymouth, 10-6, last week. 7-2-1 last season, 6-2, tied for second in the Old Colony League. Their 1-2 record is deceiving - the two losses came against high-powered Bishop Stang and St. John's Prep by a combined three points.
Coach: Paul Demanche (sixth year, 33-19-1).
Previous Meeting: Barnstable beat NQ, 13-3, last season. Two long pass plays hurt North, who played superbly against Barnstable and their highly rated runner Jason O'Neil.

Offense: Quarterback Micky Fein is one of the top passers in the Old Colony League, however his receiving corps is not particularly explosive. His top targets from last season all graduated. The OL is large and experienced - three linemen started last season.
Defense: The defensive mainstays are their small but hard-hitting linebacking corps - A.J. Langston and Mike Duffley both started last season.

the Raider 35. After Peterson was held for no gain, Nee was handed the ball and, eluding six would-be tacklers, raced 65 yards down the sideline for the score. He then kicked the extra point to tie the score 7-7 after the first quarter.

North dominated the second quarter, holding the ball for most of the time. On their second possession, Nee got things started with a 28-yard punt return. With the ball on the Plymouth South 27, North went on their second scoring drive, featuring an 18-yard Dolbear to Walsh pass that put the ball on the 5. A Panther penalty moved the ball to the 3 and set up first-and-goal for the Raiders. On third down Nee took it in from the 1 to give North the lead. Nee kicked his second extra point and North took a 14-7 lead into the locker room.

North struck again on their first offensive series of the third quarter. They needed just three plays to reach the end zone. Dolbear threw a scoring pass to Epps on a play that covered 44 yards. Nee's kick went wide, but North led 20-7.

The Red Raider defense got stronger in the second half, holding the Panthers offense to practically nothing. Dolbear ended North Quincy's final scoring drive (10 plays, 56 yards) by running the ball himself from 20 yards out. Nee kicked the final point of the game to give the Raiders the 27-7 win.

Red Raider Gerry Fernandez left the game early in the fourth quarter with a thigh contusion, the same injury he suffered last week. He is listed as day-to-day.

Bregoli Leads Apaches In 28-0 Romp

Running back Chris Bregoli scored three touchdowns to lead the North Quincy Apaches to a 28-0 win over the West Quincy Elks.

Bregoli opened the scoring with a 1-yard plunge in the second quarter. The two-point conversion effort was stopped by the Elks.

Later in the second, Devin O'Brien intercepted an Elks pass and returned it 35 yards for a touchdown. Bregoli punched in for the two to give the Apaches a 14-0 lead at the half.

On the second play of the third quarter, Bregoli raced 42 yards for a touchdown. He followed that feat with a 70-yarder at the end of the third. Pat Dolbear's two-point conversion gave the Apaches their final points of the contest.

Bregoli was the only one to carry the pigskin well for the Apaches. Dolbear, Corey Awed and Fred Elfman also did a good job running. QB Brian Doyle looked sharp in his first start at the helm.

On defense it was O'Brien, Elfman, Bregoli, Dolbear, Chris Carthas, Will Tracey and Frank McNamara who shut down the West Quincy attack.

The play of lanky Elks quarterback Mike Clancy impressed players and coaches on both sides of the field.

In the weekend's late contest, the Quincy Point Panthers topped the Houghs Neck Manets, 12-6.

Play At Plymouth South Friday Brown, Quincy Race Past Taunton

By KERRY BYRNE

Quincy High School tailback Sam Brown, until now referred to only as the massive, bruising, punishing Sam Brown, shall heretofore be known as the shifty, speedy, flashy Sam Brown.

In Friday's 38-18 win over the host Taunton Tigers (2-1), the 230-pound running back ran for 233 yards on 22 carries and proved he is more than just muscle by scoring on second-half touchdown runs of 54, 36 and 41 yards. Each time, Brown turned simple off-tackle plays into long scores by outracing the entire Taunton secondary.

The win improved Quincy to 2-1 overall and 1-1 in the Old Colony League.

Brown has over 500 yards rushing in just three games. He should add to that total Friday when the Presidents play at Plymouth South at 7 p.m. The newly-formed Panthers are 0-3. Until this season they played with Plymouth North as the combined Plymouth High School Eagles.

"They were stunting and keying to stop Sam," said Quincy head coach Jack Raymer of the Taunton defense, "but we finally broke him (Brown) open in the second half. We know we can move the ball, I think we proved that tonight."

Raymer and his Presidents also proved that you don't have to pass the ball to have a quick-strike offense. Of their six touchdown drives, only one took more than three plays and only one score came through the air. Quincy wasted no time getting on the board as burly fullback Bill Dunn - whose blocking has been one of the keys to Brown's success all season - took the third play from scrimmage up the middle for a 17-yard touchdown. Greg Santoro's kick made the score 7-0.

A Taunton TD early in the second quarter made the score 7-6, but Quincy's sophomore field general Mark Glynn threw a pass to receiver Terry Bowman for a one-play, 48-yard scoring drive that made the score 13-6 at the half.

It looked like the Presidents would be in for a battle when Taunton's Eddie Holt returned an interception 25 yards for a touchdown to make the score 13-12 in the third. But Brown's long runs - on drives of one, two and two plays - put the Presidents in command of the contest.

Glynn closed out the scoring with a 2-yard plunge late in the fourth quarter. It capped an 11-play, 50-yard march that chewed up most of the game's final six minutes.

"That's a tough team we played tonight. They played well. But give my guys credit, they played even better," said Raymer. "They (Taunton) scored 'em quick but we came right back each time."

More impressive than Quincy's big-play offense was their tenacious defense. They held Taunton quarterback Steve Santos and his four-wideout, run-and-shoot attack to just 92 yards and four completions in 18 attempts.

Santos was also sacked eight times. Senior Mike Flagg, fast becoming the most feared pass rusher in the Old Colony League, dumped Santos twice and was in on three other sacks with Butch Palaza and Greg Santoro. In his first game at middle linebacker Dunn put two solo notches on his belt and Ed Anderson and Mike Feeley also got in on the sack action.

Anderson was destructive throughout the contest - his sack caused a fumble that was recovered by Feeley, he made two other tackles for losses, and he almost took Santos' head off when the Tiger

Plymouth South At A Glance

Record: 0-3, lost to North Quincy, 27-7, last week. Last season record not applicable - Plymouth South and Plymouth North Highs played as a combined Plymouth High Squad.

Coach: Donald Dorr (first year; 28-12 in four seasons at Barnstable). Dorr was hired just days before practice began in August.

Previous Meeting: None.

Last year Quincy lost a tough 7-6 decision to Plymouth High. Plymouth won the Old Colony League.

Offense: Plymouth South has showed little in the way of offense. They've scored just 12 points in three games this year. Their touchdown against NQ last week was cause for great celebration as it was their first of the season and the first in school history.

Defense: PS could be in trouble against RB Sam Brown and his beefy linemen. They've given up 81 points in three games, most of them on the ground. Barring a mental lapse or Biblical flood, the Presidents should be able to move at will on the ground.

Player to Watch: RB Danny Moyer.

Santorio, who recovered a Holt fumble, and Mike Sheffer, who made an interception. For 5-foot-7-inch Sheffer, it was just another in a string of great plays. The mini-defensive back was locked on to 6-foot-1-inch wide receiver Chad Soderberg and held him to goose eggs across the board. Sheffer broke up several passes, giving him a half dozen deflections in the last two games.

"The whole secondary (Sheffer, Bowman, Santoro, Chris McArdle and Matt Miller) was outstanding," said Raymer. "Taunton's an explosive team but we shut them down. Our defense has really come together as a group. Coming into the season defense was a question mark (only three returning starters) but it's really been a positive for us through the first three games."

The President defense has allowed just 10 completions and 140 yards in 37 passing attempts this season. They have registered 12 sacks for minus-88 yards. Flagg alone has made 10 sacks or stops behind the line of scrimmage.

Offensively, it was linemen Palaza, Feeley, Matt Strauchon, Pete Kolson and Jeff Burrell and tight ends Santoro and Jon Ryan who controlled the game. Quincy rushed for nearly 300 yards behind their aggressive blocking. Dunn and Brown were virtually untouched during their scoring runs.

The Presidents have gained over 600 yards on the ground this season.

Taunton's Holt will be a force to reckon with this season and next. The junior rushed for 113 yards on 14 carries - the first 100-yard outing allowed by Quincy this season. He scored his second TD on a 55-yard run in the fourth quarter.

After the Presidents play at Plymouth South Friday, they host No. 1 ranked New Bedford next Friday (Oct. 14).

"We don't want a letdown this week against Plymouth South. We'll just go out and do what we have to do and try not to look ahead to New Bedford," said Raymer.

North Edges Quincy, 3-2, In Rain-Soaked Thriller

The Quincy High and North Quincy High boys' soccer teams clashed in a thriller on the rain-soaked pitch of Veterans' Memorial Stadium Saturday night.

The Red Raiders edged the Presidents, 3-2, on the strength of two Tom Bianco goals.

Bianco's two strikes came in the first half and gave North Quincy a 2-0 lead as the end of the period approached. Peter Johnson and Jim Finn assisted on the two goals.

Just before intermission, Walter Jara netted a goal for Quincy to tighten the battle.

Jara scored again in the second half to tie the contest at 2-2. Alex Cordena assisted.

A goal that would have been Jara's third tally of the evening and the go-ahead score was disallowed due to an offside call. With five minutes left in the game, Red Raider Dan Stone took advantage of the opportunity and scored a beautiful goal - the game winner - after a nice pass from Mike Johnston.

North Quincy coach Jim Johnston thought the contest was a great event for both teams. "It was an exciting game 'cause it was very close. It was a lot of fun for us and lot of fun for Quincy soccer in general," said the NQ skipper.

Quincy High coach Barry Austin agreed: "Everybody I talked to thoroughly enjoyed it."

Fullbacks Ralph DiMatia of North and Jason Downey of Quincy backboned their respective defenses. "Ralph was busy all night. He played very well," said Johnston.

"Jason, and every one of our kids, played 100 percent," said Austin.

Quincy JV Offense Rolls In 33-14 Win

The Quincy High School JV football team rolled up 422 yards of offense in a 33-14 win over the Taunton Tigers.

The JV Presidents are 2-1. They beat Marshfield and lost to Bridgewater-Raynham.

Sophomore fullback Tim Santos opened the scoring for Quincy with a 1-yard plunge in the first quarter. Tim Lewis, a freshman called up to perform kicking duties for the JV Presidents, booted the extra point.

Quarterback John Hanafin threw a 12-yarder to Jon Ryan for Quincy's second score of the game. The Presidents took a 13-6 lead into the locker room.

Quincy linemen Jay Fennelly, Jake Drohan, Greg Fernald, Chuck Feeley and Paul Daley took control of the contest in the second half, allowing sophomore wingback Mike Russo to score on a 43-yard jaunt and sophomore quarterback Scott Pye to cross the goal line on a 17-yard bootleg.

The Presidents' other score came on a 52-yard Hanafin to Eric Nunez scoring strike.

A faked extra-point kick following the Russo touchdown resulted in a Pye to Ryan two-point conversion pass.

Halfback Kevin Connolly did everything but score for the JV Presidents. The sophomore speedster pounded out 131 yards on 16 carries.

Defensively, Anthony Lallis (11 tackles), Sev Tan (five tackles), Sean Thomas (two sacks) and Dan Wong (two sacks) were the big stoppers. Defensive backs Tan, Pye, Nunez and Ed McGee smothered the run-and-shoot "Tiger Express" passing game.

Cross Country

North Boys And Girls Fall To Barnstable

The North Quincy boys' and girls' cross country teams fell to Barnstable last week at Pageant Field.

For the Red Raiders, the meet was one in a string of tough matches. "We meet the toughest teams first, then get some relief, then finish with Quincy," said coach Geoff Hennessy of his squad's schedule.

Despite the strong opponent, the North boys looked surprisingly good in an 18-39 loss to the Red Raiders of the Cape.

Freshman Brian Linskey held second place briefly through the last half-mile of the 3.1-mile course before being overtaken by two Barnstable runners and finishing fourth.

Steve Cannon (sixth, 19 minutes, 29 seconds), Kevin McCue (eighth, 19:38) and Brian O'Donnell (10th, 19:58) all ran their fastest times of the year on the Pageant Field course. All but two NQ boys ran faster than previously.

The girls had less luck than the boys, falling 16-43.

Barnstable took the first four spots before senior Laura Blaikie came across the finish line. Colleen Cotter (seventh, 24:18), Ursula Feurtado (ninth, 24:48), Diane Jordan (10th, 24:55) and Carrie Jarvie were other top North Quincy scorers. Cotter, Jordan, Vivian Chan, Amy Drysdale and Lauren Molloy made big improvements.

Injury was added to insult as Kelly Duggan, Erica Doherty and Diane McGunigle are out of the lineup with various problems.

North was scheduled to meet Old Colony League rival Silver Lake Tuesday (Oct. 4). Hennessy said the Lakers "always come out big against us. It's like their whole season is predicated on beating us."

North's girls beat Silver Lake last year for the first time. The boys have yet to beat them.

Two Second-Half Goals Give North Girls Win

Two second-half goals led the North Quincy girls' soccer team to an exciting 2-1 come-from-behind win over Quincy Saturday afternoon at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Both Red Raider goals were set up by well-placed corner kicks from the foot of Kristen Kelley. Hillary O'Donoghue took the first corner kick and passed to Nancy Distasio who put the ball in the net to tie the game in the second half.

On the second Red Raider goal, Kelley sent the corner kick to Kim Barry who netted the game-winner.

Kelly Howard scored the lone Quincy goal in the first half. Kara McSweeney assisted.

The game featured tough defensive play by both teams. North Quincy fullbacks Amanda Rork and Laurie Flynn and midfielder Annie Bergen played brilliantly. Quincy fullbacks Jessica DiBona, Janet Kane and Jessica Barry were equally impressive.

"This was a great game for all the girls," said North Quincy coach Karen Howard. "I think we had an advantage because this game was Quincy's fifth in six days. They had to be tired."

Despite the loss, Presidents' coach Sonya Herring was pleased with her team's effort. "Overall, we played an excellent game, no one individual stood out over the others."

Any Quincy-North Quincy match-up is like a family rivalry, but this contest truly was a battle among families. Kelly Howard, the Quincy goal scorer, is the daughter of North Quincy coach Karen Howard. North Quincy goal scorer Kim Barry is the sister of Quincy defender Jessica Barry. The two Barrys went head-to-head for much of the game. On this day, Kim got the upper hand.

As part of an agreement between mother and daughter, the Howards chose to cool off after the heated contest.

"After the game we stayed to watch the boys play for awhile," said Howard the coach. "We're both too competitive and I think it helps us to have some time to cool down after we play each other."

North Quincy Golfers Tied Atop OCL

The North Quincy High School golf team is off to a fantastic start, tied atop the Old Colony League standings at 9-2 with perennial OCL power Barnstable.

After back-to-back 500 seasons, the Red Raiders have already qualified as a team for the state tournament scheduled to begin Oct. 24 at Pocasset Country Club.

For the first time they have beaten every team in the league. A win at Barnstable was their first ever over the Red Raiders of the Cape. Barnstable has nearly 80 golfers on their squad, North 16.

Among the 16 however, coach Rick Hutchins boasts a wealth of talented young linksmen. Seniors Keith Cross and Brendan O'Brien are the team's co-captains. They average 37 and 39, respectively, for nine holes.

As a sophomore Cross medaled in the Old Colony League tournament. Last year he finished sixth in the OCL tourney and eighth in the E. Mass tourney. O'Brien placed 10th in the OCLs as a sophomore and seventh last fall. He finished just behind Cross at ninth in the E. Mass tourney.

Also clubbing the ball extremely well for the Red Raiders is first-year senior golfer Chris Geary. Geary may be "the best golfer in the OCL," said Hutchins. The senior averages 36 for nine holes, barely over par. He is 11-0 in the league and shot a 79 Friday at the Southeast Amateurs, just two strokes shy of a qualifying score. Cross shot the same at the SE Amateurs, also falling just short.

"Some of these kids are scratch golfers, very good players," said the coach.

"Cross and O'Brien have been the leaders for three years, but it is a team effort to win. Everyone has contributed. It is everybody kicking in that has made this team successful," said Hutchins.

Among the other players who have led North to their outstanding record are senior Steven Heroux (40 average in his first year of organized golf), senior Dave Doherty (42 average), sophomore Brian Degan (43), sophomore Dave Klingenstein (43) and senior Matt Fatseas (44).

NQ's JV golfers are junior Dan Hughes, sophomores Eric Wood, Tim Wood, Bill Graney, Nick Shea and Mike Struzik, and freshmen Vinnic Pivnicny and Bill Connolly. Eric Wood was slated to get his first start Wednesday (Oct. 5) against Silver Lake in place of the injured Fatseas.

Hutchins and his team expressed thanks to Presidents Golf Course pro Arthur Ciccone and his staff for the work they've done for the North Quincy golfers. "They've been instrumental in helping our team throughout the year. They're an important part of our program," he said.

The Red Raiders play their home meets at Presidents.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

There is an old-fashioned word that is used rarely these days. The word is "mettle." It means courage and even more than courage. It is an ingrained capacity to bear up under strain. To be on one's mettle is to be roused or prepared to do one's best with spirit, courage and ardor.

Nathaniel Hawthorne, who traveled a difficult road before he found the key to triumph, wrote, "He must keep his faith in himself while the incredulous world assails him with its utter disbelief."

That, I suspect, is where all of us have to begin when our hopes are thwarted. Faith in ourselves is one thing we never can afford to surrender. It is the key to "mettle," the courage to keep going when we feel drained. When we cease to believe in ourselves and our God-given powers and possibilities, we are finished. It is the men/women who can go on believing in himself/herself while the incredulous world assails him with its utter disbelief who comes thru undefeated. And, yes, these are times to test the "mettle" of us all.

LOCAL, STATE AND Federal officials attended a press conference Tuesday at the Fore River Shipyard announcing the signing of a long-term lease by a Greek shipbuilding company for cruise ship construction and repair work. The lease, if finalized, could create thousands of new jobs at the idle site. From left, Rep. Ron Mariano, Rep. Michael Bellotti, Cong. Gerry Studds, Gov. William Weld, Mayor James Sheets and Sen. Edward Kennedy.

development could take place and move forward. He also commended Studds whom he said knows more about shipbuilding in the U.S. Congress than anyone else.

"We'll continue to work with Gerry Studds and make it three out of three," Kennedy said referring to the number of major hurdles which must be cleared.

Officials said the lease agreement could lead to the creation of thousands of new jobs in an industry where the average wage is $15 per hour. Studds said the shipyard, which closed in 1986 after several productive centuries of shipbuilding, can be the "lifeblood of this region's economy again."

Sheets said the announcement is a "giant step" in dispelling setbacks which have plagued the yard since it closed eight years ago.

"The city of Quincy will experience an incredible economic infusion when NSI begins shipbuilding in the Fore River shipyard," Sheets said. "This community respects its shipbuilding tradition and looks forward to the new jobs generated by NSI and by the service industries needed to support the yard."

Sheets also applauded MWRA Director Douglas McDonald whom he called "an unsung hero" and vital player in this process.

Regency has negotiated a wage-and-benefits deal with the union representing shipbuilders on the East Coast, whose workers would staff the yard.

Roger Torrey, president of Local 5, expressed his hope that a deal could be worked out soon. "You have brought a big family together and we hope to get together again very soon," Torrey said.

Terms of the lease were not disclosed but state Secretary of Economic Affairs Gloria Larson said the deal, which includes rent relief, tax incentives and state funds for site cleanup will "easily exceed $10 million."

The worldwide demand for new ships is exploding, according to Studds, and analysts predict new vessels worth more than $350 billion could be built over the next 10 years. Shipyards in Europe are booked up for much of the next decade, and firms are searching the U.S. for places to build cruise ships, Studds said.

If Northeast Shipbuilders is able to build ships in Quincy, maritime companies will be able to bypass this backlog and still comply with the Jones Act, which requires vessels to be U.S.-flagged, U.S.-built and U.S.-crewed to transport goods and passengers between American ports, the Congressman said.

A shipyard of some sort has existed in Quincy since 1696 and the current shipyard was founded in 1885. General Dynamics closed the yard in 1986 and sold the facility to the MWRA.

VICTORIA REGGIE KENNEDY, wife of Sen. Edward Kennedy, joined Mayor James Sheets and other city officials at the announcement Tuesday of a new Quincy Recreation Department program for city youth. The program, which will be run at eight Quincy public schools, begins Oct. 24.

Getaway youth center that operates on those evenings.

"We don't want to conflict with a program that already exists," he said.

Among the gym activities that will be available through the program will be floor hockey, tag football, basketball and others. Swimming will also be available at the Lincoln-Hancock pool.

In addition, the program calls for a "second phase" that will be operated during the spring and summer months. Although plans are not yet complete, Welch said the second phase could include a new neighborhood basketball league that may be divided in accordance with the city's six wards.

Welch also praised Sheets for his hard work in developing the program, which he said will offer Recreation Department employees "an ideal opportunity" to work closely with city youth.

"He's (Sheets) found the money to match leadership with facilities," he said.

Sheets said the program will be funded by about $32,000 from the city's federally-funded Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) account and $28,000 from its Urban Development Action Grant (UDAG) account, which also receives its funding from the federal government. He added that he will ask the City Council to appropriate the funds for the program at an upcoming council meeting.

The mayor praised Sen. Kennedy for helping to make it possible for such programs to be funded by those revenue sources.

Mrs. Kennedy, speaking on behalf of her husband, in turn applauded Sheets for his leadership in the matter and said the program is indicative of what can be accomplished when a mayor and a federal official such as the senator develop a "strong partnership."

Both Sheets and Welch thanked the Quincy Public Schools for their cooperation in helping to make the endeavor a success.

After the press conference, School Supt. Eugene Creedon said keeping the schools open after regular hours will allow residents to get the most out of their tax dollars.

"Hopefully, it will justify to the taxpayer that there is a real reason to keep these buildings in shape," he said.

The new program will have walk-in registration at each location and Quincy residents may attend the location of their choice or register for multiple sites on different evenings. For more information, call 396-1394.

community which is already making a contribution," he said, adding Yee and Trieu will "help fill a great need."

Cheney said the city has "put in quite a search" for Asian police officers. "You're sorely needed because of your language skills and you provide a link to the Asian community,"

"The city has made it very clear that we want to have someone with an Asian background (on the Quincy Police Department). You're both at the top of your class," Cheney said.

Council To Consider Proposed Smoking Ban

The Quincy Health Department is proposing a ban on smoking in all restaurants, function halls and bars that serve food by the end of the decade.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallabue plans to submit an ordinance to the City Council, which would have to approve the proposal, by the end of this month. A public hearing on the matter must also be held.

The proposed ban would be phased in over the next six years.

Although councillors said they will keep open minds about the proposal, some said they were uneasy about a complete ban on smoking.

Council President Michael Cheney, who noted that the council has already required restaurants to install expensive smoke removal devices, said it would not make sense to now tell restaurant owners to ban smoking in their establishments.

"I think it's unfair," said Cheney, a smoker who has voted for other smoking restrictions before the council.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia said some residents who have heard about the ban have already voiced opposition.

"Already there's rumblings in the community," he said.

The city now requires restaurants with 40 seats or more to set aside 25 percent of their floor space for non-smokers. Earlier this year, restaurants were also required to install locks on cigarette machines to prevent minors from using them.

City Questions MBTA About Overnight Noise

The city has contacted the MBTA in response to complaints from South Quincy residents regarding overnight noise near the T tracks.

According to Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets, the noise is coming from track crews doing track maintenance procedures which the MBTA requires every two years. The MBTA can only perform the work between the hours of 1 and 5 a.m. because no trains can run while it is being done.

Mader said the current work is expected to be finished by the end of this week and will not be on the schedule again for two years. If the work does not get done on a regular basis, the tracks can over time get out of alignment and cause a safety hazard, she added.

Mader also noted that the MBTA has agreed to a request by the mayor's office to provide Quincy with a schedule of any late-night maintenance that is scheduled to be performed within city limits.

Wal-Mart Foes Ponder Appeal

Opponents of the Granite Crossing shopping center are undecided as to whether they will try to appeal the City Council's approval of the Granite Crossing shopping center.

The council last week unanimously approved a special permit for the $20 million shopping center, which will include a Wal-Mart store, near The Falls condominium complex in Quincy Point.

Sylvia Mignon, one of the most vocal leaders of a group called "We're Against the Wal," said opponents are as yet unsure whether they will appeal.

"No decision has been made at this point," said Mignon, a Falls resident.

The deadline to appeal the permit is Oct. 20. Opponents of the project have argued that it will be economically harmful to the Quincy Center shopping district and to The Falls.

To win the permit, Atlantic Development Corp. of Hingham, the developer of the project, promised more than $2 million to the city, downtown merchants, and Falls condominium owners.

The multi-page permit calls for the following:

- $1 million in traffic improvements.

- A guaranteed tax bill of $610,000 a year.

- Hundreds of thousands of dollars pumped into the city's struggling downtown shopping district.

- A buyout for 16 condominium owners, most of whose homes may drop in value because of the shopping center.

- A plan to fix up Fallon Park.

- A shuttle bus for seniors.

In addition, Atlantic Development must post a $1 million bond and pay for a city-hired consultant who will make sure that it keeps all of its promises. The company will also give The Falls Condominium Association $600,000 in cash and build a second entrance to the condominiums off Quincy Avenue if there is too much traffic for people to get out of their driveways.

Atlantic Development President Donald MacKinnon Construction of the shopping center could begin within the next month or two if the permit is not appealed. Wal-Mart is scheduled to open in mid-1996 followed by a supermarket three months later.

The proposed shopping center received support from a number of boards, including the Quincy Planning Board, Quincy Conservation Commission and state Department of Environmental Protection before being voted on by the City Council. It also had the blessing of Mayor James Sheets, who technically had no say in the matter.

The City Council vote was 7-0. Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, whose ward will be home to the project and Councillor Timothy Cahill abstained from the vote because they missed a public hearing on the matter last May. There was a possibility there votes could have been legally challenged because of their absence at the hearing.

The Wal-Mart chain, which is based in Arkansas, has 12 Massachusetts stores including one in Walpole. It plans to build 15 more stores by the end of 1996, including Abington, Halifax and Plymouth.

Fears that the presence of Wal-Mart would be economically harmful on Quincy Center have been eased by the developer's promise to pay $150,000 to the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. The money will be used for advertising purposes.

Atlantic Development will also pay about $100,000 to get environmental permits for a commercial-owned office building on city-owned land, and $100,000 to a Hancock Street building in Quincy Center that will house the Decelle clothing store.

Granite Crossing is the second major retail project to win approval under Planned Unit Development (PUD) zoning. The first was Home Depot in West Quincy, which Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio said has lived up to all the promises of its permit.

told Henry A. Woish that as long as there were no sale of knives or fireworks, there would be no objection.

• Granted a request from Bill Morrill of Creative Fairs to conduct a carnival at the Department of Public Works, 55 Sea St. to benefit Quincy Emergency Management, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Bradlee's Site May Be Rezoned

The President's Plaza shopping center on Quincy Avenue may soon be rezoned from Business "B" zoning to Planned Unit Development (PUD).

The proposal to do so was recently made by Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, whose ward is home to the plaza.

The rezoning request requires the approval of the City Council and the Quincy Planning Board. A hearing on the matter has been scheduled for Nov. 21.

PUD would require developers to get the approval of the City Council and the Planning Board for major projects. Developers must also prepare detailed studies of traffic and other impact on the neighborhood.

Councillors feel PUD gives residents more input as to what projects should be built in their neighborhoods because the City Council—the elected body of the people—is made the special permit granting authority that has final say over any project.

Officials said the rezoning request has been prompted by rumors that Bradlee's, the anchor tenant of the shopping center, may want to expand. Bradlee's representatives, however, have said they have no such plans.

Uncle Sam To Conduct Registration Drive At City Hall

Quincy's Uncle Sam Rouseville will conduct a voter registration drive in front of Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center this Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Residents from anywhere in the Commonwealth can fill out a voter registration card with Rouseville. The deadline to register for the November General Election is Tuesday, Oct. 11.

Rouseville said he will hand-deliver registration cards to the appropriate official in any community if necessary. He added that he has arranged for Yellow Cab of Quincy to provide transportation for or deliver a card to anyone who is unable to register at City Hall.

"I believe that the people know what is best for them and that is why I want to help them get involved in the democratic process," he said. "Once they experience the power in voting, they'll be hooked."

For more information, call Rouseville at 774-1776.

Council On Aging Receives $58,548 State Grant

The Quincy Council on Aging has been awarded a grant of $58,548 by the state Executive Office on Elder Affairs.

The grant, which is significantly more than last year, was made possible by the city's legislation delegation's efforts during this year's budget debate.

"This latest action, coming on the heels of recent legislation involving seniors will help ensure that Quincy's seniors will enjoy and better and more fulfilling quality of life," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"As the local Council on Aging continues to be pressed to provide more and more services, we made it a priority to meet the needs of Quincy's seniors. I was pleased to be a part of securing these monies, especially during a year in which few programs received increases," said Rep. Michael Bellotti.

Rep. Steve Tobin said, "These funds, along with contributions supplied by cities and towns, will be used to create and supplement programs and services to the elderly. Many of these services fill the gap for individuals who do not qualify for various other programs."

Rep. Ron Mariano noted the amount of each grant is based on the population size in the service delivery area. "During the FY95 budget debate, the program for Councils on Aging realized a $2 million increase. This enabled the formula for the grant awards to increase from $1.75 to $3.20 per elder, which is a significant increase."

Studds: Proposed Bridge Regulations Could Help Route 3A Commuters

The U.S. Coast Guard, which at the request of U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds conducted a study this year of vessel traffic going through the Weymouth-Fore River Drawbridge, has proposed regulations that may ease traffic congestion for South Shore commuters driving on Route 3A.

The proposed rule would require that the rush-hour openings of the drawbridge be limited to commercial tankers and other tide or current dependent vessels. Studds said the Coast Guard will accept comments on the rule until Nov. 28, and encouraged residents to share their views.

In a "Notice of Proposed Rulemaking" published last week in the Federal Register, the Coast Guard said it would allow bridge openings "only for self-propelled vessels greater than 10,000 gross tons during the two rush-hour periods," instead of all commercial vessels.

"This change is expected to alleviate some of the traffic congestion caused when the bridge opens during rush hour," the Coast Guard wrote in its summary, "while still meeting the needs of navigation."

The Coast Guard study, released in August showed that voluntary measures agreed to by CITGO, whose barges are the prime reason for the bridge openings, have reduced the number of rush-hour bridge openings by 70 percent over a four-month period. That, in turn, has kept commuter traffic flowing along Route 3A in Quincy and Weymouth.

Studds said he was pleased with the Coast Guard's study, and its proposed change in the regulations.

"Our main concern has always been to reduce the number of drawbridge openings, which have caused intolerably long delays on Route 3A, while maintaining navigational safety," Studds said. "The proposed regulations will help ensure we do both."

Rear Admiral John L. Linnon, commander of the First Coast Guard District, who proposed the regulations, said that during the four-month study period, the voluntary measures implemented by CITGO have reduced the number of rush-hour bridge openings from 30 to nine when compared with a similar four-month period last year.

The proposed rule is the latest measure to help alleviate traffic congestion since Studds wrote the Coast Guard in February, asking top officials to meet with representatives of CITGO and local and state officials to discuss the situation. After a series of meetings in the spring, the Coast Guard released its study last month.

Studds said copies of the regulation are available by calling his Quincy office, 1-800-794-9911. Comments about the proposal may be sent directly to the Coast Guard: Commander, First Coast Guard District, Captain John Foster Williams Federal Building, 408 Atlantic Ave., Boston, MA 02110.

PLANE SENSE

Wet roads account for situation when braking and turning occur simultaneously. annually. The chief cause of this problem is the dangerous circumstance known as hydroplaning. This occurs when the tires cannot sufficiently divert water away from the patch where the tires ordinarily meet the road. As a result, the tires actually ride atop a small wave of water to create a dangerous driving condition. Most drivers instinctively back off their accelerator pedals gradually when they begin to experience the mushy steering and tire drag associated with hydroplaning. This is the correct response. A harsh turn or braking action can otherwise send a hydroplaning car into a skid. Cars equipped with antilock braking systems can be expected to avert such skidding

The technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in checking out every system in your car, including your brakes. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550), we look forward to meeting you and to giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." ALFRED BENEDETTI, 101-year-old Quincy Senior Olympian and former granite worker; Lincoln-Hancock Community School teacher Steve Cantelli (left) and area resident Alba Tocci (far right) congratulate each other after they unveiled a new statue in honor of the city's granite workers Monday at Shea Park in West Quincy. The three served together on a committee that worked to have the statue designed and brought to the city.

Special Statue Dedicated

A Tribute To City's Granite Workers

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Between 600 and 700 people gathered at Shea Park in West Quincy Monday to witness the dedication of a granite statue constructed in honor of the city's granite workers.

Among those in attendance at the event were Sen. Edward Kennedy, Mayor James Sheets, members of Quincy's Legislative delegation, City Council, School Committee and Quincy Granite Workers Memorial Committee; other city officials, relatives of deceased granite workers and area residents.

Kennedy said Quincy residents should take pride in the statue.

"This is a special and important day," he said. "Everybody in Quincy should be proud of this. I'm proud to be here today to honor a group of people who made up a key part of this community."

Sheets expressed similar sentiments.

"This is a monument that will forever remind us of our heritage," he said. "It will remind us of the men who came from all over the world and fashioned a life for their families, and formed a cornerstone of Quincy's history."

STATUE IN HONOR of Quincy's granite workers was dedicated Monday at Shea Park in West Quincy. Made from Quincy granite, the piece stands 13 feet tall. (Quincy Sun photos by Tom Gorman)

The mayor said he strongly relates to family members of granite workers who died of silicosis, a disease of the lungs. Sheets' father, a coal miner, died of black lung disease he contracted after working many years in Pennsylvania coal mines.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, a member of the Granite Workers Memorial Committee, said the statue represents the struggle of immigrants who came to the United States in search of a better life.

"It will serve as a symbol for generations after us," said Fabrizio. "I'm very grateful to have been a part of this project."

Cornelius Heery, Quincy Sun Editor Robert Bosworth, Sara Yarochuk, who is involved with after-school day care programs of the Quincy Public Schools; Carole Neidich, director of early childhood and parenting services for the Striar Jewish Community Center and an instructor at Quincy College; Sheila Debetten, director of the Step One Day Infant Toddler Day Care Center and Esther Sanger, director of the Quincy Crisis Center. Sheets said at press time all but Sanger have formally accepted their positions on the commission.

The mayor added that the purpose of today's meeting is to draft the bylaws of the commission and to set up a process for forming the Family Council which will be charged with appointing the other four members of the commission.

The Family Council, who will be appointed by the 13 commission members, will represent a cross-section of different kinds of families across the city, Sheets said. He also said he believes it will take "at least a month," for the Family Council to be appointed.

"We will probably be advertising for people interested in serving on the Family Council to send in their resumes," said Sheets.

Sheets noted that the second major order of business for the commission, which will be addressed in the near future, is the appointment of an executive director. He added that the position will not be funded by city money.

"We will seek corporate sponsors for the directorship," he said.

Sheets has said the Family Commission will aid needy Quincy families by providing a database of information on area service organizations including hospitals and other medical centers, schools, rehabilitation centers, food pantries, shelters for the homeless and abused, and other community organizations.

"All of this information will be available at the touch of a button," the mayor said.

William Draicchio Named To Board Of Voter Registrars

Former Quincy Police officer William Draicchio has been appointed by Mayor James Sheets to serve on the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars.

Draicchio, 69, a lifelong resident of Quincy, replaces the late John Papile who served on the board for 12 years. Papile, who was first appointed to the board by former Mayor Francis McCauley and re-appointed by Sheets, died May 21 of a stroke at the age of 77.

Sheets said Draicchio, a registered Democrat, is a well-known figure a city elections and is a logical addition to the four-member board.

"He is no stranger to the election process at City Hall," said Sheets.

WILLIAM DRAICCHIO

City Clerk Joseph Shea, a member of the board, said Draicchio worked more than 40 years for the police department. He added that Draicchio, who was known as "Officer Bill" and worked the same beat at the corner of Washington Street and Southern Artery for more than 30 years, has volunteered as an election worker for the last seven years and therefore is a perfect choice for the open registrar's position.

The Board of Voter Registrars, under city charter, must consist of four members—two Democrats and two Republicans—including the city clerk who serves on the board by virtue of his office.

Shea, like Draicchio, is a Democrat. The Republican members of the board are Louise Randall and Denis Tardie.

Shea said the only compensation each of the members receives for serving on the board is an annual $500 stipend.

Uncle Sam Registers Over 700 New Voters

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

He's cheered American athletes at the Olympics, has rallied at national political conventions and has attended some of the country's biggest spectacles, including the inauguration of President Clinton, the World Series and the World Cup.

But nothing gives Uncle

Sam Rounseville of Quincy a bigger thrill than helping others do their patriotic duty right at home: registering citizens to vote.

Uncle Sam, who officially changed his name from Sandy Rounseville several years ago, led a voter registration drive outside

City Hall during the weekend. Over 10 hours on Friday and 8 hours each on Saturday and Sunday, Uncle Sam registered more than 700 people.

That number was almost certain to climb Tuesday, the last day to register to vote in the state election Tuesday, Nov. 8. Uncle Sam planned to continue his drive outside City Hall from 4 to 10 p.m., the latter hour being the registration deadline.

Regardless of the "turnout" Tuesday, the drive had far exceeded Uncle Sam's expectations. "I've done this all over the country and I've never had a turnout like this," he said while noting he has held similar voter registration drives in 45 other states including New Hampshire, Connecticut, Louisiana and Illinois.

"I probably registered a couple of thousand (new voters) at all those other registrations combined. That's why I never expected anything like this.

"This is an experience that everyone should go through at least once in their life. You really get excited to see people this interested in the election process."

City Clerk Joseph Shea commended Uncle Sam for encouraging people to vote. "It's our job to encourage everyone to vote and with the new motor-voter registration law which allows mail-in registration it makes it possible for people like Uncle Sam to pitch in.

"He did a good job. Our job is to get the most people registered and he was a great help," Shea said.

The city clerk said Uncle Sam's drive will help the city register 1,000 to 1,200 new voters since the primary election in September. The last official count showed 45,427 registered voters in Quincy.

"I think we'll be up 1,000 to 1,200 (after registration closes). I didn't think so in September but business is brisk," the clerk said Tuesday. "I think the U.S. Senate race is catching on."

When Uncle Sam set up his registration table Friday at McIntyre Mall, he figured he'd get 10 or 15 new voters. But the heavy turnout in newly registered voters made Uncle Sam believe that people are not as dispirited or cynical about the electoral process as some might believe.

"Some say people don't care and don't vote. Well, this goes to show people do care and their vote can and will make a difference."

The registration resulted in some typical findings and some surprising.

UNCLE SAM

According to Uncle Sam, about 70 percent of the 700 registered declined a party affiliation and instead opted for unenrolled. Approximately 350 to 400 reside in Quincy, while the others live throughout the Boston area and as far away as Concord.

The typical new voter was changing his or her place of registration because he or she had not bothered to re-register after moving to a new city or town. Others had just turned 18—"voting age"—and said they are eager to practice their civic duty for the first time next month.

However, there were interesting stories behind some registrations.

For instance, one woman originally from New Zealand was naturalized 20 years ago. She was a registered voter but found the ballot box experience somewhat "embarrassing and nerve-racking" because she did not know what to do in the voting booth.

"Now she knows what to do and wants to vote," Uncle Sam said.

A 50-year-old Quincy man told Uncle Sam he had never "gotten around" to registering to vote. But the registration by-mail, which took effect this summer, makes it much easier for citizens to get on the voter rolls.

"It's easy, it's fast, it's simple. It's your patriotic duty. Register and vote," Uncle Sam said, quoting a sign he uses for registration purposes.

"It's just a simple form. They don't even ask for an ID. All you do is fill it out and mail it back. That's it," he added.

Uncle Sam's effort was assisted by several volunteers and one anonymous Boston businessman who has donated more than $200 in stamps to cover postage for the registration forms.

Burger King Given 6 Weeks To Solve Ventilation Problems

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Smoke and odors from the Burger King restaurant at 670 Adams St. are causing a whopper of a problem for neighborhood residents.

The Quincy License Board Tuesday told restaurant officials that they have six weeks to solve the problem. The board first met with Burger King representatives in August to discuss the matter after residents complained about clouds of smoke and strong scents filtering outside the restaurant through its ventilation system.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue said the Quincy Health Department has documented evidence, including photographs, of the problem. One neighbor called her about it as recently as Monday, she said.

"It's a clear air pollution control violation," said Gallahue.

Other board members said they have witnessed it first-hand.

"I've even seen it myself driving by," said Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey.

"I was driving by and I thought you had a wicked fire going on, to be honest with you," Fire Chief Thomas Gorman told restaurant officials.

The restaurant representatives said the ventilation system is cleaned professionally four times a year and said they were not aware of the severity of the problem until they received a letter dated Oct. 5 that told them the findings of an investigation conducted Sept. 26 and 30 by the health department that concluded the complaints from the neighborhood were valid.

Burger King District Manager Maureen Houlihan said the current ventilation system was installed about a year ago and works somewhat differently from the old system. She suggested that the problem may lie within the new system.

"It's definitely (only happened) since the new system was put in," she said.

Gorman told the officials that one house is particularly affected by the smoke and odor problems because it is located at a point higher than the restaurant, and wind causes a "downdraft effect" that carries smoke and odors to the house.

Houlihan said Burger King employs an engineer who works out of the company's corporate headquarters in Miami and travels around the country to solve such problems. Board officials agreed that the company should bring the engineer to the Adams Street store as soon as possible to try to find out what, if anything, is wrong with the system.

"That sounds like a step in the right direction," said Police Chief Francis Mul-len.

Board members told Houlihan, store manager Michael Wilbur and Atty. Anthony Kilbridge they must appear before the board again at its Nov. 15 meeting with an update on the problem.

Sheets, Mariano, Bragg Favor Fabrizio-Phelan Proposal 3 Support Naming Beechwood Knoll School After Toland

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A proposal to rename the soon-to-be-reopened Beechwood Knoll Elementary School in Wollaston after Quincy's late Assistant City Clerk Patricia Toland has the support of at least three School Committee members.

The proposal, which was made by Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio and Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan, would require a majority vote from the city's seven-member School Committee before the school's name could be changed. Committee members plan to discuss the matter at an upcoming meeting.

Toland, who died Sept. 7 of cancer, began her career as a teacher and was the founder and president of the first Furnace Brook Elementary School Parent Teacher

PATRICIA TOLAND

Organization before she entered public life. She subsequently served on the School Committee from 1975-81, the City Council from 1981-1993, and as assistant city clerk until several days before her death.

Fabrizio said at press time Tuesday he prefers to think of his idea as a "suggestion," not a proposal, noting that he does not know if the School Committee is currently contemplating a name change at the school. However, both he and Phelan said they believe Toland deserves the honor because of her longtime devotion to education and to the Quincy community.

Phelan noted that Toland was a "driving force" in the formation of the City Council's Education Committee, for which she served as the first chairperson. He added that she was also a member of the original Quincy College Board of Trustees.

Mayor James Sheets, who serves as chairman of the School Committee, said he supports the idea of renaming the school after Toland.

"I certainly would support it," he said. "I have no problem with naming a

DUELING DRUGS MAY KEEP BLOOD PRESSURE HIGH

Anyone who takes more than one medication must be alert to the fact that drugs can interact adversely with each other. One such interaction is of particular importance to people with high blood pressure. Medication prescribed to treat high blood pressure may lose their effectiveness in patients who are also taking nonsteroid anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs). These NSAIDs, often used to treat the pain and inflammation of arthritis, include nonprescription ibuprofen as well as prescription drugs such as diclofenac, naproxen, and piroxicam. If possible, NSAIDs should be replaced with pain medication such as acetaminophen among patients with high blood pressure. P.S. Keep your doctor advised of all the drugs you are taking, prescription or not, to avoid adverse interactions.

Monitoring your medications properly is essential—so is being able to count on the medical experts who handle your care. A Nostalgic Night

There were plenty of laughs, memories and a few barbs at the first-ever reunion of past and present City Council members at the Quincy Neighborhood Club last week.

And also an indication that the hatchet been buried in at least one old political feud.

Two of the former councillors—Walter Hannon and Joseph LaRaia—who went on to become mayor and involved in one of the bloodiest mayoral races in the city's history, picked the same table to sit at. Seated directly across from one another, they seemed to have no problem letting by-gones be by-gones.

HANNON

LaRaia ousted Hannon from the mayor's office by 483 votes in that famous recount in 1975 climaxing a bitter no-holds barred election campaign. The original count had Hannon the winner by 134 votes.

But the two could laugh it off at last week's reunion.

"The worst damn thing I ever did in the City Council," Hannon joked when he got a chance at the microphone, "was to vote for Joe LaRaia for City Council president."

LaRaia had gone on from that crucial stage in his political career, to unseat Hannon as mayor.

"And," Hannon continued, "I even bought him a bottle of wine tonight."

"No, no!" joked LaRaia, jumping to his feet. "Wal-Mart did!"

That feud may not be completely buried though.

One of the key players in that campaign was James (Pete) Ricciuti who served as executive secretary and campaign advisor to Hannon and to another LaRaia adversary, the late Mayor James McIntyre.

Ricciuti was among the invited guests at the reunion and by chance found himself sitting next to LaRaia. Ricciuti seems to be the lone holdout from the McIntyre-Hannon years willing to smoke the peace pipe. Although he and LaRaia sat side-by-side for the night, neither spoke to one another.

Nine of the councillors attending the reunion served two one-year terms as council president. Others lamented they never got the chance to bang the gavel because Arthur Tobin had an historic eight-year monopoly on the job from 1970 to 1977. Tobin wasn't there to defend himself. He was in New Braintree attending the graduation of his son, Bruce, from the Massachusetts State Police Academy.

George McDonald, who took some needling as "the little people's councillor" conceded he probably got elected in Ward 4 because his father held that seat before him.

And, McDonald acknowledged, having the old Quarry St. dump in his ward probably helped him get re-elected. He made a big issue of the conditions there and "my all out" fight to improve them.

(I kidded him afterwards that he got more out of that dump than all the seagulls put together.)

Twenty of the 29 living councillors and the present nine attended the get-together. Oldest was Alfred Helfrich, 89, who served from 1950 to 1955 and is the lone surviving Plan E councillor.

Former Ward 3 Councillor James McCormack came the longest distance—from Baltimore, MD—for the reunion. He is now with the FDIC down there.

McCormack, as a young Democrat, made a little Quincy political history in 1962 when he upset long-time Republican powerhouse Thomas Burgin for the state Senate. It was the only loss in Burgin's political career that spanned four decades.

Richard Koch came up from the Cape where he is a police officer.

George Burke recalled what was then dubbed the greatest political "Summit Meeting" of 1965.

He and another young rising

Democrat power, James McIntyre, seemed to be on a political collision course. But they sat down with one another and advisers to negotiate a course to avoid that collision. Out of it came a covenant that McIntyre would run for mayor and Burke for district attorney. They did and both won.

Frank McCauley and Joanne Condon Walsh, two of the organizers of the reunion, were in what you might call the "only" category: McCauley the only Republican and Condon Walsh the only woman among the councillors attending.

Hannon was a Republican when elected councillor and mayor but later switched to a registered Democrat, leaving McCauley the lone Republican.

Condon Walsh, elected in 1978, is one of only three women to serve in the council in the city's history.

Edna Austin was the first in 1942 and Patricia Toland the third in 1982. Both are deceased.

Being the only Republican there didn't bother McCauley, a former mayor. "I was delighted to put this (reunion) together for you Democrats," he quipped, "because you're going to take a licking Nov. 8."

Quincy's 29 living former councillors and the present nine have served a total of 252 1/2 years, according to McCauley's arithmetic.

It was a nostalgic night, prompting talk of doing it again.

IN THE MOOD for the ridiculous? Try this one on for size:

USA Today carried a story out of Muskegon, MI, the other day about seven-year-old Kristen Sweeney and her lost rabbit.

Kristen, it so happens, is the granddaughter of former Quincy School Committeeman Charles and Betty Sweeney of Ames St., and the daughter of their son, Donald and daughter-in-law, Meg.

Kristen's pet rabbit "Bun Bun" somehow got loose and disappeared. She had colored posters proclaiming "Lost Bunny, Help!"

They were posted on trees and utility poles and eventually did the trick. Someone who saw one of the posters found "Bun Bun" and returned the "wayward rabbit" to Kristen.

Happy ending to cute story? No! Kristen's Mom was cited for littering and is scheduled to appear in court Oct. 19. If convicted, she could face a $500 fine or three months in jail.

C'mon, Muskegon. There must be some real criminals around town you could spend your time chasing.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1925 postcard view of the recently upgraded section of Beale Street in Wollaston looking toward Hancock Street from the top of the bridge over the railroad tracks. The building on the right, then the Wollaston Co-operative Bank, is now the site of an MBTA power station. The Victorian style building down the hill is pretty much the same today, as is the smaller building just beyond it which is now the U-Rent-It Tool Shop. The large building in the distance was originally a Masonic Temple and later the Wollaston Legion Post, today it is the site of the Fleet Bank branch across from Barry's Deli. Everything visible on the left in this view is now the MBTA parking lot.

Says School Bus Driver Was Wrongly Accused

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

A few weeks back (Sept. 23), one of the best Quincy Public School bus drivers (she has a perfect driving record) had some unexpected time allowed to her due to a cancellation from the rain. She took a few minutes to drop in at St. Ann's Church to say a prayer and her school bus rolled across Hancock Street in Wollaston.

Well, an article in another newspaper stated that "an unattended bus rolled across Hancock Street and was left in neutral." For the information of those who are not licensed bus drivers, we do not have a park position and regulations stipulate that buses be left in neutral.

This lovely lady secured her bus by pulling her emergency brake, as she has for many years, and it was most unfortunate that her name and address were published in the newspaper along with the preceding erroneous information. As a matter of fact, the police seemed to think her bus was vandalized, but that didn't appear in the newspaper.

As for the person who sent hate mail to her home as a result of the publishing, I hope you might drop into church and ask God's forgiveness for committing such a rotten sin.

As a Quincy Public School bus driver, I am appalled that this was published as it was. I am proud to work with the best drivers in the city.

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Quincy 2000 Corporation for sponsoring the Retail Incubation Program.

This program offered a progressive curriculum that was presented by professionals with varied backgrounds and interests in the retail community. The seminar/workshops and one to one meetings were helpful in formulating our business future in the City of Quincy.

I would also like to extend my gratitude and many thanks to Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000 Corporation and Bernice Brown of the Incubation Program for their unending supply of help, understanding and support.

Mayor Sheets should be very proud of this program and the benefits it should bring to future retail business in this city.

Urges 'Yes' Vote On Question One

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

It's time to get money out of politics in Massachusetts. From Beacon Hill to Washington, D.C., politics is a mess because of the corrupting influence of cash.

Fortunately, Massachusetts voters can finally do something to get money out of the political process by voting "yes" on Question One on this November's ballot.

Although the state Legislature took a step in the right direction over the summer by placing new restrictions on lobbyists and limits on contributions to candidates, they left the initiative process in the state without a single limit on contributions. So while corporations have been prohibited from giving to candidates for nearly 20 years, they can still write a check for $1 million or more to a ballot campaign.

Not surprisingly, the special interests have been taking full advantage of this loophole. Just two years ago, the Tobacco Lobby spent over $8 million against the cigarette tax, and the plastics and packaging industries spent more than $6 million to defeat the recycling initiative. And by Labor Day, over $4 million had already been raised for this year's ballot questions.

Question One will finally close this loophole and put a limit on excessive spending on ballot campaigns. Just as with candidate races, corporate contributions to ballot campaigns could no longer come from their general treasuries. Instead, corporations would have to raise their campaign money by asking for voluntary contributions, just like everyone else.

Question One, supported by Ralph Nader, Common Cause, MASSPIRG, AARP and many others, will give the ballot process back to the people, where it belongs. Vote "yes" on Question One.

South Quincy Group Opposes MBTA Station

By PAUL HAROLD

The South Quincy Civic Association went on record this week in opposition to the proposed South Quincy-North Braintree MBTA station.

The vote came after presentations by Rep. Joseph Brett, Robert Prazier, chairman of the Braintree Board of Selectmen, and Ward 3 Councillor Ted McLelland.

Oct. 13-19
22 Years Ago

Frazier told the association that instead of a station on the town line with Quincy, Braintree residents favored a station at the old town dump site on Union St. because it would allow for more parking and better access to the expressway.

McLelland urged the citizens to "fight this station with everything you have. About five percent of South Quincy residents would use it, and the rest from surrounding communities with Quincy picking up the tab," he said.

Brett also opposed the station with association President Pasquale DiStefano making the motion for the opposition vote.

Quarry St. $30 Million Development Proposed

The Kanavos Enterprises of Dedham announced plans for a $30-$40 million apartment development on Quarry St. at an afternoon meeting of the Planning Board.

It was at the Planning Board meeting that a restriction on 10 of the 76-acre parcel was removed. (The restriction would have limited construction on the 10-acre portion to single family homes.)

Harry Kanavos, vice president of the company, said the project would provide the city with 1,200 new units of housing, covering both sides of Quarry St. He didn't specify how high the buildings would be or when construction would start.

Mayor Walter Hannon said progress on the proposal would move slowly so each aspect of the project could be studied.

Kanavos bought the land from Herbert Duane who was given it by the city in 1962 in exchange for his filling of the quarry holes.

Exceptional Dinner Dance Held At Sons Of Italy

The annual Exceptional Dinner Dance was held recently at the Quincy Sons of Italy Lodge.

In all, 280 clients and staff from 11 South Shore and Massachusetts institutional groups attended the event, which last year could not be held due to renovations.

Guests were served a pasta and meatballs luncheon, complete with salad, beverage, and dessert, prepared by the "Kitchen Crew" headed by Vice President Frank Ruscio. Dinner was served by members of the Men's Lodge and Ladies' Lodge, Stella Del Nord. Some 70 volunteers participated.

Access to and from the Golden Lion Suite at the site was made easier this year as a result of the recent installation of a new elevator at the lodge.

At the conclusion of the day's events, each guest was given a gift of various items for their personal use. Volunteers were then treated to dinner prepared by Brother Joe DiBernardini and his crew.

Numerous donations were received from area individuals and businesses. Lodge officials listed among them Share Inc. (Robert Falvey), Patty's Pantry (Arthur Donovan), Bella Fruit and Produce (Tom Bellotti), Arby's Roast Beef (Frank Ruscio), Camerano Linen Service, and Ron Baker. Officials also recognized disc jockey Wayne Casarano, A Cluster of Clowns (Ed Savage and family), and nurses Nina Chambers and Joyce McCabe for their services.

Lodge President Joseph Peretto singled out Chairman Peter "Moe" Morad for his work on the event, Co-Chairman Jack Norton for organizational assistance, and all of the members of the Men's and Ladies' Lodges who helped make the dance a success.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon:

'Future Is Bright For Quincy Public Schools'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. Another school year is now underway. How many students are there now in the Quincy Public Schools?

A. Our exact population numbers we put forth after Oct. 1. At the present time, we're expecting our enrollment to show a slight increase from last year, which would put us at about 8,400 students.

Q. And the numbers have generally gone up in recent years, haven't they?

A. Quincy Public Schools' enrollment has been increasing for the last five years. Not tremendously, but a very gradual, very definite increase in enrollment. And that enrollment trend is more drastically seen at the elementary level.

Q. There have been steps taken recently in Quincy to combat overcrowding at the elementary level.

A. Yes, and all of them were a definite response to changing enrollment and increased enrollment.

The Lincoln-Hancock School was beginning to experience primary grades of 120 children; prior to the mid-1980s, our enrollment in the primary grades would be 85 or 90 students. So that was the real reason for the building of the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, because we either had to add on to the Lincoln-Hancock, or reduce the size of the school. I was much more in favor of reducing the size of the school, because I feel that some schools can get too big. A school of 800 elementary school students is a school, in my judgement, that's too big.

Q. There's been talk in the past of combining the two high schools into one. But with the increase of students at the elementary level, I take it that won't happen in the foreseeable future.

A. One of the points that I made in my report to the School Committee regarding space and enrollment in the schools was the one high school vs. two high schools situation. It would be impossible in the foreseeable future, I think, to have one high school of Grades 9-12. We could possibly have one high school of Grades 10-12 and have the eighth and ninth grades separated out into another kind of a school; maybe we'd call it an intermediate school. But to have one high school of Grades 9-12, no, that school would be overcrowded. So at the present time, I would not be in favor of a one high school situation. I'm very much pleased with the two high schools.

I think the one danger of the two high schools is that we have to remember that one of our high schools, North Quincy High School in 1972 had $17 million pumped into it to renovate and rebuild. Quincy High School was built around the same time, and there's a major need for serious renovation work there. We just don't have $17 million to put into it. But if you want to keep the educational opportunities equal at both ends of the city and maintain two high schools, you can't have one high school be far superior in plan and opportunities to the other high school. So that's one of the reasons we're concerned with restoring the (Quincy High) auditorium, and making sure that Quincy High School is able to offer students the same kind of opportunities.

Q. There was money earmarked for the auditorium and a number of school projects in Mayor James Sheets' bond package that was recently passed by the City Council. You must be happy about that.

A. (Laughs). I'm delighted with the kind of support that Mayor Sheets, the School Committee and the City Council have shown toward the school system and its needs. I can't begin to express my own personal gratitude and the gratitude in a professional way as an educator for the attitude that exists here in the City of Quincy in support of education. We're very, very fortunate.

Q. Quincy High was also in the news recently because of its new ban on coats and hats in the building during school hours. What do you think about the idea of a formal dress code for the schools?

FULL NAME: Eugene William Creedon

AGE: 58

ADDRESS: Viden Road

OCCUPATION: superintendent of the Quincy Public Schools the past 2 1/2 years; overall, has worked in the school system for 26 years. During a two-year leave of absence, also served as the first-ever lay principal at a Catholic elementary school in the Archdiocese of Boston (St. Ann's School in Wollaston)

EDUCATION: graduated from North Quincy High School, 1953; received bachelor of science degree in education from Divine Word College in Illinois, 1959; received master's in education from Boston State College, 1965. Took additional courses at UMass Boston, Harvard University and St. John's University in New York.

FAMILY: married to the former Kathleen Sommers. They have three children: Erin, 18; Susan, 17 and Patrick, 12.

A. Well, a dress code, as we know, is a very difficult thing to enforce, because there are many court rulings that would indicate to us that a youngster, unless he or she is dressed in such a way that it would really prohibit other students from learning, or contribute to a really tremendous disruption of the classroom, we can't tell a youngster what to wear and what not to wear. If something is "seen," in a sense, we can certainly require them to go home and change.

I don't know, I guess my experience here in my 26 years in the school system is that I have found for the most part, our kids dress rather appropriately. I don't find things to the degree that I would say, "That really is troublesome." I think the question of coats and hats—I mean, hats are inappropriate. It's always been the mark of a gentleman, in our culture anyway, to take your hat off when you're in your place of business. And I think that's an expectation that we can have. I think the coat situation is that we've felt more that there's a potential of hiding something in the coat, rather than the coat itself is a problem. Some of these coats are so big and so baggy, and with the apprehension that we have that somebody may be concealing a weapon, or bringing in substances that they shouldn't, it's better to know that I can look at my class in front of me, and I can feel comfortable that nobody has something in his pocket that's going to do some harm to others.

I wish we didn't have to have that kind of fear, and I wish that we didn't have to have rules that would clarify things like that, but again, the world keeps changing.

Q. A quick Quincy College question: what do you think the impact of the new board of trustees at the college will be?

A. Let me say, by preface, that I'm delighted to see the college reach this point in its development that it is now, officially being separated from the Quincy Public Schools—at least in terms of administration and its reporting practices. I don't think it will ever be not a part of the Quincy Public Schools, because Quincy College is still going to play a major role for our students. It is still the number one two-year college chosen by Quincy high school graduates and Quincy residents.

I think the college is going to flourish under its new board of governors, I think it's going to grow stronger, and I think all of the collegiate traditions that Quincy College needs to have in place will now have their rightful opportunity to develop as it becomes a municipal college and no longer looked upon by some as just an extension of the school system. It's been very interesting to have been a part of this phase of the college's history.

Q. Could you briefly summarize the impact of the state Education Reform Act on the school system?

A. Well, for the City of Quincy and many neighboring communities, the Education Reform Bill has not produced great revenues for us. We are still 99 percent dependent on what the bill calls "the local contribution," and we are fortunate that our mayor has been able to make sure that what's required here in Quincy, the state's requirement for local contribution, is being met. In fact, it's being met beyond what is our obligation, and that's a plus.

So Education Reform has not brought hundreds of thousands of dollars to the City of Quincy, but it is doing some wonderful things. First of all, it's set us on a whole new program of professional development that has to be tied to a teacher's re-certification. So it makes that professional development all the more meaningful because in five years' time, my professional development program as a teacher should guarantee me my certification for the next five years.

The next thing that's happened is the school improvement councils and the development of school improvement plans. These councils format the structures, the requirements, how you pull a council together, and I think that's going to be a wonderful advantage for schools as the school council situation for schools continues to grow and develop.

Also, performance standards for teachers. Every community is going to have to develop its performance standards for its teachers. We're going to have to work with the Quincy Education Association in developing the performance standards for all the teachers and administrators, and the superintendent, in the community. We'll then have to put those standards in front of the community and we must have community input into our performance standards. That's never been done before. Never. And these are the things where the Education Reform Bill is playing a clear role.

The authority of the superintendent to really be the CEO of the school system has really been enhanced by Education Reform. The School Committee knows its primary work is in the areas of policy and budget. I think the clarifying of the two roles, that they establish the policy and I manage the school system according to their policy, is good for the school system.

So these are just a few things Education Reform is bringing about; it's bringing about a sense of excitement. It's made education a topic of daily reporting in the newspapers and on the news.

Q. So the future is bright for Quincy Public Schools?

A. I think the future is very bright for Quincy Public Schools. I said when I became superintendent, and I've said for most of my professional life that I believe that the real success of the Quincy Public Schools is because of our teaching staff. We have wonderful teachers; there's no doubt about it. And that's always going to ensure the success of the school system.

Della Chiesa Childhood Center Dedication Sunday

The dedication of the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy, will be held Sunday at 2 p.m.

Guest speaker will be U.S. Assistant Secretary for Elementary and Secondary Education Thomas Payzant.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon has said that Payzant has "an affection" for Quincy, since he attended both Wollaston Elementary and Central Junior High schools. Pay-zant is attending the event at Creedon's request.

Payzant was confirmed by the Senate as assistant secretary for elementary and secondary education on Aug. 3, 1993. Prior to that, he served in the field of education for 30 years, beginning as a high school history teacher in Belmont. Immediately before his confirmation, he was serving as superintendent of the San Diego public schools, the eighth largest urban school district in the country.

Payzant received a bachelor of arts degree in American history and literature from Williams College in 1962, a master's degree in teaching from Harvard University in 1963, and a doctorate in education from Harvard in 1992. He has also participated in a number of community activities and has received several educational awards, including the Harold W. McGraw Jr. Prize in Education in December 1992.

The public is invited to attend the dedication.

school after her honor."

Sheets recalled that when the Furnace Brook Elementary School was renamed after Charles Bernazzani, a longtime Quincy educator and principal at the school, he was glad to see it happen.

"I thought that was a good idea," he said.

School Committee member Ronald Mariano said he also would support the change if the committee considers renaming the school.

"I'm sure we'll debate the issue," said Mariano. "But I have no problem in honoring Pat in some way. I wouldn't be against it."

JoAnn Bragg, another committee member, said she would support the name change if area residents say they approve of it. Bragg noted that when the name of former Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa was chosen over that of former U.S. First Lady Abigail Adams for the new Early Childhood Center in South Quincy, some officials suggested renaming the Beechwood Knoll School after Adams and neighbors balked at the proposal.

Committee members Stephen Durkin and Linda Stice both said they would need more time to think about the matter before stating their positions, although both said Toland is worthy of the honor.

"She certainly would be a deserving person to have a school building named after her," said Durkin.

"I think Pat was a wonderful role model for women and girls in this city," said Stice. "In general, I'm in favor of honoring women who have made a contribution to education in this city. I think it's a well-deserved honor."

Committee member Sean Barry said he knows of no plans to rename the Beechwood Knoll School and thinks area residents would prefer to leave the name unchanged.

"My understanding is that the Beechwood would remain the Beechwood," he said.

Barry added, however, that he was already planning to suggest naming the Community Room at the school after Toland.

"Her interest in the community went beyond education," said Barry, who added that he served with Toland on the Ward 5 Democratic Committee.

The Fabrizio/Phelan proposal suggests that if the school is not renamed after Toland, "a certain room or resource area" within the school be designated in her memory.

School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond did not be reached for comment at press time.

The Impact Quincy Early Childhood Community Task Force will hold its third annual "It Takes A Community To Raise A Child" conference Saturday, Oct. 22 from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. at North Quincy High School.

The focus of the conference is to help parents learn how to become advocates for their young children and themselves.

The event will include a panel discussion with Mayor James Sheets, workshops, and a luncheon featuring WBZ-TV News anchor Uma Pemmaraju. It is open to the public.

Participants are encouraged to make a donation of $6, although admission is free. A box lunch may be purchased for the luncheon. Day care for small children will be provided.

Joining Sheets on the panel discussion will be Planning Director Richard Meade, Manet Community Health Center Executive Director Ellen Hafer, Sen. Michael Morrissey, and a representative from the business community. Following the panel, more than 14 special workshops for parents will be held.

Approximately 130 people attended last year's conference, which focused on rebuilding the city's commitment to families. The event played a role in the creation of the Mayor's Commission on the Family, which was established by a City Council ordinance last spring.

This year's conference is being co-sponsored with the Impact Quincy Early Childhood Community Task Force by a number of organizations that assist families and children. Current co-sponsors include Community Care for Kids, Quincy Public Schools, Quincy Early Childhood Advisory Council, the Mayor's Commission on the Family, and the Quincy Family Advisory Council.

'Tree-Safe' Designer Hopes To Stop Holiday Tragedies

Quincy Man Invents Product To Prevent Christmas Tree Fires

By RONALD C. TRAHAN

For the first time in eight years, Quincy resident Richard Cawley and his family will once again buy a real tree to celebrate Christmas.

In many respects, Cawley and his family were very lucky when their Christmas tree caught on fire and burned down their home in 1986: He and his wife and two children lived. Many victims of Christmas tree fires are not so lucky.

It was after that tragedy that Cawley began his mission to put an end to Christmas tree fires and save hundreds of lives. A master electrician with a successful entrepreneurial track record, Cawley has spent the last eight years of his life developing Tree-Safe, an automatic fire-suppression system designed specifically for Christmas trees. In addition, he founded Boston-based Pyrologic Inc., the life-safety products company through which he is now selling Tree-Safe.

"I am on a mission," said Cawley. "Think about it: We take a dying tree into our homes, wrap 120 volts of electricity around it, and then plant that incendiary device in water."

His patented Tree-Safe product is an all-in-one system that not only detects a Christmas tree fire immediately (through the use of a heat detector hidden beneath the tree's branches) but also sounds an alarm and automatically disperses a non-toxic, environmentally safe chemical fire suppressant, which can be vacuumed away.

The Tree-Safe system resembles an attractively wrapped Christmas present under the tree, with a built-in electrical outlet that eliminates the need for multiple and dangerous cords. The fire suppressant is dispersed from Tree-Safe's sprayer at the top of the tree, and the detachable 5-pound extinguisher can be used year-round in other areas of the home or on a boat.

Earlier this year, flammability experts identified a number of problems that help explain why Christmas tree fires are so common, problems that Tree-Safe works to solve. In their report to the International Conference on Fire Safety in January, Gordon H. Damant, bureau chief of the California Bureau of Home Furnishings and his colleague, Said Nurbakhsh, a flammability research engineer, suggested that the average consumer is unaware of the potential fire hazard involving a Christmas tree: "The use of electric Christmas tree lights, many of which may be imported and untested, highly combustible decorations, sometimes homemade...combined with a dry tree, produce the potential for very rapid fire development."

Furthermore, Damant and Nurbakhsh found that although smoke detectors do activate in less than 30 seconds after ignition, rapidly developing high temperatures and peak heat release rates cause them to quickly malfunction, due to melting and physical destruction of the smoke detector housing.

Cawley explains that Tree-Safe terminates electricity to the tree immediately upon sensing fire, sounds an alarm, and automatically extinguishes the fire before it can damage the system's built-in heat detector.

Based on independent market research completed earlier this year, Pyrologic expects to sell between $5 million and $6 million of Tree-Safe units by Christmas. In 1995, Pyrologic expects sales of between $25 million and $30 million.

"The fact is, more than 35 million Christmas trees will be sold in this country alone during the coming Christmas season," said Cawley. "Until now, there has never been a product in the commercial marketplace to automatically prevent these millions of trees from becoming torches."

"Finally, no one ever has to lose his life—or his home—because of a Christmas tree fire."

For more information, or to purchase Tree-Safe, Compelling reasons why your family needs new TREE-SAFE.

With new TREE-SAFE, you and your loved ones can now have a beautiful and safe Christmas

- FACT: Every year at Christmas time, dead or dying trees are placed into 35 million homes all across America.

Year round uses:

- Gas and oil burner protection
- Boats
- Recreation Vehicles
- Garage and Work Areas

TREE-SAFE is a patent-protected, dry-chemical, fire suppression system-disguised as a Christmas present: If a tree fire is detected, TREE-SAFE automatically sounds an alarm, terminates electrical power to tree lights, and releases a non-toxic, dry chemical to suppress the fire.

SPINAL COLUMN

By Dr. Barry Freedman, M.S., D.C.

DOCTOR, I'M AS INNOCENT AS A NEW BORN BABE! BUT ARE YOU?

You were born with what you thought was a normal entrance into the world. It is hard to believe that one of the first misalignments experienced occurred during the birthing process. Twisting, pulling and use of forceps subjected you to extreme pressure which resulted in your first misalignment. Tossing you in the air or yanking your arm could have caused a severe whiplash.

As you got older you had continuing episodes of tonsillitis, frequent colds and earaches, conjunctivitis and increasing sleeping problems. After the first specific adjustment of the vertebra by your chiropractor you demanded to be put to bed and slept peacefully until morning. The conjunctivitis cleared up and your previously disturbed appetite returned to normal. You were only 18 months old.

As you grew and became more active, misalignments resulted from normal play activities and falls.

It is just as important to have a spine examination to insure healthy development as it is to have your teeth checked regularly.

Brake Failure Can Be Avoided Through Inspections

A national survey reveals that the car crisis brake failure, and rightly so. When it comes to mechanical causes for traffic accidents, brake failure is number one. Yet, it is avoidable.

In the spirit of National Car Care Month, the Car Care Council points out that preventative maintenance is the obvious way to avoid mechanical trouble. If you haven't had your brakes checked in the last 18 months or 15,000 miles, it's time to visit your technician. And if your daily routine includes lots of stop-and-go driving, or if you tow a trailer, your braking system should have an annual inspection. What happens if your brakes reach the danger zone between checkups? This is when it pays to be alert to the sound and feel of your car. Rarely will a brake system malfunction without some type of warning. Listen for squeaking or grinding noises. Be aware of the brake pedal. Do you have to pump it to stop the car? Does the pedal go to the floor when you're trying to stop? Brake problems also can cause your car to pull to one side when slowing down or stopping.

Recent survey reports indicate as many as one out of three vehicles on the road need some kind of brake maintenance. Is yours one of them? To protect your wallet as well as your life, have your brakes checked regularly by a qualified technician? And, in between times, pay attention to the noises your car makes, the feel of the brake pedal, and the way your car handles. With this added attention, your brakes should give you the performance you need to feel safe and secure on the road.

Beauty Treatment For Your Car Pays Off

Keeping your car looking nice does more than make you feel good; it helps your wallet as well. A well-maintained vehicle may be worth twice as much as a neglected one at trade-in time.

Dealers like a car that requires minimum repairs before being put on the market. One of the first places an appraiser will look, for example, is under the floor mats to check the condition of the carpeting. Take care of the interior fabrics. And, to prevent rust, repair minor dings and scratches as soon as possible.

At an average price of more than $18,000, today's cars represent a major expenditure for most families, an investment which deserves better care than most vehicles ever receive.

Now, during National Car Care Month, make a special effort to protect that investment. It will pay off not only at trade-in time but during the years you're enjoying your vehicle.

For a free illustrated pamphlet on appearance maintenance, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Car Care Council, Dept. N, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.

Granite Workers Statue Dedicated

Tobin, noting that the project received a lot of support from students at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School, said the statue is a good example of how students in the Quincy Public Schools shine by example.

"It's our schoolchildren who have been leading us," he said. "It really says something about the quality of public education and the value of learning in this city. I don't think I've ever felt prouder than I do at this moment."

City Council President Michael Cheney, who called the statue a "fitting tribute" to the workers who gave their lives in service to the city, presented special council commendations to Granite Workers Memorial Committee members including Lincoln-Hancock teacher Stephen Cantelli, who with his students helped launch the project; Alba Tocci, who worked closely with Cantelli on the project; Bob Rizzi, vice president of Local 3 of Eastern Massachusetts, Bricklayers and Allied Craftsmen Union; Donna Ackerman, Peter Antonellis, John Montilio and Linda Montilio of Monti Granite Co. on Central Street, and Fabrizio, who Cheney joked has "never received a City Council commendation before."

Rizzi, who came from a family of granite workers, spoke fondly of the "pride they had for their craft," adding that only one with great dedication could enjoy such a physically demanding job.

"You have to love it to work it," he said.

Cantelli said the idea behind the statue was to "recognize an industry that was once the lifeblood of the City of Quincy."

"I hope it serves as a source of pride to all the people of Quincy for many years to come," he said.

Tocci, beaming with pride, was brief in her comments to the crowd.

"Today, this is your day," she said. "Enjoy it. It belongs to us."

The 7-foot statue depicts a young granite worker holding a hammer in one hand and a chisel in the other. The base of the statue was made from dark gray Quincy granite donated by Linda Montilio of Monti Granite on Central Street, and the statue itself was sculpted by Andre Iwanczyk of New Jersey.

The statue, which on its base stands 13 feet above the ground, was unveiled by Cantelli, Tocci and 101-year-old Alfred Benedetti, a Quincy Senior Olympian and former granite worker.

The project was funded by private donations collected by a subcommittee of the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association led by Cantelli and Tocci. Some of the money was raised by penny drives and other fund-raisers held by area schoolchildren.

Fabrizio, who first suggested the idea of the memorial, said in all the project cost approximately $30,000.

NORTH QUINCY'S NIMBLE running back Shawn Nee shows a burst of speed as he outraces the Barnstable defense Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. NQ's Mister Everything ran for 184 yards, scored a touchdown and kicked the game-winning field goal in the game's final minute to give the Red Raiders an 11-9 win.

RED RAIDERS CHRIS Ritchie and Toby Odom finish off Barnstable receiver Mike Duffley in North Quincy's 11-9 win Friday night. The North Quincy defense has been strong this season as the team has jumped to a 3-1 record.

Nee's Field Goal Caps North Comeback Win

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

Shawn Nee showed the North Quincy faithful that football games are won not just by running and passing as his 18-yard field goal split the uprights with 30 seconds left in the game to give North Quincy an 11-9 victory over Barnstable last Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

With the victory, the Raiders improved to 3-1 (2-1 in league play). North travels to Weymouth's Legion Field for a battle with the Wildcats Friday. Kick-off is at 7 p.m.

Weymouth, 2-2, blanked Taunton 36-0 last week. Weymouth also won last season's meeting with North, 13-6.

Trailing 9-8 with just over 2 minutes to play, North took the ball for their final drive on the Barnstable 41. Head coach Ken McPhee knew this could be his team's last chance to pull it out.

Nee did all the running on this drive, dashing for 21, 10, 5 and 5 yards to give North a third and goal from the five. After a rush to put the ball in the end zone failed, North called a timeout with fourth and goal from the one and less than a minute left.

McPhee elected to go with a field goal attempt from Nee. The snap, hold and kick were good to provide North with the winning points.

Nee finished the night with 21 carries for 184 yards and one touchdown. "The kid's an amazing human being," McPhee said about Nee after the game. "He's a great football player."

McPhee also praised Glenn Peterson, who ran for a season-high 54 yards on 8 carries.

Quarterback Sean Dolbear also contributed to the offense, completing four of his 13 passes for 29 yards.

North went quietly in the first quarter as they were unable to move the ball far enough. The running in this quarter was shared by Nee and Peterson.

seconds left in the first quarter. The extra point went wide and Barnstable took a 6-0 lead into the second quarter.

North's best drive in the first half came at the beginning of the second quarter when Nee and Peterson again led the

Weymouth At A Glance

Record: 2-2. Beat Taunton, 36-0 last week. 4-6 last season, 4-4 and sixth place in the OCL.

Coach: Ross Tortora (second year, 6-8).

Previous Meeting: Weymouth beat NQ 13-8 last season. North hurt themselves with some key mistakes.

Offense: RBs Jim Gagnon and Brian Milligan both looked strong last week. The Wildcats boast several other top runners. Lack of depth is a problem on the OL, though. NQ has given up more than one TD just once this season. If they can play tough on the DL again Weymouth will be in trouble.

Defense: Weymouth has given up just 38 points this season, most of those in a 21-7 loss to a tough Waltham team during week one of the season. Again, Nee is the key to the NQ attack. If he is on, the Red Raiders are on. Player to Watch: RB Gagnon. He has good speed, as evidenced by last week's 64-yard TD burst.

Barnstable, stopped on its opening possession, marched the ball 85 yards down the field on its second possession. A.J. Langston capped the drive with a 39-yard run for the game's first score with 15

Raiders down field. But this drive stalled after two costly penalties, including one that wiped out a beautiful Dolbear to Nee 40-yard touchdown reception.

Barnstable then took the ball for their final drive in the half. The drive covered 65 yards and 10 plays. North made several defensive plays during this series, including tackles by Neil Riley, Peterson and Ricky Maciera. Sean Kennerson also recorded a quarterback sack.

Barnstable was able to sustain the drive and got on the board again when Todd Elwell's 33-yard field goal was good as time expired, giving Barnstable a 9-0 half-time lead.

North has made a habit of second-half comebacks this season, and this game was no exception. After Derek Epps took the opening kick-off 24 yards, North took the ball at their own 36. After Peterson took the ball into opponent territory on a 16-yard run, Nee took the ball another 13 yards.

Peterson then ran for nine more and Nee ended the drive with two more 13 yard runs, the second one for North's first touchdown. The extra point, lined up to be a routine Nee kick, turned out to be a fake, with the ball going to Epps, who ran it in for two points. The two points, later proved to be the margin of victory.

Again, the North Quincy defense came out to play in the second half, this time allowing just 28 yards on the ground and two first downs. The Raiders have yet to allow a third quarter point this season.

Among the defensive leaders were James Rendle, Mike Coner, Joe Renzi, Brian Walsh, Nee and Rob Ragusa.

After the touchdown, North's defense held Barnstable scoreless. That gave the offense a chance to win the game on that last memorable, game-winning drive.

North finished the game with 13 first downs and 265 total yards. The Raiders were penalized just four times for 35 yards.

Keith Martinson sat out the game with a sore back. He is expected to return for the Weymouth game, McPhee said.

IF CASTER'S OFF

One of the least understood aspects of wheel alignment is called "caster." This refers to the forward or rearward tilt at which the front axles are attached to the vehicle (as viewed from the side of the car). If the upper attachment is tilted back at the top behind the lower attachment, it is called positive caster. Negative caster results when the upper attachment is forward of the lower. Positive caster has the effect of making the front wheels act as if the car were being pulled from the front and lined up behind the point of pull. With too little caster, a car will tend to wander, making it feel unstable at high speeds. Too much caster causes hard steering and may also result in excessive road shock and shimmy.

HINT: Caster and toe are the other aspects of wheel alignment.

Host Powerful New Bedford Friday Night

Presidents Beat Pesky Plymouth South, 28-6

By KERRY BYRNE
Give the Plymouth South Panthers credit.

Though they lost 28-6 to Quincy High Friday night at Plymouth, in many ways it was a victory for the first-year program.

The Presidents (3-1) entered the contest with a highly-touted ground game and a punishing defense. The Panthers, meanwhile, were 0-3 and had scored just 12 points in those three games. At halftime Quincy led only 7-0, due to a 41-yard return of a Plymouth South fumble for a touchdown by linebacker Ed Anderson.

The Presidents finally shifted into drive mode with three rushing touchdowns in the second half to sew up the victory.

A much better performance will be needed if Quincy is to beat undefeated New Bedford (4-0) Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The Whalers are the defending Div. 1A Super Bowl champion and are widely considered the No. 1 team in Eastern Mass.

"It took us awhile to wake our guys up against Plymouth South," said Quincy High head coach Jack Raymer. "I told their coach (Don Dorr) that they came to play. Their kids played hard. I give them a lot of credit, they gave us a wake-up call. Offensively we've got a lot of work to do to get ready for New Bedford."

The Whalers feature the most explosive offense in the state, averaging nearly 40 points per game. Three of their opponents, Fitchburg, BC High and Central Catholic are top notch programs but were unable to control the mighty Whaler attack. NB's quarterback Rudy Bulgar and running back Jo Jo Goodine are legitimate Div. 1 college prospects.

The Presidents will be well off if they play against New Bedford in the way they played in the second half against Plymouth South. Quincy scored on their first three possessions of the final half.

Starting from their own 13, Quincy marched down field for their first offensive score on six consecutive running plays. The touchdown came in an unusual way: Fullback Bill Dunn rumbled through the middle of the Panther defense for 23 yards before getting stacked up at the 5-yard line. While refusing to go down under a crush of Panther defenders, the ball squirted loose from his grasp. Offensive guard Mike Feeley picked up the pouncing pigskin and carried it in the end zone for the first TD of his career.

A 32-yard punt return by Quincy's Mike Sheffer, coupled with a late-hit penalty against the Panthers, gave the Presidents the ball just 20 yards from the end zone. Four consecutive rushing plays ended with Sam Brown's 7-yard touchdown jaunt.

A fumble caused by Anderson on the ensuing kickoff gave Quincy the ball on the Panther 27, setting up another easy score. Sophomore Kevin Connolly, substituting for Brown, scored from 7 yards out. Tom Clark kicked his fourth extra-point of the game to close out the Quincy scoring.

"We stop ourselves more than the other teams stop us," said Raymer in reference to his offense's inability to score in the first half. "We can't do that if we're going to win this week."

The Quincy defense, however, was again stellar. Although they bent a little in the first half, they did not break. Plymouth South's lone score came late in the fourth quarter.

Jason Bennett, a converted middle linebacker, had his finest game of the season from the defensive tackle position. He made over a half-dozen tackles and caused the fumble in the first quarter that was picked up by Anderson and returned for a touchdown.

Another top defender was cornerback Terry Bowman. His speed coming up to stop the run shut down many efforts by the Panthers to get outside. He also made a spectacular interception late in the first half, ripping the ball away from two latter receivers.

Defensive end Mike Flagg had another outstanding effort with two-and-a-half sacks and another stop for no gain. In all the senior has made 15 stops for losses this season. Feeley had one-and-a-half sacks and a tackle for a 3-yard loss. Dunn made the hit of the game with a flying stop of Panther Danny Moyer on a fourth-and-1 play with the ball at the Quincy 11.

Also playing well defensively were line-backer Greg Santoro, linemen Butch Palaza and John Moss, and defensive backs Sheffer, Chris McArdle and Matt Miller.

Coach: Wayne Hamlet (third season, 17-6-1). Previous Meeting: Did not meet last year.

Offense: What can you say about a team that averages 39.2 points per game? Speed is their biggest weapon. RB Jo Jo Goodine is the top player. Last year he led E. Mass. with 27 touchdowns and is on pace to top that number this year. He and QB Rudy Bulgar are legiti-late Div. 1 college prospects. FB Sharik Mendes is a tough runner. All three are seniors and started for NB as freshmen. If Q's line can get penetration then they will be able to limit the effectiveness of NB's speed.

Defense: The defense is tough but not as tough as the offense. Teams have been able to move the ball on them although they have not given up many points - just 47. Quincy has given up 46 points this year. Linebacker Jason Kirby is a heavy hitter and the leader of the D. Player to Watch: Goodine.

Offensive linemen Feeley, Palaza, Matt Strauchon, Pete Kolson and Jeff Burrell had another workman-like outing, allowing Quincy to rush for over 200 yards for the third time this season.

Brown led the rushing attack with 109 yards on 17 carries; his fourth 100-yard-plus outing in as many games. Dunn, who leads the Presidents with an average of nearly 10 yards per attempt, carried the ball five times for 55 yards. Bowman rushed 3 times for 39 yards and the sophomore Connolly picked up 35 tough fourth-quarter yards on 10 carries.

Raymer was pleased that all his backs ran well. "Sam (Brown) is still our go-to guy. But the other guys did a great job. Dunn, especially. He did a real nice job for us tonight, both running and blocking."

Kicker Clark was a perfect 4 for 4 on extra points. He has booted five extra points since taking over those duties mid-way through the Taunton game last week. Clark has punted well in all four games this year.

Trafton won four city titles and Ryan won two titles and competed in five championship matches. Ryan fell just short of capturing the Lionel "Shine" Buckley Bowl, presented to the champion of the men's single. Ryan fell to defending champion Leonard Ciavarro in a hard fought, three-set match.

Ryan was victorious in the men's 35 and over and the men's 50 and over divisions.

Trafton, a student at North Quincy High School, won two singles titles in the women's 16 and under divisions. She also paired with her mother, Gail, and father, Peter, to win both the women's doubles and the mixed doubles.

This is the fourth consecutive year that Peter Trafton has paired up with one of his daughters to win the "William F. Ryan" bowl. He paired with daughter Pam the three previous years and with Wendy this year.

Peter Trafton also paired with Tom Savoie to win the men's doubles title.

Peter Shovak, a long-time tournament participant, took home top honors in the men's "B" division.

In the boy's 15 and under division, Andrew Bisconte won his first city championship defeating another fine young player, Eric Dickens.

Connolly, Defense Lead JV Presidents

Two Kevin Connolly touchdowns and a late-game goal-line stand led the Quincy High JV football team to a 13-6 win over Plymouth South.

The JV Presidents are now 3-1.

Connolly scored both touchdowns on long off-tackle runs of 30 yards. Will Fitzpatrick kicked an extra point. A two-point attempt fell short.

Offensive linemen Paul Daley, Chuck Feeley, Greg Fernald, Jake Drohan and Jay Fennelly controlled the line of scrimmage throughout the contest, allowing halfback Connolly and fullback

Andrew Byrne to run well. Byrne picked up several key first downs and blocked well for Connolly on both TDs.

Junior quarterback John Hanafin led the Quincy attack. He connected with Mike Russo on a couple on nice pass plays.

The JV President defense stifled the Panther offense.

Linebackers Anthony Lallis, Tim Santos and Mike Medeiros continually punished the Plymouth South runners. Linemen Jason Little, Dan Wong, Lucas Mikula and Sean Thomas were strong up front and smothered the Panther quarterback throughout the game.

Safety Scott Pye made an interception in the first half. Safety John Leonard made a strong deflection that could have resulted in a TD return if he had held on to the ball.

The Quincy defense also forced two fumbles, including one in the final minute of the game with Plymouth inside the Quincy 5-yard line. Mikula made the game-saving recovery.

Another top defensive play was turned in by Byrne who blocked a punt.

Quincy Girls Strong, Boys Fall Short

The Quincy High School girls' cross country team improved to 3-1 with an impressive 27-30 win over a tough Plymouth South team. The boys dropped to 1-3 this week.

Liz Sawan took first in the meet. She was followed by Kathleen Lencki and freshman Julie Dunn.

Katie Gallagher and Maryann Ashworth also placed in the meet. Other strong performances were turned in by Amy Nicklas and Erin Djerf.

Last week the Quincy girls beat Bridgewater-Raynham, 22-33.

Sawan again took first, with Lencki and Dunn finishing second and third. The girls were scheduled to face Falmouth Tuesday (Oct. 11).

The boys team may not have won their two meets, but were very impressive in defeat. Against a Plymouth South squad ranked No. 15 in the nation by USA Today, Jim Lencki was the top Quincy runner with a fourth place finish. Neil Petit, Erik Palluccio and Matt Langille each finished in the top 15.

Lencki also finished fourth in the Bridgewater-Raynham meet. Doug Gallagher, Damon Blaco and Hubert Lam were singled out by coach John Franceschini for their efforts against B-R.

Rich Bergeron, Chris Haidul, Fred Plett, Jed Donnelly, John Duffy and Kevin Dwyer have continued to show improvement throughout the season.

Coach Franceschini has been very impressed with the hard work ethic that both the boys and girls have shown.

Hockey

Apaches Rack Up Fourth Straight Shutout

The North Quincy Apaches recorded their fourth consecutive shutout of the season with a 24-0 win over the Quincy Point Panthers.

The Apaches improved to 4-0. The Panthers fell to 2-2.

Fred Elfmann opened the scoring in the second quarter when he raced 60 yards on a reverse. Chris Bregoli punched in the two-point conversion.

In the third, Bregoli connected with Matt O'Day for a 55-yard score. Bregoli again added the two. At the end of the quarter Bregoli went off tackle for a 19-yard TD. Corey Awed ran in the two-point conversion to close out the scoring.

The Apaches' defensive line swarmed over the Panthers' backfield. Mike Reidy, Sean Hayhurst, Frank McNamara and Jay Allen led the charge.

Larry and Keith Antonellis were strong on defense for the Panthers.

In the day's other contest the Houghs Neck Manets edged the West Quincy Elks, 12-8.

eight solo stops. McCallum had 11 tackles, 10 of which were unassisted.

McCallum also recorded 10 tackles against U. Mass-Dartmouth and nine against Nichols College. Columbus made five tackles against U.

The St. Moritz Devils squirt major hockey team lost 3-0 to the Minutemen Flames in Marlboro.

The Devils played valiantly but were unable to pull out the victory.

Devils goalies Nick Sarno of Milton and Joshua Wallace of Somerville were superb as they turned away 34 shots between the two of them.

Granite Boys Miah Hasson and Kevin Patten of Quincy were again strong on the blue line.

Winger Brett Wood of Newton almost put the Devils on the scoreboard with a great attempt that fell just short.

The Devils announced their captains for the 1994 season: Kevin Lynch of Milton is the team captain and Tim Egan of Braintree and Tom Hughes of Quincy are the alternates.

With just three games gone and 30 left to play, the players and coaches are looking forward to a great season.

McCallum, Columbus Shine At Maritime

Chris McCallum and Jon Columbus of Quincy have been heavy hitters for the Mass. Maritime Academy football team this season.

McCallum, a 6-foot, 200-pound junior line-backer from North Quincy High, and Columbus, a 5-foot-11-inch, 245-pound defensive lineman, were the top two defenders in Mass. Maritime's 35-3 loss to archrival Maine Maritime.

Columbus led the team with 13 tackles, including

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

As your friendly, neighborhood sportswriter, I feel obligated from time to time to update you - my legions of loyal followers (Hi Mom!) - on my many athletic accomplishments and feats of daring-do.

...OK. Now that that's done, let's talk about some real athletes.

Each fall and spring over 1,000 boys and girls participate in Quincy Youth Soccer. No, the two Quincy high school teams aren't exactly powerhouses, not yet anyway, but the growing soccer savvy of the local youth can be seen if you look at the number of Quincy kids playing the sport around the region. Particularly impressive is the number of underclassmen playing key roles for their respective teams.

The Fontbonne Academy varsity soccer team includes six Quincy girls. The defense is led by senior Ken Lewis. Freshman Leela Shankar also plays defense. Senior Shannon O'Toole has been strong in her midfield position. On the offense are three freshmen, Sarah Satkevich, Barbara Ryan and Siobhan O'Connor. Satkevich and O'Toole have each scored four goals in seven games this season.

Two other Quincy girls play on the Fontbonne JV team - freshmen Kelly Shaw and Laura Donadio.

Ken Starsiak and Kathleen Burke, both freshmen from Quincy, play at Notre Dame of Hingham.

Chris Cunio, who played his high school soccer at Archies, is a junior midfielder on the Merrimack College men's soccer team. He has helped lead the club to a 5-0 start, the best in school history.

The Clark University women's team boasts former Quincy High player Carrie Frennette at midfield. It is the sophomore's first year on the 7-1 Cougar squad.

As reported in this space a few weeks ago, the Eastern Nazarene College men's team fields two freshmen from North Quincy High, Bob Johnston and Neil Hutchinson. Bob, of course, is the son of NQ boys' soccer coach Jim Johnston.

If this is any indication, the future of soccer in Quincy is bright indeed.

The Quincy-North Quincy Alumni Hockey Game will take place Saturday, Nov. 26 at the Quincy Youth Arena.

The game is open to all former Quincy High and North Quincy High hockey players who skated between the years 1954 and 1990.

So far 30 former North Quincy icemen have signed up to play, but just 10 from Quincy. Event organizers Michelle Stenberg and Nancy Stone have urged more players from both sides to sign up.

The cost to play is $25 and all proceeds will go directly to the hockey programs at both schools. For those of you that played hockey, you know how much it can cost to stay on skates.

"The people who have already signed up to play have been great," said Stone. "A lot of them know what these funds will mean for the kids and the hockey programs in general."

The deadline for responses is Oct. 15. Each player will receive an Alumni Game hockey shirt (red for North, blue for Quincy) and a chance to take the ice against your old rival one more time.

If interested call Michelle at 773-3511 or Nancy at 773-8464.

The hockey lockout has left another black mark on the self-destructing vortex that is professional sports.

Strike, lockout, collective bargaining - I think the only good thing that can come of all this is that kids will know a heck of a lot more about economics than they did years ago.

Instead of some stuffed shirt lecturing kids on Keynesian theory, just hand 'em the sports page. It's probably the only section most of them read anyway. Before you know it you'll have a generation of financial whiz kids. Applications to the London School of Economics will soar. Wall Street will burst at the seams with young upstarts. Kids who once hoped for a football scholarship will now dream of Harvard and Yale because they can pontificate on wildly interesting topics like salary taxation rates and revenue sharing.

Or maybe none of this will ever happen.

If we're lucky the lockout will soon be over and we'll get to see Cam and friends on the ice pretty soon. If we're not, well, wouldn't it be funny if the last year of the Boston Garden went by without the Bruins.

Actually, it'd be great for me (pay attention now, I'm going on another tangent) because then I could frame my ticket stub from Game 6 of last year's Bruins-Devils series - the Bruins' last game of the season - and sell it at a trade show for thousands of dollars when I'm an old man with rickety fingers and a herniated disc and take that vacation to the Bledsoe Shrine in Walla Walla, Wash. that by then I'll have wanted to take for years.

EASTERN NAZARENE COLLEGE will present "Man of La Mancha" tonight (Thursday) and Friday at 7 p.m., Saturday at 9 p.m., and Oct. 20-22 at 7 p.m. From left are Anita Tamburro as Aldonza, Chris Porter as Don Quixote, Rebecca Jenkins as Sancho and Doug Milne as The Innkeeper. For more information, call 745-3000 ext. 3612.

The team went to Tennessee to compete in the "Certamen" (which is Latin for "contest"). The B.C. High group made its way through a series of steps-the quarterfinals, semifinals and finals-finishes up as the third-best team in the country.

Among the team's most impressive victories were over a highly-touted team from Virginia and an outstanding group from Texas.

Quincy Employees Complete MWRA Training Program

Three Quincy municipal employees, Henry Barsella, William Holliday Jr. and Harold Rosenbloom have successfully completed training at the MWRA's Confined Space Training Program.

The program trains workers on the many steps necessary to maintain safety in confined areas such as manholes, pipe runs, vaults and chambers. The two-day training program at MWRA's Fore River ship yard feature videos, lectures, discussion and "hands on" training including entry procedures, permit use and equipment reviews.

Enrollments were coordinated through the MWRA

Advisory Board and a total of 113 municipal employees took advantage of the program.

MWRA provided the training in response to a request from the Advisory Board that recognized that the program could enhance the safety skills of many employees who regularly face the hazards associated with working in confined areas.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEKSCOTT DEWARE

What we look for, you know, is a habit of goodness. . . . Not sporadic, isolated acts of goodness, however great. These leave no lasting effect on society; they occur at the whim of the individual, and whim is a lightweight, unreliable thing. When seldom outlets the feeling engendered it and many an act of goodness dies, when whim dies, on the vine.

The habit of goodness. Not goodness performed because someone is watching, someone authorized to criticize or reward. This sort of "goodness" is not good. Its first consideration is always the self. The self seeks praise. The self avoids guilt, pain and punishment. There can be no true joy in a "goodness" meant to protect oneself and to curry favor.

What we hope and pray for, both in the community and within ourselves, is a habit of goodness. This goodness is motiveless, in that it needn't be argued or explained. It is a way of life. It's the person's personality—utterly spontaneous in deed but characteristic in spirit. There is no heroism in this goodness because there's no awareness of exceptional action. Goodness is natural. What other thing should one do besides this good thing? Why, there is no other thing. . . . You see? This goodness springs from a quality of being. . . .

THOMAS PATRICK HUGHES
Register of Probate
10/13/94

The new dialing method--"1" plus the area code and seven-digit telephone number--replaces the current method of "1" plus a seven-digit number.

Customers in some 617 exchanges today can dial some toll calls using only seven digits. As of Saturday, they must dial "1" plus the area code and seven-digit number to complete these calls as well.

Both the new and old methods have been in use since July 15 to help customers adjust to the change. Beginning Saturday, toll calls within an area code will be completed only by dialing "1" plus the area code and the seven-digit number.

A new way of dialing all operator-assisted and Calling Card calls within an area code also was introduced July 15 and becomes mandatory Oct.

15. These calls--which had been dialed "0" plus a seven-digit number--will need to be dialed "0" plus the area code and seven-digit number.

Rates and local calling cards will not change as a result of the new dialing procedures. A local call will remain a local call and a toll call will still be a toll call.

NYNEX has sent two bill inserts to all its customers to help educate them about the new dialing methods. The company has also placed advertisements and sent letters to many large businesses to help customers prepare for the dialing changes.

The changes became mandatory in the western Massachusetts 413 area code June 1.

NEX regional director of

Board Grants Used Car License To Willard St. Shop

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board unanimously approved the granting of a Motor 2 License to Willard Street Auto, 550 Rear Willard St., West Quincy.

The license will allow the owner of the new company, Edward White of South Quincy, to sell used cars at the site. The business will be able to keep no more than 20 cars on-site and will be open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

City Clerk Joseph Shea,

the board chairman, noted that the address was previously the location of Glen's Towing Co. Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey said there has been an automotive license of some kind at the site for "at least 50 years."

When board members said residents had occasionally complained in the past about noise coming from the towing company at night, White said there would be no such problems with his business. He noted that his family's firm, E.J. White Fuel Oil Co. of Quincy, has operated in the city for about 30 years and has never received any noise complaints, even when it has made oil deliveries at 1 a.m.

"Being from South Quincy, I understand the concerns of the neighborhood," said White. "People don't want to be bothered with noise."

Board members said they would consider granting White's request for Sunday hours at a future date.

Fire Safety Exposition Friday

The Quincy Fire Department will hold a Fire Safety Exposition Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Fire Headquarters, 40 Quincy Ave.

Numerous safety agencies will be in attendance, including the Boston Gas Co., Massachusetts Electric, Quincy Hospital, Quincy Emergency Management, MBTA, Norfolk Bristol Ambulance Co., National Fire Protection

Association and Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit. They will offer handouts on various safety issues as well as answer questions of those who attend.

The exposition will also include exhibits from various companies who specialize in fire alarm systems, fire and safety equipment, hazardous materials safety equipment, and home fire safety equipment.

In addition, various apparatus will be available for viewing and demonstrations, including an antique fire engine from the Hingham Fire Museum, a Norfolk Bristol Ambulance, and Quincy's 110-foot aerial ladder and heavy duty rescue truck. Rescue 1 will demonstrate the use of the AMKUS hydraulic tool in freeing trapped victims from automobile accidents.

10,000 Expected For Cruiser's Homecoming

USS Salem To Arrive Oct. 30

THE U.S.S. SALEM, a Quincy-built heavy cruiser, is scheduled to come home Sunday, Oct. 30 when it will become the centerpiece of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard.

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The long-awaited and much-anticipated arrival of the USS Salem will happen Sunday, Oct. 30 when the Quincy-built heavy cruiser is tugged into Fore River Shipyard where she will become the centerpiece of the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum.

Museum officials expect up to 10,000 people, including museum plankowners, invited guests and past crew members of the Salem, will attend the arrival ceremony scheduled for 2 p.m. Oct. 30.

Among the special guests invited to attend the ceremony are Navy Secretary John Dalton, Chief of Naval Operations Jeremy Boorda, Admiral George Stearns, head of Naval Sea Systems Command; and Nora Slatkin, assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Other invited guests include Retired Admiral Alan B. Roby, the last surviving commanding officer of the USS Salem; Capt. Channing Zucker, director of Historic Naval Ships Association of North America; novelist and navy historian Tom Clancy; and former Boston Red Sox general manager Lou Gorman, the Salem's decommissioning officer in 1959.

MacMullen called Clancy, who wrote The Hunt For Red October, a "big-gun proponent." The Salem's 8-inch guns are the largest in its class. Clancy is also friends with Steven Scully, who is helping the museum secure ordinance from the U.S. Naval Surface Warfare Center in Dahlgren, VA.

MacMullen said other dignitaries will attend, including Gov. William Weld, Sen. Ted Kennedy, Cong. Gerry Studds, Cong. Joseph Moakley, Boston Mayor Thomas Menino and Quincy Mayor James Sheets. The mayors of Salem, MA, Salem, OR and Salem, NH have also been invited.

The final push to bring the Salem home peaked

2 Appeals To Delay Wal-Mart

Construction of the $20 million dollar Granite Crossing shopping center in Quincy Point, the main tenant of which will be Wal-Mart, will be delayed because of two appeals to the project.

The special permit granted by the City Council for the project is being challenged by the developer and by a resident of the neighboring condominium complex, The Falls.

Donald MacKinnon, president of Hingham-based Atlantic Development Corp.--the developer of the project--has filed an appeal in land court that charges that the City Council exceeded its authority in setting the permit's conditions. MacKinnon said those problems may end up being resolved out of court, although he added that Wal-Mart may also want to challenge the hours of operation.

A second appeal, filed by Falls condo owner Shari Goscinak, seeks to completely overturn the City Council's approval of the project. Goscinak said this week she isn't willing to settle for a buyout promised by the developer.

The special permit for Granite Crossing, approved last month by the City Council, resulted in more than $2 million in concessions from Atlantic Development. The concessions include a buyout of 16 condominium owners at The Falls.

Goscinak, who maintains the City Council exceeded its authority, filed her appeal against the council, Atlantic Development and the current landowner, N.H. Funding Corp. The appeals charges that a shopping center is an inappropriate use for the 25-acre parcel, and also states that a road meant to service only the condominiums is not adequate to also support a mall.

The city was notified of both appeals Monday. Deadline to appeal the council's decision was yesterday (Wednesday).

Council President Michael Cheney said he is confident the council's ruling will stand. He said he expected Atlantic Development to challenge the permit in order to keep its options open. Home Depot also appealed a permit for its store in West Quincy but subsequently dropped the suit.

Regarding Goscinak's appeal, Cheney said every effort was made to please residents of The Falls. He also noted that Goscinak and three other condominium owners were included the buyout because of their objections to the project, despite the fact that an appraiser's report did not find that the mall would lower its property values.

Inspection Depts. Streamlining Moves Ahead

The City Council has passed Mayor James Sheets' home-rule petition designed to reorganize Quincy's inspection departments.

The council voted unanimously to support the petition Monday night. With the backing of the council and Sheets' signature, the petition now needs the support of the state Legislature and Gov. William Weld.

Sheets has said the petition is designed to streamline city government in Quincy by "creating a one-stop permitting process" for residents seeking building and other permits. It calls for the creation of a new position, director of inspection services and the elimination of the city's building inspector position.

According to Sheets, the director would serve as a "coordinator" for Quincy's inspection departments, including the building, wiring and weights and measures departments, and residents seeking permits would report to that person first. The inspector would then direct the residents as to what direction to go with their plans.

Otherwise, the department would run fairly similarly to the way they do today, Sheets has said.

The mayor has also said that Building Inspector Mathias Mulvey will have the option of applying for the new position if the petition is passed by the Legislature.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath told the council

Land Rezoned To Open Space

The City Council last night approved the rezoning of a strip of land known as "The Strand" from Residential "A" zoning to open space.

The land is located at 16-18 Landers Rd., 901 to 911 Quincy Shore Drive and 160-166 Rice Rd.

Ward 5 City Councillor Charles Phelan, who was the only person to speak on the matter at a public hearing held by the council, said the change was necessary because any structure built on the site would cause flooding in the neighborhood.

"The land is way below sea level," he said.

Praised By Delahunt, Council, Human Relations Commission Ralph, John Sollis Honored For Stopping Racial Attack

Quincy residents Ralph and John Sollis were honored by the City Council, Quincy Human Relations Commission and Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt for stopping a racial attack last year.

The father and son saved a Chinese girl from an assailant at the tennis courts near the Quincy Center for Technical Education (Vo-Tech School) last April 21. The two were driving past the site in their car when they saw the incident, jumped out, chased the assailant away, then went back to help the victim.

Delahunt praised the pair for their quick thinking and "making every citizen of Quincy proud" with their actions.

"In this city, we are fortunate to have not only a Ralph Sollis (the father) and a John Sollis (son), but also an entire family such as this," said Delahunt. "On behalf of the D.A.'s office, let me congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Sollis for such a wonderful family."

Several members of the Sollis family were on hand to witness the honors.

Abe Cohen, co-chairman of the Human Relations Commission, threw similar accolades at the two heroes, saying their actions send a strong message to the community.

"No one has the right to harass anyone for any reason, especially if that person is a minority," said Cohen.

The father and son were presented with a special award from the Human Relations Commission and a City Council commendation. It was the first annual award given by the commission, which was formed last year.

2 Hearings On Shipyard Land Rezoning To Be Held

Two public hearings will be held Monday, Nov. 21 regarding the rezoning of land at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy.

The City Council agreed Monday night to hold the joint hearings with the Quincy Planning Board at 7:15 and 7:20 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at Quincy City Hall.

The first hearing will concern the rezoning of 100 acres at the shipyard from Planned Unit Development (PUD) zoning to Industrial "B" zoning. Council President Michael Cheney said the reason he and Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro are requesting the change is because of the recent announcement that a Greek firm, Regency Cruise Lines, has entered into an agreement with the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority—which owns the shipyard—for a lease/purchase option to build cruise ships at the site.

The second hearing will concern the rezoning of land used by the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum at the shipyard from PUD to Business "B" zoning. Cheney said that change makes sense because of the expected arrival in the near future of the U.S.S. Salem as the centerpiece of the shipbuilding museum.

Construction Begins On Adams St. Storm Drain

Construction began last week on the installation of a 24-inch PVC storm drain line on Adams Street in Quincy.

Construction is taking place between Furnace Brook Parkway and Eddie Street. The project is scheduled for completion, with the exception of final paving, in mid-December.

Temporary paving will be in place for the winter with repaving of the affected section of Adams Street to be completed in May of 1995.

The project is being overseen by the City of Quincy Engineering Department and the design engineer, Weston & Sampson of Peabody. DNC Construction Co. has been awarded the contract in the amount of $319,898.51 following open competitive bidding last Sept. 8.

Officials said the purpose of the project is to eliminate flooding in the area of Eddie Street. It will also include construction of a new drain line on Kimball Street which will eliminate flooding in the Shirley Street neighborhood.

The public is advised that traffic will be delayed intermittently on Adams Street and are urged to seek alternate routes during construction.

A Fitting Tribute For Patricia Toland

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Congratulations to Councillor Tom Fabrizio and Councillor Chuck Phelan for recognizing the profound effect Patricia Toland had on the City of Quincy. As a woman politician in a man's world, she proved over and over again how important a woman's point of view was in city matters.

As a city councillor, a school committee member and as assistant city clerk, she maintained a reputation of fairness and honesty that was above reproach and again she showed remarkable strength by never letting on how ill she really was. Pat was and always will be a perfect role model for every woman and girl in this city.

As a former school committee candidate, I had many conversations with Pat in her office at city hall about trying to run a campaign and still be a wife and mother. Her wisdom was deeply appreciated by me and her kind words will never be forgotten.

As far as naming the Beechwood Knoll School for her, what more fitting a tribute to a former teacher who cared so much for her city and the people in it. Honoring Pat by this gesture, will be showing her that she will not be forgotten. The people of the Beechwood Knoll neighborhood should be proud to know that with her name on that building her arms will reach around every child that passes through its doors.

BEWARE OF THE POPS AND GRINDS

Virtually all of us, at some point in our lives, start to notice little pops and creaks when we move. It may happen occasionally when climbing stairs or throwing a ball. It may pull you up short at an exercise class. If the noises do stop you in your tracks, that is good. The sounds may be the body's signal of problems such as weakened or injured joints. An occasional cracking sound as you walk or climb stairs is probably normal after age 30 or 40, but if you notice grinding or crunching noises that last for a few moments, you could be doing serious damage, hastening the wear and tear of age. Any persistent or alarming sounds should prompt a call to your doctor, and perhaps a change in exercise routine.

P.S. Misuse of stair-climbing machines or step aerobics is especially likely to cause painful grinding and popping.

A good exercise program should take into account your health, your history of exercise, and your age. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and myself offer complete medical care with a focus on heart disease. Asst. City Clerk Applicants Sought City Clerk Joseph Shea has a sad duty to perform this week.

He is posting the notice that the assistant city clerk's position is vacant and applicants are being sought to fill it.

The vacancy, of course, is the result of the death of Patricia Toland who died at age 62 Sept. 7 after a long, courageous battle with cancer.

"I feel sad about this," says Shea. "Pat is sorely missed. But the notice has to be posted that the vacancy exists and applicants are being sought."

The job pays $30,541 to start and under the current salary schedule, goes to $34,489 after 10 years.

As city clerk, Shea will consider the applicants and then make his nomination to the City Council for confirmation which has been the tradition. The city clerk and assistant clerk come under the council, not the mayor's office.

Josephine Carnali, long-time secretary to Gillis and now Shea, probably could have the job if she wanted it but apparently is not interested in it at this point in her career.

Two members of the City Council reportedly have expressed some interest in the job but so far have not actively pursued it.

For one, the salary might be too low for him to make a career change.

But it might be right for the other.

A present county employee and a former county office holder reportedly are also interested.

Shea thinks the new assistant city clerk will be named by November or December.

MANY OF US lost a good friend in the death last week of Ferdinand (Pete) DeNicola at age 77.

Pete and his brother, Remo, who died four years ago at age 68, were very special to me and to The Quincy Sun.

As co-owners of South Shore Television & Appliance in Quincy Center, they made a heavy advertising commitment to The Sun when I started it in 1968.

Both strongly believed Quincy should have another newspaper and they helped make sure that Quincy did.

They took the centerfold—two full pages—in the very first issue and followed that with more centerfolds and other full pages for a long time after. And they were also always there with words of encouragement.

They kept The Sun alive during those crucial early months. Without them, we might have had the early sunset that some people were predicting for us. But thanks to them and some other friends, who also wanted another newspaper in town, The Sun survived and is now in its 27th year.

I shall always be indebted to Pete and Remo for all they did in making this newspaperman's dream of owning his own newspaper come true.

It's hard for me to think that both of them are now gone.

Gone, but not forgotten.

IT SEEMS LIKE the young punks and misfits of the world continue to grab most of the attention in newspapers, on radio and television. So much so that at times you think they far outnumber the good kids.

Not so. There's plenty of good ones around with a head on their shoulders and a goal and purpose in their lives. You seldom hear about them but here's five of them—all in the same family.

Who could blame Quincy Police Captain Don Riley and his wife, Kay, for being as proud as they are about:

Michael, 29, a Suffolk University and Suffolk University Law School graduate, now an Assistant District Attorney at Quincy District Court.

Donald Jr., 26, graduate Norwich University and Suffolk University Law School, now a U.S. Marine Corps captain and judge advocate, chief trial counsel in New River, N.C.

Susanne, 24, Holy Cross and Suffolk University Law School graduate, now waiting for her Massachusetts Bar Exam results. She has interned at the Norfolk County District Attorney's office and is now interning at the City Solicitor's office in Quincy.

Brenda, 21, a Navy ensign, a graduate of Curry College, a registered nurse, stationed at the U.S. Naval Hospital, Portsmouth, VA.

Patrick, 20, recently transferred into the Massachusetts Maritime Academy after two years at the University of Rhode Island. He has his sights on a law career. Quite a family.

NOW THAT THE city has appropriated $600,000 for new sidewalks and repairs, I nominate for early attention, the one on Chestnut St. The one in front of 26 Chestnut St. to be specific. Part of it is depressed and part uplifted. Someone's going to go on his or her head if something isn't done with it.

Quincy Youth Collects Over 500 Flags For Disposal Ceremony

The Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post, 54 Miller St., West Quincy, will conduct its annual flag disposal ceremony which will feature a Quincy youth who has collected over 500 American flags Tuesday, Nov. 8 at 6 p.m.

Steven Warshawer, 15, of 18 James St., Quincy, a Boy Scout in Troop 2 of Weymouth and a sophomore at Norfolk Agricultural High School, felt that many people did not know how to dispose American flags properly. He subsequently decided to borrow the flag disposal idea from Matthew O'Leary, an Eagle Scout of Troop 2.

Since participating in a flag ceremony when O'Leary completed his Eagle Scout project, Warshawer began collecting flags from various sources including the Eagle Flag Co., Troop 2 members and others.

When Troop 2 decorated veterans' graves for Memorial Day, Warshawer collected the old flags for proper disposal.

A member of the Troop 2 Drum Corps, Future Farmers of America, and O'Leary's All-Star Bowling League, he is studying for his ham radio license and plans a career in veterinary medicine.

Warshawer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Warshawer.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD WAS published in 1912 when the Hotel Pandora on Fensmere Street in Houghs Neck was in its prime. When first built in 1900 it was known as the Fensmere, and then later as the Chrystal Lake Hotel, and during the 1920's and 30's until its demise, it was called Taylor's Hotel. Nearby the Quincy Yacht Club and the steamboat pier to Boston, this hotel provided its guests with close access to all types of natural attractions such as fishing, boating and launch rides to Peddocks Island, as well as commercial amusements. These included shooting galleries, dance halls, roller skating rinks, balloon ascensions and sea food restaurants. The pond in this picture, with its bandstand on the island was created by a tide gate under the sewer pipe on the bay side of the hotel. After being drained and filled it became the site of the Great Hill School in 1956. When the school was demolished in 1980 this became an open space and park for the people of the Great Hill area.

McCauley Urges 'No' Vote On Questions 6 & 7

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On election day, Nov. 8, the voters of Massachusetts will once again be faced with making a decision on a graduated income tax proposal.

Overwhelmingly defeated by the voters on several occasions during the 1970's, the grad tax proposal is being sponsored by a group that calls itself TEAM (which, the way I see it stands for Tax Every American More). TEAM has skillfully packaged a plan surrounding the graduated tax plan with some goodies in the hope that it can put one over on Massachusetts residents. The important thing to remember is that, if the referendum passes, the legislature can raise the tax rates as it pleases.

The current "flat tax" rate structure is already designed to benefit lower income tax payers. For example: A family of four with a gross income of $25,000, medical expenses of $2,000 and renting at $700 a month, currently pays a tax of $837, or 3.3 percent of their gross income. Yet a family of four with a gross income of $100,000, medical expenses of $2,000 and owning their own home pays $3,450 in taxes, or 3.5 percent of their gross income. Take away the medical expenses and rental deductions and the $25,000 family would pay $992 in state taxes, or 4 percent of their gross income, still substantially less percentage-wise than their $100,000 counterparts.

The reason for the percentage difference is that deductions for rent, medical expenses, social security taxes and the local interest income exemption are weighted (and properly so) in favor of the low-income taxpayers. In addition, Massachusetts single wage earners who have less than $8,000 in adjusted gross income ($12,000 if married), pay no taxes at all; Governor Weld has proposed that these limits be increased to $9,000 and $13,000 respectively.

Moreover, single wage earners who earn $14,000 or less and married wage earners filing jointly who earn under $21,000 may in certain circumstances receive a limited income credit.

By graduating tax rates, however, two-income families and individuals working two or more jobs to make ends meet will see more and more of their earnings eaten up by state income taxes.

The topic of income taxes, tax brackets, tax rate structures and their effect on various income groups can be complex and confusing. When you vote on Nov. 8, remember this: With a graduated income tax, the more you make, the more the politicians will take.

AARP Urges 'Yes' Vote On 6 And 7

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Nobody likes taxes, and members of the American Association of Retired Persons in Massachusetts are no exception. AARP doesn't support eliminating taxes, but simply making them more equitable. A key test of fairness is whether taxes based on ability to pay; the current Massachusetts income tax system is not. The tax reforms contained in Questions 6 and 7 on November ballot are, which is why they have won the support of the Massachusetts AARP.

Here's how the current system works. All salaries are taxed at the same flat rate: 5.95 percent for the mechanic as well as the millionaire. Dividend income is taxed at a flat 12 percent rate. That means a senior living on $15,000 in dividend income will pay at the 12 percent rate, while a corporate CEO making $1 million a year will pay at half that rate on salary income!

Clearly, this system makes no sense. Questions 6 and 7 would establish a much fairer graduated income tax system. Question 6 would amend the state constitution by replacing the current flat tax requirement with a graduated system. Question 7 spells out how to do it and includes several attractive benefits for middle and low-income people.

As Gov. Weld's own Department of Revenue notes, passage of these questions would result in 92 percent of the state's taxpayers paying less than they do today, with the wealthiest 8 percent paying more. All married couples who make under $101,700 would pay less, as would all individuals who make under $62,050.

Questions 6 and 7 make sense, not only for seniors, but for all residents of the state. That's why Massachusetts AARP is urging its 800,000-plus members and all voters to achieve tax fairness by voting "yes" on Questions 6 and 7 on Nov. 8.

Volunteers are needed to help fill a stocking or stockings, or to provide items to put in stockings, or both. The Red Cross can supply volunteers with a list of suggested items to put in the stockings.

First Nuclear Sub Tender Leaves For Sea Trials

By PAUL HAROLD

The first of its class nuclear sub tender left General Dynamics Shipyard for sea trials this week.

The L. Y. Spear was one of a class of ships designed specifically to service nuclear attack submarines.

The $39.8 million ship was named for Lawrence York Spear, a submarine pioneer who is credited with developing the modern submarine.

The ship which was christened in August, 1967 will carry a crew of 1,350 and was designed to provide all test, overhaul and repair work for nuclear subs at sea. Previously that work had to be done in drydock.

At 22,640 tons and the length of two football fields, the Spear was expected to reach speeds up to 20 knots.

NEW NEPONSET BRIDGE TRAFFIC PLAN BEGAN

Motorists heading to Boston during the morning rush hour had their time crossing the Neponset Bridge reduced by an average of 30-35 minutes, thanks to a new lane configuration begun this week.

Construction of a new bridge parallel to the existing one had closed one of the northerly lanes resulting in the worst traffic snare on the South Shore.

Quincy and M.D.C. police worked out the lanes reshuffling with three northbound during the height of the morning rush hour, and two plus two (north and south) for the evening traffic.

Inspecting the success of the new traffic design during its first day of operations was Mayor James McIntyre, Police Chief Francis Finn, and Roy Cavichis of the traffic division.

MBTA RE-ZONING PLAN TABLED

The City Council tabled a resolution filed by Councillor John Quinn that would have put the council on record against any re-zoning of the areas surrounding the city's T stations now under construction. Quinn said the purpose of the resolution was to alleviate the fears of some residents who thought their homes might be under threat if the areas around the stations were re-zoned for high intensity uses.

The council voted 5-2 against the resolution. Councillor Arthur Tobin argued that it was not necessary since Mayor McIntyre said earlier that he would not ask for those areas to be re-zoned.

Over 300 Attend Dedication

Della Chiesa Center Hailed As Symbol For Future

"Put Your Hand In My Hand" the eager first graders sang animatedly like a show-stopper at the conclusion of the dedication ceremonies for the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center Sunday.

Appropriately, that poem put to music is what it was all about.

The city, by building this first early childhood center, has put its hand in the hand of these youngsters and for those to follow in future years.

Principal Dennis Carlini, who was the emcee at the ceremonies, observed as the first graders filed in to sing: "Maybe there's a new assistant secretary of education coming in, or a next mayor or a superintendent of schools or even a school principal."

The center is the first new school in Quincy in 20 years--the first since the construction of the Lincoln-Hancock School.

It is located at 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy on the site of the old Lincoln School which was 100 years old when razed.

Della Chiesa, who grew up in the area and attended the old Lincoln School, served as City Councillor from there, and went on to become mayor for 12 years under Plan E and Plan A and a state representative. He also rose from a plumber's helper to master plumber.

Thomas W. Payzant, a U.S. Assistant Secretary of Education who grew up in Quincy and attended Quincy schools was the keynote speaker.

Payzant described the childhood center as a "beautiful vision and a symbol for the future brought about through a partnership of city officials, educators and parents.

"Congratulations for a wonderful effort," he said.

"Quincy's doing well and must continue to influence the quality of education."

"Every child ready for school, every child ready to learn. That's what this school is all about."

Ron Della Chiesa, WGBH personality, a Quincy native and nephew of Mayor Della Chiesa, representing the Della Chiesa family said:

"The city of Quincy was like a surrogate son to my uncle. I know of no one who loved this city more than my uncle."

"He put a high priority on the value of education when he was mayor. He was a man of humble origin and a man of action. How fitting it is that the school should bear his name. This is a great day and an emotional day for the Della Chiesa family."

"This is a benchmark Sunday in the history of the city and a day of remembrance for Amelio Della Chiesa," said Mayor James Sheets.

He said the center is testimony to the city's commitment to making the Quincy school system second to none."

School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond, a member of the task force that helped bring the school to reality said it was "a symbol of the present as well as a promise for the future."

"We are making a statement," he said, that early childhood education is a priority."

City Council President Michael Cheney said the school was a victory for the Southwest Quincy area and for the parents.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon said: "We have done something special for our children. This building is testimony to that."

Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio said: "This is an investment in the South and West Quincy communities."

Fabrizio presented plaques to several persons for their work in bringing about the childhood center. Receiving them were:

Mrs. Lillian Bolea in behalf of her husband, the late Luigi Bolea; Dan Raymondi, chairman of the Lincoln School task force, Susan Wilson, Ernest Aristide, former president of the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association, Nicole Scheffer and Marilyn Lumaghini, school activists.

The Della Chiesa Childhood Center, built at a cost of $2.2 million, has a pupil population of approximately 325 from pre-school kindergarten to first grade.

In addition to 10 classrooms, the center has a Discovery/Media Center, a Cross Motor Room, an English-as-a-Second Language room, a Music/Art Room, a cafeteria/gymnasium, nursing, guidance and administrative offices.

TWO SPECIAL GUESTS--Muriel Goudey, retired Quincy High School teacher and Mary Catherine Iannotti, head guidance counselor at Central Middle School, with School Supt. Eugene Creedon, Assistant U.S. Secretary of Education Thomas Payzant, and Amelio Della Chiesa Childhood Center Principal Dennis Carlini.

SCHOOL SUPT. Eugene Creedon addresses the crowd of more than 300 that attended the dedication of the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center Sunday. In the front row, from left, are School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymondi, Assistant U.S. Secretary of Education Thomas Payzant, Principal Dennis Carlini and Mayor James Sheets, all of whom spoke.

"WHAT'S A TEACHER To Do," sing Therese Maconochie, Desire Alexander and Kevin Copson. Behind them are City Council President Michael Cheney and Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio.

FIRST GRADERS DIRECTED by music teacher Edna Antonellis, sing "Put Your Hand In My Hand" as a touching climax to the dedication of the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center Sunday.

Parking Clerk's Duties May Be Transferred

The duties of Quincy's parking clerk may soon be transferred and divided between the city clerk's and treasurer's offices.

The City Council passed a resolution Monday night requesting City Solicitor Stephen McGrath to draft an ordinance that would remove the responsibility of the parking clerk/hearing officer position from the Quincy Purchasing Department.

Council President Michael

Cheney, who introduced the resolution, said the change is designed to make government more "user-friendly" and is part of Mayor James Sheets' and the council's plans to consolidate certain city services.

"The designee of the city clerk shall become the City of Quincy's parking-hearing officer and...all payments for parking tickets (will) be collected by the city treasurer's office," Cheney wrote in the resolution.

Cheney said at Monday night's meeting that the new assistant city clerk would be a logical choice as the person who assumes the hearing officer's duties.

The position of assistant city clerk has been vacant since the death of Patricia Toland, who died Sept. 7. Shea said the assistant clerk's job, a union position, has been posted and he hopes to fill the vacancy by mid-November.

Urges Crowd To Support Kennedy Alec Baldwin Sends Hearts A-Flutter At Quincy College

By MICHAEL WHALEN
One of his fans fainted even before he arrived.

Hollywood actor Alec Baldwin, known for his roles in such films as "The Shadow" and "The Hunt for Red October," sent women's hearts a-flutter during his appearance last Friday in the student lounge at Quincy College.

Baldwin was visiting the college to drum up support for U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy, who is facing the strongest political battle of his career from Republican challenger Mitt Romney. Voters will choose between the two candidates during the Nov. 8 election.

Kennedy, who was scheduled to appear with Baldwin at the college, did not show. However, the mostly female audience at the student lounge, which was filled to capacity, didn't seem to mind.

Women shrieked in glee as Baldwin first made his appearance, exchanging greetings with Sen. Michael Morrissey, Mayor James Sheets, interim Quincy College President Donald Young and Sean Barry, director of public affairs at the college. The audience laughed when Baldwin jokingly remarked that a Quincy College sweatshirt given to him as a souvenir by Barry "will be my wife's new pajamas, I can guarantee you that."

Barry, grinning, held up a second sweatshirt and said, "I brought one along for Kim!"

Baldwin is married to actress Kim Basinger, star of such films as "Batman" and "Final Analysis."

Before Baldwin spoke, Morrissey urged those in the crowd to volunteer their time at Kennedy's local campaign headquarters, to hand out campaign literature, and to help out on election day.

"There are many people throughout the city who recognize the work that Ted Kennedy has done," said Morrissey, "and now he needs your help."

Sheets, who formally introduced Baldwin, said the actor was in Quincy "because he believes in Ted Kennedy, and knows his 32-year record."

Baldwin, for his part, told the audience that although he is also publicly stumping for other national candidates, "none is more important to me than the re-election of Sen. Ted Kennedy."

"Sen. Kennedy, unlike others, is not self-serving," he said. "He's chosen to give his life to the service of Massachusetts. He could have gone out and made many more millions in the private sector, but he stayed in the Senate to fight for the Democratic principles of the average working person."

Baldwin said the Republican party does not care about the working class, adding that Kennedy has worked tirelessly on such issues as women's rights, education, reducing unemployment, health care, crime prevention and elderly affairs.

"He has listened to your concerns," he said. "He has always stood up for the average family. I'm very proud to support Ted Kennedy."

"Can I count on your support for Sen. Ted Kennedy?" Baldwin asked those in the audience, who responded with cheers and applause.

Following his speech, Baldwin spoke briefly to the news media and signed a few quick autographs. Then he was whisked away to a waiting automobile, much to the disappointment of the crowd.

One woman in the crowded student lounge fainted from the heat before Baldwin's arrival. The woman, whom officials did not identify, was helped outside and reportedly recovered quickly in the fresh air.

Fr. Bill's 'Making Change' Campaign Begins Oct. 24

Father Bill's Place, 38 Broad St., Quincy, will begin its "Making Change for the Homeless" campaign Monday, Oct. 24.

The homeless shelter will collect change at over 50 sites throughout the South Shore in five-gallon water bottles donated by Monadnock Mountain Spring Water Inc.

Quincy sponsors providing sites include Dunkin' Donuts, Quincy Savings Bank and Tedeschi Food Shops. In addition, Ackerey Communications of Massachusetts has donated advertising space for the drive.

Joseph Finn, executive director of Father Bill's Place, said the money collected during the campaign will benefit the work and mission of the shelter to serve the homeless of the South Shore.

"I don't know what we would do without the support of the local community," said Finn. "I am really grateful for the support the business community is providing for this campaign."

Finn said donations may be also be made directly to the shelter. The "Making Change" campaign will run through Nov. 20.

Father Bill's Place provides shelter, meals and service to more than 800 unduplicated homeless adults a year. The shelter offers case management services, housing search, community voice mail, and other services aimed at moving homeless people beyond shelter. Together with a number of other area agencies, it also operates a Shelter-Plus Care Program that provides services to formerly homeless people within permanent housing.

Finn said the shelter is only partially funded through public funding and annually must raise a third of its budget from other sources.

For more information, call Finn at 770-3314.

CHERI HERBERT, special events coordinator and volunteer at the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum, addresses Broad Meadows Middle School seventh graders after the announcement that the planned centerpiece of the museum—the U.S.S. Salem—was being released to the museum by the U.S. Navy. Also in photo are Mayor James Sheets and Merideth Owen, shipyard special production coordinator and volunteer.

(Robert Noble photos)

10,000 Expected At USS Salem Arrival Oct. 30

last Thursday when MacMullen and Asst. Navy Secretary Nora Slatkin signed the release form in Washington, D.C., granting the USNSM custody of the Salem.

Word that the Salem was set to begin her final voyage from the Philadelphia Naval Yard to her "new" home at the Fore River Shipyard next week was greeted by enthusiasm and excitement from USNSM officials and volunteers.

"This is certainly a great day for myself and all of the folks who have worked many months to bring this to fruition," MacMullen said.

"After three years, starting with nothing but an idea, we have put together what we believe will be a museum which the Commonwealth, the South Shore, the City of Quincy, and especially the shipyard workers, their families, and all of the crews who served aboard the ships that were built here, can be proud of.

"This ship is the symbol of that pride," MacMullen said.

Mayor James Sheets, chairman of the Museum's Board of Directors, informed students at Broad Meadows Middle School last week that the Salem's return was reality. It was a student of teacher Ron Adams, Margaret McLean, who suggested a floating museum to honor the city's and nation's shipbuilding heritage.

The mayor said the Salem "insures that the dream of a museum to house over 300 years of Quincy's maritime history by a group of middle school students and their teachers will come true.

"This big-gun cruiser will be forever moored at the Fore River Shipyard, a symbol of all those great fighting ships built in Quincy, and the men and women who built them. Every Quincy citizen should take pride in this accomplishment.

"This project developed without public funding and is a credit to Bill MacMullen and his volunteer staff, who have worked so hard and tirelessly to make it happen.

"I wish to express my appreciation to the corporate sponsors of the project; the MWRA for its cooperation in drafting a lease so that the Museum would have a home; to the Bank of Boston for its $1.1 million dollar line of credit, which is bringing the Salem to us, and to the United States Navy.

"We have also had the support of Sen. Kennedy and Cong. Studds at the national level, as well as the Quincy City Council at the local level," Sheets added.

A small corps of dedicated volunteers has worked thousands of hours, predominantly out of the public eye, trying to secure funding and resolve other issues to establish a naval museum and bring the Salem home. Those volunteers are expressing relief the Salem is Quincy-bound.

Retired Admiral ALAN B. ROBY

"We have survived two Presidents, three secretaries of the Navy and a change of command at Naval Sea Systems Command, the sector of the Navy which administers the naval donation program," said Kathleen Devine, the museum's volunteer director of finance.

"They've worn us down but they haven't succeeded in rubbing us out. We've persevered. Bill has stuck with it. It's a monumental achievement. I'm thrilled," Devine added.

The effort to bring the Salem back to Quincy began in November, 1992 shortly after the city lost its campaign for the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Lexington. Now, two years later, the moment many were waiting for will occur in 10 days.

The Salem's final voyage home is expected to begin Oct. 26 when the former flagship of the U.S. Sixth Fleet departs from the Philadelphia Naval Yard. MacMullen, museum chief executive Steve Grubbs and marine surveyor Joe Lombardi will survey the 718-foot ship and put her into "condition zebra," a state of seaworthiness.

Once seaworthy, a towing company will supply the tugboats and the Salem will proceed out to sea under tugboat power.

The 600-mile two trip from Philadelphia to Boston will likely last three to four days, depending on the weather. Museum Operations Coordinator Don Timmins said the Salem is too massive to pass through the Cape Cod Canal so it will have to be pulled around the peninsula past Provincetown.

While the Salem is at sea, museum officials will gear up for her arrival.

The museum has secured permission from Massport to berth the Salem at the Black Falcon terminal in South Boston Saturday, Oct. 29.

A gala fundraising event is slated for Saturday night from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. at the terminal. The fundraiser will feature a 16-piece big band, hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar. Gov. Weld will be present to read a proclamation and make ceremonial appointments regarding the "Massachusetts Navy."

The public is invited to attend, and tickets will be available at the door at $15 per person and $25 per couple.

"The public is cordially invited to attend since this will be the only opportunity the public will have to see the Salem up close. The ship will not be open for visitors Sunday at the shipyard," Timmins said.

On Sunday, a public event will be held at the terminal. Museum plankowners, invited guests and former U.S.S. Salem crew members will board the ship at the terminal at approximately 9:30 a.m. The Salem will then cast off at approximately 11 to 11:30 a.m. from Black Falcon terminal.

The Salem will proceed through Boston Harbor to Charlestown Naval Shipyard. The ship will render a salute to the U.S.S. Constitution and the Constitution will return salute with a cannon blast.

The Salem will then continue to Fore River Shipyard and berth at Pier 2 where the USS Southern Cross is now docked. The Southern Cross will be moved to another pier to make way for the Salem.

Timmins said the tug trip should take one to two hours and an early to mid-afternoon arrival is expected at the shipyard.

Sunday's ceremony will feature a few speakers, including Sheets, MacMullen and Adm. Roby. History will be made that day as the 87-year-old Roby will become the first commanding officer ever to have both of his commands converted to museums.

His first command, the destroyer U.S.S. Kidd, is a museum vessel in Baton Rouge, LA. The Salem, which he commanded from 1956-57, will be the second.

The combined North Quincy and Quincy High School bands will play upon the Salem's arrival. After the ship is tied up at Pier 2, passengers and guests will disembark and the ceremony will commence between Piers 1 and 2.

Visitors will be allowed to enter the shipyard's gates on East Howard St. and walk to the dockside ceremony.

More instructions for the public will appear next week in a special four-page commemorative program to be inserted in The Quincy Sun.

Salem memorabilia, including hats, shirts and sweatshirts, will be sold and hot dogs and coffee will be available at dockside during the ceremony.

The Salem will not be open for visitors Sunday. MacMullen said the ship will be ready for visitors next spring. "We have a lot of work that has to be done for safety purposes before we can open it to the public," MacMullen said.

Among the first priorities is replacing part of the deck and painting the ship, the director said.

Once the Salem is berthed at the shipyard, MacMullen said the museum corps will focus on the next stage of the project.

"We now have to turn our sights on getting the balance of the funding to renovate the buildings and to do everything necessary to get the exhibits built.

"The Salem is a symbol of all of our efforts. It's tangible proof that we are underway."

MacMullen said he hopes to enlist the many volunteers who offered to help the museum project over the past year. "We have lots of volunteers who signed on a year ago but now we need them so we can break down into teams and work on the vessel."

The director said he hopes one of the museum's buildings, which will house exhibits and artifacts from the Massachusetts Military Research Center, will open next summer. Plans call for an additional building to open in approximately five years.

"We'll need to expand in five years at the rate at which we're growing," MacMullen said. "We want to have plans in place so we can expand in a logical manner."

Museum officials would have preferred to bring the Salem home sooner than Oct. 30 but the date is appropriate. It's Halloween Eve and the ship is nicknamed, "The Witch."

"We're going to have a 718-foot witch for Halloween," MacMullen mused.

The 1995 Buick Riviera: A Distinctly American Car

With the completely redesigned 1995 Riviera, Buick is offering a high-styled personal luxury coupe with spirited performance, a spacious interior, and world-class structure and strength for safety, comfort and quietness.

Buick General Manager Edward H. Mertz described the new Riviera as "a distinctly American car that combines the style and performance of a coupe with the comfort and roominess of full-size sedan."

Mertz called Riviera a "benchmark car for structural integrity and rigidity." Even more important, he said, Buick was determined that the new

Riviera would live up to what he called "the Buick customer vision."

Buick officials listed the following among the car's many notable features:

- Aerodynamic styling.
- The new 3800 Series II V-6 engine, which debuts in the Riviera, accelerates from zero to 60 m.p.h. in 9.7 seconds, and gets 19 miles per gallon of gasoline in the city (29 on the highway).

- Advanced structure, which includes about a two-inch wider track than the 1994 Park Avenue—62.5 inches front and 62.6 rear compared to 60.4 and 60.6 in the Park Avenue—and provides better handling and a more attractive stance when viewed from front or rear.

- New suspension and steering systems.

- A complete range of safety features.

- Comfortable seating.

The new Riviera was developed by a team of engineers, designers and other professionals from Buick and the Cadillac/Luxury Car Engineering and Manufacturing Division in Flint. It was manufactured at the Orion Assembly Center near Pontiac, Mich., about halfway between Detroit and Flint.

The Riviera is now available at South Shore Buick, 50 Adams St., Quincy.

THE 1995 RIVIERA is one of the latest models manufactured by Buick. The car is currently available at South Shore Buick, 50 Adams St., Quincy.

Monday night that because the state requires all communities to employ a person with the title "inspector of buildings," the home-rule petition was the only way to achieve the goal of the consolidation of city departments.

McGrath added that while the new system is not designed to save the city money, it may do so in the long run. He said there should be no reason it would cost more money than the current system, adding that the City Council has final say over all city positions when it reviews and passes Quincy's municipal budget.

When some councillors expressed minor concerns about the details of the legislation, Council President Michael Cheney noted that some of the technicalities can be worked out after the Legislature passes the petition.

"We can fine-tune some of the things you are concerned about later," Cheney said.

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan spoke in favor of the new system.

"I support this move. I think it makes a lot of sense," said Phelan, who added that he has received several phone calls from frustrated residents who have had problems getting permits.

Mulvey could not be reached for comment at press time.

Proper Tire Inflation Can Save Fuel, Lives

Motorists who are anxious to squeeze every mile from a gallon of gas this fall are reminded that proper tire inflation can reduce fuel consumption while ensuring a safer trip. "Properly inflating tires to the vehicle manufacturer's recommendations can improve your vehicle's fuel economy," said Tire Industry Safety Council Chairman Thomas E. Cole. "Underinflated tires run hotter, wear faster and can add to a tire's rolling resistance which means your engine and your tires have to work harder."

To find the correct inflation pressure for your tire, look for a sticker on your vehicle's door post or glove box door, or in your owner's manual. Be sure to check the air pressure when tires are "cold" (i.e., driven less than a mile).

"Check the air pressure with your own gauge," Cole said. "Some air pressure towers at service stations are inaccurate because of exposure and abuse. Also, don't forget to check the spare tire to ensure that it's properly inflated and ready if it's needed."

"While checking the air pressure of your tires, also take a look at the tread," Cole added. "Tires with less than 1/16 of an inch tread depth are considered bald and should be replaced."

"When you've reached that point, built-in wear bars will begin to show as narrow bands of smooth rubber across the tread at intervals around the tire. These wear bars are the manufacturer's warning that it's time to get new tires."

Cole also cautioned drivers about the dangers of overloading a vehicle.

Noting that heat is a tire's worst enemy, Cole added, "A build-up of excessive heat, normally caused by underinflation, could eventually lead to tire failure."

"Keep tires properly balanced and wheels aligned. If your tires are improperly balanced and your wheels are out of alignment, this creates drag, forcing the engine to use more gas."

"Be sure not to overinflate your tires. Overinflation can affect vehicle control because hard tires transmit, rather than absorb, road shocks. Overinflation subjects tires (wheels and rims) to impact damage from road hazards such as potholes, curbs, etc."

Donovan Bros. Automotive Pledges Cooperation With Wollaston Neighbors

The recent purchase of 610 Hancock St., Wollaston has presented Donovan Bros. Automotive with more challenges than just fixing cars.

Moving from a predominantly industrial zoned area to a neighborhood setting has divided the Donovan Bros. focus between repairing automobiles and respecting the concerns of the neighborhood.

After three months in their new location the Donovan's have shown they can handle both responsibilities with no problem.

Prior to the purchase of the property from Cumberland Farms, the Donovan Bros. met several times with the abutting neighbors. "We know without the blessing of the neighbors, we would of never gotten this project off the ground," said Peter Donovan.

"In fact, Donovan Bros. willingly have written into their license a number of the operation restrictions the neighbors requested.

"We have an open-door policy with our neighbors," said co-owner Dave Donovan. "We hope they take advantage of it should any concerns arise."

Donovan Bros. Automotive is in its ninth year of operation. They began as a one-bay garage and have developed into one of Quincy's most respected auto repair facilities. Both Donovans were born in Quincy, attended Quincy public schools and have advanced degrees in automotive technology and business management. They pride themselves on prompt, accurate service.

The future plans for

Donovan Bros. Automotive is to remain exactly how they exist today. "We have absolutely no intention of expanding our business from what it is right now," said Peter Donovan. "We are happy with the pace and do not want to lose sight of the quality of our work that may come with spreading ourselves out."

So it is business as usual for the Donovan Bros., repairing cars and maintaining a clean property which was once an eye-sore in downtown Wollaston.

Battery Connections Should Be Checked

Among the most common reasons for a car not to start is...no, not a DEAD battery....it's corroded battery connections. But the symptoms are just like a dead battery: the groan or a click-click that tells you you're in trouble.

It's a good idea, occasionally, to have the battery terminals removed and cleaned as a preventative measure, and what better time than in October, during National Car Care Month?

Cold weather is tough on batteries. A battery that puts out its full power at 80 degrees is down to less than half power when the thermometer dips to zero! And that, unfortunately, is when the engine needs the most starting power.

If your car needs a jump start, be sure to attach the booster cables correctly. Here's how: Connect corresponding terminals of the two batteries, positive (+) to positive and ground (-) to ground, or negative. That final ground connection on the disabled vehicle, however, should be onto the engine block or frame. This way sparks are kept at a safe distance from the explosive hydrogen gas that emit from the battery.

QUINCY HIGH RECEIVER Mike Sheffer gets horizontal in the end zone in an effort to catch a pass from Sam Brown. The ball just missed the tips of Sheffer's fingers. It was an atypical play for Sheffer who has been Quincy's best deep threat with an average of 33 yards per catch this season.

QUINCY'S TOUGH MIDDLE linebacker, Bill Dunn, puts a rush on New Bedford quarterback Rudy Bulgar. Dunn, a junior, was one of the main reasons why NB's spectacular running back Jo Jo Goodine was able to pick up just 5 yards against the Quincy D.

Host OCL Rival Weymouth Friday

Whalers Harpoon Presidents, 29-0

By KERRY BYRNE

A wise old football coach from Alabama once said that there is no substitute for speed.

The Quincy High Presidents became painfully aware of that Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium during a 29-0 non-league loss to New Bedford. The fleet-footed Whalers (5-0) are considered the top team in Eastern Mass.

Quincy fell to 3-2.

The Presidents face a tough but less swift opponent when they host Weymouth Friday night. The Wildcats (3-2) beat North Quincy 7-6 last week. The game is a pivotal match-up for both schools as they fight for the Old Colony League title. Both teams have just one league loss halfway through the season.

Against New Bedford, Quincy was overmatched not by size or football skill, but by pure speed. "Their speed was obviously the difference," said Quincy High head coach Jack Raymer. "They just have some guys we couldn't match up with; they have so many great athletes, there's no doubt about it."

The ability of the Whalers to strike quickly was evidenced by this fact: they ran just 13 plays in the first half yet led 14-0 at the break. The first touchdown came on a 26-yard pass from Rudy Bulgar to receiver Tybon Pina. The second came with New Bedford deep in their own end. Bulgar threw a quick-out to the right flat to all-world running back Jo Jo Goodine. Goodine made a couple of quick moves then outraced the entire Quincy D to complete a 95-yard scoring play.

Despite the two touchdowns Quincy could have, even should have, led at the half. They controlled the ball for 14 of the first half's 20 minutes. Three times they had the ball in scoring position. Twice they marched from their own end deep into Whaler territory - once to the 8, again to the 22 - only to come up empty both times. With 18 seconds left in the half, senior defensive end Mike Flagg intercepted a Bulgar pass at the New Bedford 28. A pass from Quincy quarterback Mark Glynn to tight end Greg Santoro put the ball at the 9-yard line. Again Quincy was unable to put points on the board.

"We wish we could have cashed in the first couple of times but we just couldn't," said Raymer.

In the second half the Whalers put the game out of reach with an interception return for a TD by

Weymouth At A Glance

Record: 3-2. Beat North Quincy, 7-6, last week. 3-1 in OCL.

Coach: Ross Tortora (second year, 7-8).

Previous Meeting: Quincy crushed Weymouth, 26-0, last season. Sam Brown ran for 139 yards to lead the Presidents.

Offense: RBs Jim Gagnon and Brian Milligan are both strong runners. Gagnon picked up 152 yards on the ground last week against North Quincy, but if Quincy can attack him the way they did New Bedford's Goodine, it will be a long night for the Weymouth runner.

Defense: Weymouth, led by LB Milligan and DB Gagnon, has given up just 44 points this season, most of those in a 21-7 loss to a tough Waltham team during week one of the season. NQ's star RB Shawn Nee averaged just over 2 yards per carry last week. But the Presidents moved the ball effectively against powerful New Bedford and should do the same against the Wildcats. Player to Watch: RB/DB Gagnon.

linebacker Josh Glicksman and a 48-yard scoring run by 5-foot-6-inch fullback Sharik Mendez.

Despite the lopsided score, the game was impressive show by the President defense. Goodine, who entered the game with 13 touchdowns in four games, and who led all of Eastern Mass. last season with 27 TDs, was held to just 5 yards on 12 carries and no rushing TDs. It was arguably his worst outing in his four years of varsity football. In total, the Whalers picked up just 84 rushing yards on 24 attempts.

The 29 points scored was their lowest output of the season.

Linebackers Bill Dunn, Ed Anderson and Santoro repeatedly hammered Goodine and Mendez behind the line of scrimmage.

Outside linebackers Anderson and Santoro did a wonderful job of turning the lightning-quick runners inside where their talents were of less value and where linemen Flagg, Jason Bennett, Mike Feeley, Butch Palaza and John Moss were usually there to greet them.

Anderson made the hit of the game when he came flying in on a blitz and nailed Goodine in the backfield just as he took the hand-off from Bulgar. Goodine made a great play just to hold on to the ball.

"We worked all day to stop him (Goodine)," said Raymer. "They just have so many other weapons, though. But I'm proud of my guys and the job they did. That was a great football team we just played."

Even New Bedford head coach Wayne Hamlet noted the effectiveness of the Quincy defense: "Their defense came out and took us out of our gameplan. Instead of running we had to go to the wide-open offense."

Quincy tailback Sam Brown was the top rusher in the game. He gained 74 yards on 19 carries despite missing the entire fourth quarter with a deep thigh bruise. He may miss the Weymouth game Friday. The effort put Brown over the 700-yard mark for the season, a credit to offensive linemen Palaza, Feeley, Matt Strauchon, Pete Kolson and Jeff Burrell.

The Apaches are yet to give up a point this season.

Chris Bregoli again did the bulk of the damage for the Apaches. He scored on a 7-yard run in the second quarter and returned the second-half kickoff 70 yards for a touchdown. Pat Dolbear scored the two-point conversion following Bregoli's first score.

In the fourth quarter Fred Elfman scored from 5 yards out to close out the scoring.

The North Quincy offensive line paved the way to the victory with their impressive blocking. Also playing well on offense were Corey Awed, Brian Doyle and Matt O'Day.

Defensively linemen Brian Deptula, Will Tracey and Frank (Tank) McNamara paced the shutout effort.

In the weekend's other contest, the West Quincy Elks upset the Quincy Point Panthers, 14-8.

It was the first win of the season for West Quincy.

Tough play by the Elks' defense deep in their own territory was the key to the win. Scoring information for the Elks was unavailable.

Tom Daley scored for the Panthers. James Bennett had a solid game carrying the pigskin. Sean Burke also played well.

Sunday the Panthers face the Apaches and the Elks take on the Manets.

At Don Bosco Saturday Morning

Wildcats Claw Past Red Raiders, 7-6

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

"When you play on the road, you play to win early," said North Quincy head coach Ken McPhee after his team's 7-6 loss to Weymouth last Friday night.

The Raiders (3-2) will try to rebound Saturday morning with a 10 o'clock game against Don Bosco at Daly Field in Brighton. North won last year's meeting, 46-12.

McPhee's words referred to his decision to go for two-points instead of one after Shawn Nee scored on a 4-yard touchdown run late in the second quarter to make the score 7-6. The TD was set up by a Weymouth fumble on their own 4. Nee carried the pigskin in on the next play. An attempted pass for the two-point conversion fell incomplete.

"We had some breaks, but they had some too," said McPhee. "They played a great game, but our kids played very hard too."

A big surprise in this game was the play of the Weymouth's defense, junior Jim Gagnon in particular. Gagnon led the Wildcats with several key tackles and two interceptions. His hard hitting helped keep Shawn Nee at bay. Nee rushed for only 35 yards, a season low, on 13 carries.

For the third straight game, and the fourth time this season, the North Quincy defense did not allow a point in the second half. This was made possible by the fine work of Nee, Tim Zaniboni (team-high eight tackles), Sean Kennerson, Neil Kiley, Glenn Peterson, Gerry Fernandez, Brian Walsh and Dave Carney. Seeing action on defense for the first time this year, Carney recovered the Weymouth fumble in the second quarter that led to North's only score.

"This is his first time back and he looked good," said McPhee of Carney. "He really played great."

The Wildcats went on their only scoring drive early in the first quarter with Gagnon (22 carries for 152 yards in the game) doing most of the work. Quarterback Ryan Quill snuck the ball in from the 1 for the touchdown. An extra-point kick by John Lydon gave Weymouth what proved to be the winning margin.

Late in the second quarter, North marched down field but a turnover gave Weymouth the ball on their own 4-yard line. But on the next play the ball went back to North thanks to Carney's fumble recovery which set up their only score.

The Red Raiders hoped to repeat their second-half magic but were unable to against the stingy Weymouth defense. They had several scoring opportunities in the second half but could not capitalize on them. Starting on their own 40, North crossed into Wildcat territory after Nee gained 13 yards on three carries. However, Nee was stopped cold on his next few carries by the rugged Weymouth defense and the drive stalled.

Later, quarterback Sean Dolbear tossed to Nee who raced for a 40-yard gain. However, a penalty nullified the gain.

After the ball was traded back and forth by

Don Bosco At A Glance

Record: 1-4. Lost 41-19 to Old Rochester last week.

Coach: Skip Bandini (third year, 2-22-1).

Previous Meeting: North Quincy pasted Bosco, 46-12. Four DB turnovers and a blocked punt aided the NQ effort.

Offense: Bosco is without a superstar but has several tough, solid players to look to. Points were tough to come by early in season but they have scored 43 in their last two games: a 24-15 win over Bishop Fenwick and last week's loss to OR.

Defense: Bosco has been battered by two of the top teams in Eastern Mass. in Catholic Conference opponents St. John's and Xaverian. Matignon and Old Rochester were also able to move the ball well against Bosco. Nee should return to form against the DB defense.

Player to Watch: RB Jim Dancy.

the two squads, North got their best chance when Carney blocked a punt and gave his team the ball at the Weymouth 45, their best field position of the night. Dolbear (six for 19, 95 yards) took to the air, but could complete just one pass, a 20-yard to Eric Zimmerman. The Raiders turned the ball over on downs.

North Quincy had one last chance when they took the ball over with under two minutes remaining. A turnover gave the ball back to the Wildcats and they ran out the clock.

and Tom Carter also noted the superb running of Chris Ritchie and the pass catching of Jim Rendle.

DEGREES OF SEVERITY

Most car owners are likely met, severe service recommendations apply.

HINT: The most important in their car owners manuals are intended for people other than themselves. However, according to the American Petroleum Institute, there are several factors that place greater-than-average demands upon engine oil and a car. Such severe service operations include: frequent trips of less than ten miles; driving in dust or sand; incomplete engine warm-up due to cold weather; extensive idling; pulling trailers; and/or operating in an otherwise heavy duty manner (including driving at excessive highway speeds in hot weather, sustained hill climbing, and/or driving in high-humidity or mountainous areas).

Rely on our technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO to service your vehicle on a regular basis or to repair any special problems you are having. Soccer

North Quincy Blanks Taunton, 1-0

The North Quincy High boys' soccer team turned in their best performance of the year in a 1-0 win over Taunton Friday.

The win improved the Red Raiders to 3-10-1 and gave them one more win than they had all of last year. They have four games left to play this season, including another game against Taunton and a game against cross-town rival Quincy who they beat earlier this year.

"This was probably our best overall game of the season," said head coach Jim Johnston.

Senior Mike Johnston scored the game's lone goal at the 10-minute mark of the second half. Shing Vien assisted.

Coach Johnston cited the play of his halfbacks and fullbacks as the key to the game. "[Senior defenders] Ralph Dimattia and Jared Rowland played their usual aggressive, tenacious defense."

Junior halfbacks Dan Stone and Peter Johnson patrolled the field very effectively which allowed North Quincy to control the flow of the game. "Their [Stone's and Johnson's] growing experience is giving them more force at midfield as the season progresses," said the coach. "They're starting to take control of games for us."

Keeper Tom Meade made several great saves down the stretch to secure the shutout and the win.

The victory was made more impressive by the fact that it was the Red Raiders' fourth game in five days.

North was scheduled to play Taunton again Wednesday (Oct. 19). They host Weymouth Friday at 3:30. The Raiders close out the season against Quincy at Veterans' Memorial Stadium Saturday, Oct. 29 at 7 p.m.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Troubles . . . We all have them. We all complain from time to time about them, but they are still there. In our daily lives we continually face difficult decisions, trying circumstances and situations. A wise and philosophical man was once asked how he overcame his difficulties . . . He replied: "How do I get through a trouble? Well, first I try to go around it, and if I can't go around it, I try to get under it, if I can't get under it, I try to go over it, and if I can't get over it, I just plow right through it." Then he added, "God and I plow right through it." Good advice? We think so . . .

Here's another good piece of advice . . . "Warning! Following are names of the seven Machievous Misses who are responsible for most of our troubles: Miss Information, Miss Quotation, Miss Representation, Miss Interpretation, Miss Construction, Miss Conception, Miss Understanding. Don't listen to them! Beware!" - William J.H. Boetcker

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

It seems like neither of the city's two high school football teams wants to get a leg up on the other.

Both teams won their first game of the season, lost their second, won two in a row, then lost this weekend.

The 3-2 records open up a number of interesting scenarios as we enter the second half of the season, the most interesting of which is that the annual Turkey Day battle between Quincy and North could determine who plays in the Super Bowl and who watches in the stands.

These are the records so far in the Old Colony League:

Bridgewater-Raynham	5-0 overall, 3-0 in the OCL
Falmouth	4-1 3-1
Weymouth	3-2 3-1
Quincy	3-2 2-1
North Quincy	3-2 2-2
Barnstable	2-3 2-1
Taunton	2-3 0-3
Silver Lake	0-5 0-3
Plymouth South	0-5 0-4

Under the current system, games against non-league opponents mean nothing - all you have to do is win your league and you're in the Big Show on Dec. 3. So the league standings in the right-hand column are all you really have to look at to see who has the upper-hand at earning a Super Bowl berth. (This also means that Duffee, Brockton and New Bedford - the teams that comprise the Big Three Conference - could technically win just one game all season and still go to the Super Bowl with a 1-9 record. Go figure.)

In other words, Quincy's loss Friday to New Bedford did not affect the Super Bowl picture. However, North's loss to league opponent Weymouth Friday means that they need to win their four remaining league games and have a whole lotta luck in order to go to the Super Bowl.

For Quincy, it's pretty cut-and-dry. Win all their remaining games and hope that B-R loses to one league opponent and they're in the Super Bowl.

If this happens, both B-R and Quincy will have one league loss but Quincy will get the Super Bowl. This is why: For whatever reason, the Old Colony League has an unusual tie-breaker rule. Instead of basing tie-breakers on the tried and true system of head-to-head competition (advantage: B-R) the OCL sends to the Super Bowl the team that has gone the longest without being in one. Advantage: Quincy.

North needs a bit more luck because the same rule that benefits Quincy this season absolutely crushes the Red Raiders. Last season the now-non-existent Plymouth Eagles represented the OCL in the Super Bowl. In 1992 it was North Quincy. So in order for them to go to the Big Show, they need one less loss than the second place team in the league. Unfortunately, this is not likely to happen.

North Quincy visits B-R Nov. 5. North has had just one bad outing (their 28-7 loss to Falmouth) all season. They play everyone tough and have the potential to beat the Trojans. However, a win by North over B-R suddenly opens the door to the Super Bowl for Quincy.

If North and Quincy win all their remaining games then the Thanksgiving showdown will determine who goes on to play in the post-season. If Quincy wins, they're in. If North wins, B-R goes on.

Remember, this is all based on ifs. A lot of things could happen between now and the end of the season. Both teams could go down the tubes, B-R might win all the rest of their games, or we could all die like the dinosaurs when a massive meteor smashes the Earth into tiny space particles.

I come from a long line of hockey fans.

No, not hockey players, the guys with bulging leg muscles, rippled biceps and a four-word vocabulary, but hockey fans, the guys with bulging guts, ripped sweatshirts and a four-word vocabulary. I won't tell you exactly what the four words are, but they're something to this effect: "Sinden you @#%$ #%$@hole!"

But despite our less than politically astute image, we have finally decided to take a stand: As a group, we fans have determined that we don't need the Bruins this year. Or any pro sports for that matter. This is a good move, because if things keep up the way they're going, we won't have any.

What we do need is more focus on amateur sports. High school and college kids don't go on strike. High school and college kids don't ask for money when someone asks for their autographs. And high school and college kids don't sissy-foot around because they just signed a million dollar contract and don't think they have any more to prove.

High school and college kids, for the most part, just want to play. No matter what the sport. And that's a lot more than we're getting out of their professional counterparts.

Jaehnig Club Tops Braintree In Fall League

The Jaehnig Chiropractic 10-year-old baseball team scored three runs in the last inning to beat Braintree, 7-6.

The Jaehnig Club is competing in a fall baseball league held indoors at the new Bridgewater Domes Sports Complex.

Patrick O'Brien started the winning rally with a walk. Back-to-back line drives by Justin Hall (2 for 2) and Patrick Jaehnig loaded the bases. Two walks and a hit batter brought the three runs home.

Patrick Bregoli pitched 1-2/3 innings of relief to record the victory. He was particularly strong in the fourth inning when he entered the game with one out and the bases loaded. Aided by a fine Keith Doherty catch, Bregoli was able to get out of the jam with just one run coming across the plate.

Fireballer Justin Hall struck out the side in the last of the sixth to earn the save. Charlie Vidoli, James LaFleur and Jaehnig also pitched will for the Quincy club.

Tom Buckley cracked a sharp single and did an outstanding job behind the plate. Jackie Liuzzo smashed a double to the right field wall and Phil McGillicuddy picked up an RBI when he blasted a hard ground ball to shortstop with the bases loaded.

Chris Ham, John Fidalgo, Mark Maher and David Jaehnig played well defensively.

Don Alcott hit two singles and pitched well for the Braintree squad.

DeCristofaro Honorary Quincy Captain Friday

During his high school days the Councillor served as manager of the Quincy High basketball and football teams under legendary coach Munroe MacLean. "At 120 pounds I was too small to play football," said the still-wiry DeCristofaro.

"I've been very much involved with Quincy High athletics since then. It'll be an honor for me to be on the field this weekend," he said.

DeCristofaro's face is a familiar one at athletic events throughout the city.

Williams Voices Support For Term Limits

Steve Williams, Republican candidate for state representative, has voiced support for Question 4, the ballot question which would enforce term limits.

"If Question 4 is approved by the voters on Nov. 8, I pledge that I will respect the wishes of the people and will resist any and all attempts to repeal or alter this initiative statute," he said.

Williams recently appeared at a Question 4 rally in front of the State House. The rally, which was sponsored by Limits II, an organization backing term limits, was also attended by other candidates for office.

"It would be the epitome of political arrogance if elected officials tried to dilute this measure once the people have endorsed it," Williams said.

Williams faces Rep. Stephen Tobin in the 2nd Norfolk District race Nov. 8.

Report On P & G Plant:

Biodiesel Will Not Affect Community

An Environmental/Community Impact Study on the future use of the Procter & Gamble plant in Quincy Point has revealed that the use of biodiesel at the site will have no effect on the surrounding community.

The announcement was made Tuesday by City Council President Michael Cheney and Ward 2 Councilor Ted DeCristofaro.

SAR Engineering Inc. was the environmental consultant selected by the City of Quincy to prepare the study looking into several areas of concern regarding the producing of biodiesel at the plant. Procter & Gamble Corp. operated a soap manufacturing and chemical by-product facility for over 50 years, but announced earlier this year the plant would close this fall and the manufacturing functions would be consolidated in a facility outside of Massachusetts.

Technologies, Inc. to obtain permits from federal, state and local authorities.

"We are pleased at SAR Engineering Inc.'s report and have given the manufacturing process of biodiesel a clean bill of health. The report represents the first of many hurdles Twin River Technologies Inc. will have to overcome in order to reopen the plant", said Cheney.

DeCristofaro was equally optimistic, saying, "This will create much needed jobs for the area and we are hopeful that the plant will reopen soon".

Twin Rivers Technologies Inc. wants an option to purchase the Procter & Gamble facility and to manufacture biodiesel, an additive to diesel fuel which will assist in bringing diesel engines in compliance with the Clean Air Act. The company also wants to continue the manufacturing of the fatty acid production. Both technologies will utilize soy bean oil in the manufacturing process.

According to the report, the product of biodiesel is an environmentally closed process that will have no effect on the surrounding community. It will be necessary for Twin Rivers

Cheney and DeCristofaro said they have requested the report be reviewed by the Quincy Health Department, David Standley, environmental consultant for the City of Quincy and the Quincy Fire Department for their review and comments.

Cheney and DeCristofaro have called for a meeting to be held Thursday, Nov. 3 at 7 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at Quincy City Hall. Representatives from SAR Engineering, Inc. will review the findings and answer any questions residents may have.

Residents in the immediate area have been notified by mail of the Nov. 3 meeting. The general public is also invited to attend.

Advanced copies of the report may be obtained by contacting the City Council office at 376-1341 or may be picked up the City Council office Monday through Friday between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m..

USS Salem Ceremony Sunday At Shipyard

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

After several days at sea, the Quincy-built USS Salem will arrive at the Quincy Fore River shipyard Sunday to take her proud place as the centerpiece of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard.

The Salem, the only remaining heavy cruiser in the world, will be welcomed by an expected crowd of 10,000 people, including federal, state, local and museum officials as well as former crewmates and invited dignitaries.

Her return home to Quincy will climax two days of welcoming activities which begin Saturday when the Salem arrives at the Black Falcon Terminal in Boston Harbor.

The museum will sponsor a gala welcoming reception and fundraiser at the terminal beginning at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. Admission is $15 per person or $25 per couple. Invited dignitaries from the Navy, government and former Salem officials will attend.

On Sunday, Oct. 30, invited guests will be allowed to board for the

92 Apply For College Interim Presidency

Ninety-two candidates have applied for the interim presidency of Quincy College.

One of the applicants is Donald Young, present interim president whose contract has expired, and the others are from a wide area. Deadline for submitting applications was Monday.

Ronald Mariano, a member of the college's new Board of Governors and chairman of a five-member screening team that will begin the selection process, said:

"The number of applicants speaks volumes for Quincy College that we could generate that much interest. It is further evidence that the Quincy College presidency is seen as a plumb opportunity."

Mariano noted that there were also 90 applicants for the 13-member Board of Governors.

Mariano said the screening team will meet next week to begin the selection process.

The team, he said, will submit the names of five finalists to the Board of Governors Nov. 7. The board will interview the five and reduce the field to three from which the final choice will be made Nov. 21.

The other members of the screening team are Atty. Theresa Lord, first vice chairman of the Board of Governors; Phillip McCue, second vice chairman; Ivan Smith, representing the Quincy Education Association; and Eileen Mawn, representing the non-teaching professional staff at Quincy College.

Daniel Raymondi, chairman of the Board of Governors, has said he hopes a permanent president can be appointed by next spring.

Two Appeals Withdrawn

Wal-Mart Gets Green Light For Construction

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Two separate appeals filed against the City Council's special permit for the $20 million Granite Crossing shopping center in Quincy Point have been withdrawn and construction of a Wal-Mart store was set to begin this week, The Quincy Sun learned Tuesday.

An unnamed source told the Sun that appeals by the developer, Atlantic Development Corp. of Hingham, and by a resident of the neighboring condominium complex, The Falls, were dropped one week after they were filed in the Dedham land court, court documents reveal.

City Council President Michael Cheney confirmed the appeal withdrawals as the Sun went to press. With the appeals removed, Cheney said he was relieved that the construction phase of the project would soon start.

"I am relieved this is over and that construction can now move forward. This has become a very lengthy process," Cheney said, noting 15 public hearings and public meetings were held regarding the Wal-Mart permit.

"The most important thing is the development will take place and the community will be protected," Cheney said.

The shopping center project, which will include Wal-Mart and a yet unnamed supermarket, will create 200 construction jobs and an additional 500 retail jobs. The center is expected to open in approximately 18 months.

The appeal filed by D.J. MacKinnon, president of Atlantic Development Corp., charged the City Council exceeded its authority in setting the permit's conditions. However, Cheney said MacKinnon has agreed to the permit's original conditions, including $2.2 million in mitigation.

Specifically, Atlantic Development Corp will provide:

•$1 million in traffic improvements including new streets and sidewalks on Quincy Ave. from Hancock St. to the Braintree line and surrounding area;

•water for landscaping and water and electricity for the waterfall at the Falls entrance;

•plumbing work and other measures for senior citizens at 1000 Southern Artery;

•landscaping for a "buffer and screen" for South Landing Condominium located adjacent to the Falls;

•new paved parking lot at the Point-Webster School;

•bus stop shelters.

•senior citizen shuttle service to retail outlets in Quincy.

•buyout package for Falls condo residents who recently purchased units and were not informed of the Wal-Mart project proposal at time of sale.

In addition, Atlantic Development Corp. will provide a $600,000 cash payment to the Falls Condominium Association. The money will be earmarked by the association and may be used to offset future condo fees.

Another $130,000 will go toward the renovation of the former Child World and Cummings store sites in Quincy Center, the future location of Decelle clothing store. Without the mitigation package, officials say Decelle would not have considered coming to Quincy.

Cheney, who along with Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro met several times with MacKinnon, said the conditions of the permit will remain in place and unchanged for at least one year once Wal-Mart opens.

"There will be no changes in this permit for at least one year after the doors are open and even then extensive public hearings and public meetings will have to take place before any changes will be approved by the City Council and the Planning Board.

"It's my feeling," Cheney continued, "that both the City Council and Planning Board would be reluctant to change conditions provided in this permit."

Shooter's Club Liquor License Move Delayed

The Shooter's Cafe will have to wait at least one more week for permission to transfer an all alcoholic beverage license from 1585 Hancock St. to 58 Ross Way.

The Quincy License Board delayed action on the request which according to City Clerk Joseph Shea is procedural in these cases.

Attorney Robert J. Fleming, representing Jim Pansullo and Kevin Ryan, holders of the license for the past five years said with the departure of Footprints, a non-alcoholic night club, it gives an opportunity for Shooters cafe to move two doors down in a completed renovated building. The 6,000 square foot facility has a capacity of 126 seats and will have 14 pool tables.

It will be for those over 21 years of age. The Shooter's club will remain at the old site for those under 21 years of age.

Speaking in favor of the move and commending the owners for a favorable five years was Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000.

Opposing the move was Richard Barker, owner of Barker's who complained about graffiti along the parkingway, plus broken windows and blamed "absentee landlords" who have no interest in the city. Police Chief Mullen said "you're not talking to deaf ears" and assured him that the department has a graffiti detail who along with the Public Works Department and the Mayor's office quickly remove any graffiti. City Clerk Joseph Shea said he would write a letter to the owners of the garage as well.

Dave Hagger, representing the owners of the building in which Shooters would be housed questioned whether the lease mentioned any transfer of a liquor license. However, Matt Mulvey said the license board had no record of such action. Shea said he would have the city's law department investigate further.

Flu Clinics For Quincy Residents Begin Nov. 5

The Quincy Health Department announces flu clinics for Quincy residents over 18 years will be held at various locations throughout the city from Nov. 5 through Nov. 29.

The specific dates, times and clinic locations are listed in a chart accompanying this story.

This year's flu shot contains the strains A/Texas, A/Shangdong B/Panama to provide immunity against the types of flu which have been circulating in the past year and thought to be most likely to occur in the U.S. this winter.

Because influenza vaccine contains only non-infectious viruses it cannot cause influenza.

Annual vaccination against influenza is recommended for:

- Residents of nursing homes and residents of other chronic care facilities who are over 18 years of age and have chronic medical conditions.
- Healthy people over 65 years of age.
- People of any age who during the past year have

Gun Buyback Program Saturday, Sunday

The city's long-awaited gun buyback program has been scheduled for this weekend.

Officials announced Monday that any person who turns in a gun capable of discharging a bullet will receive $50 in cash or food coupons. The program, which is modeled after those in Boston and Brockton, will be held Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m. at the Quincy Police Station.

The goal of the program is to keep guns off the streets. Weapons that are collected will be destroyed.

Potential donors are asked to call the police department and get a case number before bringing the weapon to the station. Officials said that provides legal protection for donors carrying the gun to the station.

Donors are also requested to unload the weapon, place it in a clear plastic bag within a brown bag and store it in their car trunks for transport before leaving home. Police officers will also be available to pick up guns at the homes of residents unable to drop them off in person.

Those who turn in weapons may remain anonymous unless the gun returned is linked to a crime. The serial numbers on the guns will be checked immediately.

Donors will receive $50 in cash, a $50 gift certificate for groceries at Shaw's Supermarkets or a $50 coupon redeemable at Amelia's Restaurant at Marina Bay in Squantum. Officials said money and certificates will be given out on a first come, first served basis while as long as the $15,425 in donations last.

Police officials said they expect to exhaust the budget by Sunday afternoon.

The gun buyback program, which was first announced last April, was prompted by a proposal from Mark Osborne, president of Hibernia Savings Bank. The start date was delayed once because a corporation had to be set up to run the program, then postponed again last month because the city hoped to raise more funding.

However, organizers subsequently decided to go ahead, saying this could be the first round of buybacks. Funding for the program all came from corporations and private donors.

Officials said the buyback programs in Boston and Brockton were both successes. Boston police collected more than 1,300 guns during the summer, while Brockton officials took in 800 guns in a three-month program that ended June 30.

DEMOLITION OF BUILDING 86 at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy began last week. Among those at the site of the project, which is expected to last about three months, were MWRA Executive Director Douglas MacDonald (left) and state Rep. Ronald Mariano. Story On Page 28

IT'S NEVER TOO LATE TO QUIT

Veteran smokers sometimes point to people in their 70s and 80s who stubbornly puff away despite all the pressure to quit as proof that some people are immune to the health hazards of smoking. If a smoker reaches a certain age, the damage has been done and there is no point in stopping - or so says conventional wisdom. However, new evidence is piling up that even smokers in their 70s and beyond can increase their chances of living longer if they give up the habit.

One study of more than 7,000 people over age 65 found that those who began to quit smoking experienced a risk of death from heart disease as roughly the same rate as those who never smoked. Late quitters lowered their cancer death rates as well.

P.S. Children of mothers who smoke have been found to have more behavioral problems than children of nonsmokers.

Changing an injurious habit takes time, but the effort pays off in greater health and peace of mind. For more information, visit COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy or call myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment. Cahill's Book Makes Debut

His book is finally off the press and first-time author Timothy Patrick Cahill frankly admits he's nervous.

Better known as Tim Cahill, City Councillor at-large, he confides: "I don't get nervous in politics but I really am a little nervous about the book because I don't know what the reaction will be."

CAHILL

The 132-page hard cover book with photos (plus prologue, acknowledgements and epilogue) climaxes four years of research, writing, re-writing and plain sweat, has nothing to do with politics.

It profiles four Horatio Alger-like figures in Quincy's business history, how they started from humble beginnings, their ups and downs, their survival in tough times and their faith in themselves and the future.

The four, covering the period from 1888 to the present:

•Louis Grossman, a poor, illiterate Russian immigrant, who as a door-to-door peddler with a sack on his back blazed the trail for the future home building materials giant, L. Grossman & Sons.

•Howard Johnson, a not too successful cigar salesman, who found magic in an ice cream recipe, parlaying it into a nation-wide restaurant-motel empire.

•William Rosenberg, who designed a canteen truck and brought coffee, doughnuts and sandwiches to local factory workers which was the start of the now famed international Dunkin Donuts chain.

•Peter O'Connell, who sold newspapers as a boy in front of City Hall and at the Quincy Shipyard, saved his money and bought a piece of land which was the beginning of what became one of New England's largest development firms.

Cahill gets the book off to a nice start in the prologue in a down-to-earth interview with Rosenberg which sets a fast paced tone for the rest of the book.

A tough two-fisted businessman, Rosenberg says: "I demand that the customers get what they are entitled to and if I don't demand that I don't succeed, you don't succeed, nobody will succeed. That's what has happened to this country, we've forgotten how to please the customer."

Though he could be tough, Rosenberg confides he's been reduced to near tears by some of the nice people he met on the way up.

The book is sprinkled with little known or forgotten facts and anecdotes about the four subjects.

For example, the Grossman Company might never have been founded in Quincy if Louis Grossman hadn't got lost one day.

He was 26 years when he came to America in 1888 (the year Quincy became a city) and started to peddle soon after his arrival in Boston.

But on his first day, with a sack on his back containing writing paper, seat covers and other items, he got on the wrong train and found himself in Quincy. But, as long as he was here, he decided to knock on doors and sold out everything.

Just to be sure he would find his way back to Boston, he walked back, following the railroad tracks.

Grossman lived on a nickel a day for six months to save enough money to bring his wife and three children from Russia. He then came back to Quincy to settle with them on Bunker Hill Lane.

A son, Joseph, was born here in 1892—the first Jewish baby born in Quincy, according to Cahill. He grew up to be active in politics and in the community and was elected Governor's Councillor.

Howard Johnson, an eighth grade dropout, was 27 and trying to sell cigars to stores in 1925. He wasn't getting anywhere so he decided to buy a drugstore on Beale St. in Wollaston that wasn't doing so well either.

But with an ice cream recipe from his mother and a secret one he bought, he went on to 28 flavors, fame and fortune. But it didn't happen overnight.

He opened his first roadside stand—a little shack—at Wollaston Beach in 1928. Then he opened a restaurant in the lower level of the Granite Trust Bank, now the Bank of Boston, in Quincy Sq.

His first big break came in 1929 when Eugene O'Neill's controversial play, "Strange Interlude," was banned in Boston but won permission to open here.

It played at the old Quincy Theatre on Hancock St. for a long run and had an hour and a half dinner intermission. Hungry theatergoers wandered down the street and into Johnson's restaurant. They liked the food and service. His name got around and he was on his way.

But there were obstacles and challenges ahead: the 1929 stock market crash, the 1930's depression and World War II with gasoline rationing that left his then chain of roadside stands virtually deserted, and him on the brink of bankruptcy.

But he fought back, landing contracts to provide food for war production plants and military bases. And survived.

William Rosenberg, another eighth grade dropout, was 29 in 1946 when he drove his first canteen truck to Boston Gear Works with coffee, doughnuts and sandwiches. Within three years he had a fleet of 140 trucks.

In 1946, he started a coffee and doughnut shop on Southern Artery called the Open Kettle. Two years later it became the first Dunkin Donuts shop.

Peter O'Connell was 11 in 1954 and selling newspapers in front of City Hall and at the Quincy Shipyard. In 1958 at age 15, he used $450 of the money he earned to purchase a parcel of land on Parker St., the street he had grown up on.

Ten years later, he and his brother, Bill, put up a six-unit apartment building on the lot and the O'Connell Brothers Development Company was born.

Cahill notes a link between the O'Connells and Howard Johnson. Their father, William, worked at Johnson's Wollaston Beach restaurant as a young man in the 1930's. There he met his future wife, Phelma, who was then a pretty, young student at Eastern Nazarene College, who used to stop by for an ice cream cone.

Young O'Connell did everything to impress her, including giving her an extra scoop of ice cream free. Love soon blossomed.

Cahill, a former businessman himself (he recently sold his Handshakes Restaurant) says his four subjects reflect the business scene in the country over the past century.

"I wanted to write about what a struggle it is to start a business and to keep it going, about the risks businessmen take and how they face and overcome setbacks to stay alive when times are bad," he says.

"My four subjects not only accomplished all that but they came through it with their souls intact."

The book, published by the Christopher Publishing House in Hanover, sells for $16.95 and is available now at The College Book Store and Infinity Books in downtown Quincy. Cahill has book signings scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 3 from 2 to 6 p.m. at the College Book Store and from 7 to 9 p.m. at Infinity.

Cahill doesn't know if he will attempt a second book.

If he does, chances are that the next one would be about another subject he knows pretty well: politics.

And that would be an interesting one, too.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1910 postcard view of the approach into Squantum along East Squantum St. The trolley tracks veered to Dorchester St. on the left and then followed on to Squantum Park. The small white building in the right center is today the location of a brick apartment building named the Nelson block. The black For Sale sign with white letters was posted by John R. Nelson whose sales office in the Tremont House in Boston was agent for the sale of the 100 acre Lillie B. Thus estate comprised of 914 house lots. The white sign points left to the Squantum Inn featuring fish and chicken dinners, while the sign behind the telephone poles on the right was for Lee's Inn which was located on Park Ave. and had a similar menu. Watt's general store, now DiMattia Sall Co. is on the extreme right. Note the pier and boathouse on the left.

Chretien Supports Questions 6 & 7

Editor, The Quincy Sun :

As a Quincy City Councillor, I don't often get to vote for anything that benefits 95 percent of my constituency. But on Nov. 8, I will take advantage of an opportunity to do just that by happily voting yes on Questions 6 and 7, the ballot questions regarding the graduated income tax.

The graduated income tax is a reasonable idea, originally brought to America by a Republican president, Teddy Roosevelt. Today, the federal government and 35 states have a graduated income tax. Massachusetts does not. People earning $20,000 or $200,000 pay the same rate. Without getting radical, we can be fairer.

According to the Department of Revenue, Questions 6 and 7 would give 92 percent of the state's taxpayers a much needed break. Here in Quincy, the figure is more like 95 percent. Only the top 5 percent would pay more. A typical middle class family of four would get a tax reduction of $561 per year! Almost all of our senior citizens would see their taxes drop too. So, without having to lay off one teacher or one firefighter, we can cut taxes for almost everyone in Quincy. For this city councillor, it's an easy vote.

Rezoning Plan Makes 'Solid Sense' For City

Editor, The Quincy Sun :

I didn't quite understand the Braintree-based Bradlee's chain's recent opposition to the plans of the Quincy City Council to rezone Presidents Plaza on Quincy Avenue to the same category as the just-approving Granite Crossing where Wal-Mart is to be the major tenant.

According to Aileen Gorman, Bradlee's vice president of public affairs, "Bradlee's is absolutely outraged...Why would the council want to penalize companies that have been well-established members of the community?" A public hearing on the rezoning of Presidents Plaza, where Bradlee's is the major tenant, is scheduled for Nov. 21.

City Councillor Ted DeCristoforo, whose Ward 2 district includes both Bradlee's and the proposed Wal-Mart, said the new zoning designation would give the City Council more control over any expansion of Presidents Plaza and require a public hearing process. According to him, "We're just protecting ourselves and the people in the neighborhood."

Is the Bradlee's chain just acting out against the soon-to-be new kid on the Quincy Avenue block? I'm not against business expansion and I'm not opposed to Bradlee's renovating their store to compete better against a new retail neighbor. However, I do not see the City Council action as outrageous. In fact, it is quite a responsible move on their part. If Bradlee's wants to expand in order to match Wal-Mart, shouldn't all businesses be treated the same? Should different rules apply to Bradlee's than to Wal-Mart?

I agree with Ms. Gorman from Bradlee's that Quincy retailers be allowed to make renovations necessary to compete with Wal-Mart but the Quincy City Council shouldn't give carte blanche powers to any business whether large or small, whether Wal-Mart or Bradlee's.

Personally, I think perhaps the Quincy City Council needs to develop a new master plan for the Quincy portion of Quincy Avenue. Uncontrollable growth is the last thing Quincy needs and the last thing the neighborhood around Quincy Avenue needs. Business growth is needed in Quincy and the Quincy City Council needs to be responsive to the neighborhood being impacted by either Granite Crossing or any proposed expansion of Presidents Plaza.

As that old song might go, there ain't no good stores, there ain't no bad stores, there's just Wal-Mart and Bradlee's and they both disagree. City Hall can't play favorites. I appreciate Bradlee's long-term commitment to the City of Quincy but business is business. Quincy Avenue needs the City Council watching out for area residents. Bradlee's and Wal-Mart aren't public service agencies. They are businesses driven by the profit motive, aren't they?

Kudos to the Quincy City Council for watching out for Quincy's best interests. We elect them to represent us and this rezoning plan makes solid sense for the entire city.

U.S. Service Academies Application Deadline Nov. 1

U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds announces that high school students on the South Shore and Cape Cod and the Islands may apply for nomination to the four U.S. Service Academies.

Deadline for application is Nov. 1.

"I encourage all students interested in attending one of the Service Academies next year—whether it's the Navy, Air Force, Military or Merchant Marine—to contact me as soon as possible," Studds said.

Studds also urged students who have already indicated interest in nominations to make certain their application files are completed by Nov. 1. Letters detailing the application process were mailed earlier this month to all high school career counselors in the 10th Congressional District.

"All applications completed by the deadline will be carefully considered and evaluated by my Nomination Selection Committee," he said. "I will then forward the names of those students recommended by the Committee to the Academies as my nominees."

For more information, call Studds at 1-800-794-9911.

$98 Million Civilian Contract For Shipyard

By PAUL HAROLD

General Dynamics was awarded its first civilian contract at the Quincy Shipyard by the Federal Maritime Subsidy Board this week.

The $98 million project called for the construction of three highly sophisticated barge-carrying merchant vessels designed by the Lykes Brothers Steamship Co. The double decker vessels would be capable of carrying 24 cargo-carrying barges.

It took the federal board two years to decide that General Dynamics was the lowest bidder, at $32.6 million per ship. The only other bidder was the Avondale Shipyards of Louisiana.

The government subsidy of the ship construction was 55 percent, the highest percentage allowed by law.

OIL SPILLAGE AT TOWN RIVER

At the request of Ward 2 Councillor Clifford Marshall, Fire Chief Edward Barry designated Deputy Chief Herbert Rourke and Fire Captain Francis Daly to investigate conditions at the Quincy Oil Company's waterfront terminals on Town River.

While the federal government standards called for use of plastic booms to prevent the spread of accidental spills, the Town River area was still outfitted with wooden booms, that Councillor Marshall called useless.

Kennedy Keynote Speaker At Brunch

Democrats Rally As Election Draws Near

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

With the Nov. 8 election less than two weeks away and candidates canvassing the state in search of votes, Massachusetts Democrats came together in Quincy Sunday to rally and unite their forces.

U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy was the keynote speaker at the seventh annual Quincy Democratic City Committee brunch held at the George F. Bryan VFW Post in Quincy. Other Democrats headlining the event were Cong. Gerry Studds and gubernatorial contender Mark Roosevelt.

Kennedy, engaged in the closest campaign of his political career, reminded the guests of his accomplishments to the Quincy area, namely his work to revitalize the Quincy Shipyard.

"What that is going to mean if we're successful and when we're successful is that there is going to be more working men and women here at this breakfast in the next two years and the next four years and they won't be able to get into this breakfast," Kennedy told the 200 party loyalists and guests.

Kennedy, who campaigned for president in 1980, called his Republican rival Mitt Romney indecisive, wavering in his support for certain policies.

"I am somewhat perplexed about his position on various policy issues. We're used to some politicians going flip-flop. But, Mr. Romney now goes flip-flop-flip."

Kennedy touted laws which he helped to write including the family and medical leave act and the recently signed crime bill as examples of two key issues Romney supports after changing his mind.

"Give me two more weeks and Mitt Romney's going to support me," Kennedy said to resounding cheers from the jam-packed audience.

Cong. Gerry Studds, who is also opposed this year, introduced Kennedy as a hard-working representative for the people of Massachusetts. Evidence of his hard work, Studds suggested, may be apparent in his appearance.

"Well, let me tell you something, I would be worried that after representing us for this many years in the Senate he came in here looking fit and rested and trim and tan, that's what I'd be worried about," said Studds.

Studds described the 32-year incumbent as an agent of change who has always been ahead of the times.

"When I went to Washington 22 years ago, who was it then that was saying every American should have national health insurance? It was Ted Kennedy 22 years ago," he said.

The congressman described Kennedy as a "courageous leader" who always stands up for what he believes in.

"He's been the leader for 30 years on behalf of everything that he believes in. Sometimes he has stood alone as the only voice of reason and calm and compassion and courage."

Neal Sullivan, chairman of the Quincy Democratic Committee, likened Roosevelt to former President Harry S. Truman as a "surprise" victor in the gubernatorial election.

Roosevelt jokingly said he is related to almost every former American President, referring to his distant kinship to President Theodore Roosevelt.

"I am not, however, related to [former President] Richard Nixon," Roosevelt mused.

On a more serious note, Roosevelt accused Gov. William Weld of being "lazy" when the issue of crime was addressed in the legislature.

"When the issue of the death penalty was on the floor of the Massachusetts Legislature, and he claims it's his number one priority, he didn't make one telephone call. He didn't call one single legislator. He didn't do one thing."

After reading to the audience Weld's schedule which includes three squash practices a week and no appointments before 11 a.m., Roosevelt objected to being called "lazy" by Weld.

"Being called lazy by Bill Weld is like being called ugly by a toad and I kind of resent it."

Roosevelt also accused Weld of not bringing businesses to Massachusetts.

"Name the largest company to move to this state after he's been governor," he said, "after you can't do that name any company to move to this state since he's been governor; there's been none," he said.

Pitching his support for Kennedy, Roosevelt said he does not want his 7-year old son Matthew to be part of the future of a Republican Massachusetts.

"I don't want my son growing up in Mitt Romney and Bill Weld's Massachusetts," he said.

Bill Galvin, candidate for Secretary of State, accused the Republican Party of hiding behind rhetoric and only saying what they are opposed to.

"The Republican Party constantly tells us what they are against. They are defined by what they are against, we are defined by what we are for," he said.

Galvin not only asked for the audience's support but he also asked for the audience to support the entire Democratic ticket.

"If you want a positive attitude, if you want an attitude that in fact is designed to address

SEN. EDWARD KENNEDY and Norfolk County District Atty. William Delahunt exchange greetings at the Quincy Democratic City Committee brunch Sunday at the George F. Bryan VFW Post. Kennedy was the keynote speaker at the brunch which attracted 200 Democrats and guests.

THE DENNIS F. RYAN Community Award was presented posthumously to former Assistant City Clerk Patricia Toland who died last month after a battle with cancer. Accepting the award in Mrs. Toland's memory are her son, Brendan (second from left); daughter Elizabeth and sister Marie Egan. The award, presented by Quincy Democratic City Committee Chairman Neal Sullivan, is given annually to an individual for outstanding leadership and commitment. Mrs. Toland also served Quincy as a city councillor and school committeewoman.

problem solving to help people there must be no doubt we must make sure the entire Democratic ticket is elected from top to bottom," he said.

Shannon O'Brien, campaigning against incumbent Joe Malone for State Treasurer, criticized her opponent for not helping the middle class.

"One of the first things he did in office was take away a middle class investment opportunity for people who are struggling to save for a college education, for people who are looking for some economic security in their retirement," she said.

If elected, O'Brien said she is going to be a different kind of treasurer.

"I'm going to be a different kind of treasurer, I'm going to fight for [sewer] rate relief, I'm going to make sure that I'm not just a pencil pusher or a bean counter, I'm going to be a leader," she said.

Local Democrats paused to remember one of their own, former city councillor and school committeewoman Patricia Toland who died last month after a battle with cancer.

The Dennis F. Ryan Community Award was presented posthumously to Toland, who also served Quincy as assistant city clerk, a post she held until her untimely death.

Mrs. Toland's son, Brendan, accepted the award from Sullivan in his mother's memory as daughter, Elizabeth, and sister, Marie Egan, looked on.

The award is presented annually to an individual who has provided leadership and commitment to the Quincy Democratic Party.

Also in attendance at the event were Mayor James Sheets, Sen. Michael Morrissey, Reps. Stephen Tobin, Ronald Mariano and Michael Bellotti; city councillors, school committee members and former Sen. Paul Harold and Clerk Magistrate and former Mayor Arthur Tobin.

Rabbi Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue, 33 Grafton St., gave a closing benediction.

Phase I Of Wollaston Improvements Completed

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Some long-awaited improvements to the Wollaston Business District have been completed.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said the first phase of the project, which began last July, was finished last week.

Colton said the work runs from Hancock Street to Old Colony Avenue and includes road reconstruction, sidewalk repairs, new brick edging, about 30 newly-planted trees, new historic street lights, and the replacement of a sewer on Beale Street.

In addition, all of the area's parking meters have been removed, he said.

Colton said the improvements cost about $600,000 and were funded by money included in Mayor James Sheets' bond issue passed earlier this year by the City Council.

Sheets was unavailable for comment at press time. However, U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, touring the area Tuesday with Ward 5 City Councillor Charles Phelan, said he liked what he saw.

"I love Quincy," said Studds, who has only represented the city since it was added to his district two years ago. "It's very special, and it doesn't look like any other city I've ever seen. It's a unique city."

The second phase of the project is scheduled to begin next spring and "will take most of next year," to be completed, according to Colton. The $1.4 million project will include two areas--Hancock Street from Beach Street to Wentworth Road, and Beach Street from Hancock Street to Kemper Avenue--and will be funded by a combination of bonds, Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and Chapter 90 funds, he said.

Colton said the third and final phase of the project, which is not yet funded, will include Hancock Street from Beach Street to the site of the Wollaston Market. That phase is "hopefully" begun by late next summer or next fall, he added.

SMALL BUSINESS OWNERS Lyane Houghton of Morrill Real Estate and Alan Gordan of Manis Flower Shop in Wollaston were among the small business owners met with Cong. Gerry Studds on Tuesday. Studds toured the Wollaston business district and discussed the local economy with business owners.

Plans For Mollie Hirshberg Center Enter Final Phase

The planned "Mollie Hirshberg Learning Center, which will enable South Shore Mental Health to build on the late Mollie Hirshberg's work, is entering its final phase.

The Learning Center will be located at the former Methodist Church building, 6 Fort St., Quincy Center occupying four stories.

South Shore Mental Health authorities cite the late Mrs. Hirshberg's work with its organization by providing a place for children at risk and their families in order to enhance their development at home, in school and to the community.

The Step One Early Intervention Program serves children from birth through age 3, with disabilities such as Down Syndrome and epilepsy, and those affected by conditions such as physical abuse

With the need for additional Step One Program space, the committee, including Mrs. Hirshberg's husband, Dr. Sumner Hirshberg, a well-known South Shore and Greater Boston dentist, and a number of prominent citizens, was able to secure the 6 Fort St. building, which adjoins the administration offices of South Shore Mental Health, and which is being remodelled for the school children.

Other committee members include: Joanne Falzone Cherubini, Thomas Collins, Phyllis Fazio, Herbert Fontaine, Donna

Friedman, Arthur Gabel, Herbert Glanz, Janice Hank, Lois Hirshberg, Anne Kane, Ann Macdonald, William Macdonald, Margery O'Donnell, Arnold Rinkofsky, Rhoda Sapers, Sid Shear, Harry Shulman, Christine Tokle and Lloyd Wilkie.

A contract for renovations has been awarded with the completion date expected in three months. Currently, there are 25 to 35 families on a waiting list until room is available for them. The Learning Center will provide the space needed to expand the program to serve these families on the South Shore. Funds will be needed for equipping the Learning Center for a school for the children.

Council On Aging Meets Today At Atlantic Center

The Quincy Council on Aging will meet today (Thursday) at 2 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Community Center, 12 Hunt St.

Members of the Council Board will obtain the anti-flu vaccine prior to the meeting through the cooperation of the Quincy Health Department.

The Board will meet for the first time at the Atlantic Center to provide an opportunity to meet with representatives of the Asian Focus group and discuss programs of concern to the elderly in the north section of Quincy.

The Board plans to hold similar meetings in other neighborhood centers in Quincy.

Board chairman John Noonan urges all members to attend and avail themselves of the flu immunization program. He said public health officials predict a flu outbreak this winter and all elders at risk should receive the flu vaccine at the various clinics conducted by the Quincy Health Department.

There is no charge for flu vaccine obtained at the clinics.

The advisory also lists procedures concerning parking, access to the shipyard, and other instructions for Sunday's public ceremony.

Specifically, the museum requests spectators and participants observe the following:

Appeals Withdrawn; Wal-Mart Construction To Start

Atlantic Development Corp. has also agreed on the operating hours stipulated by the City Council. The developer had hoped Wal-Mart would be allowed to open from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. However, the Council ruled, and MacKinnon agreed, that the store hours will be 8 a.m. to 9 a.m.

Cheney said if a future store is granted longer operating hours (before 8 a.m. or after 9 a.m. as Wal-Mart wants), Wal-Mart could seek an extension but only after a public hearing process.

The other appeal withdrawn was originally filed by Shari Goscinak, a Falls condo owner, who sought to overturn the City Council's approval of the project. Court documents indicate no reason for the drop in the Goscinak appeal.

NATIONAL CAR CARE MONTH™

CarCare

Report: Reduction Of Vehicle Emissions Will Cause Cleaner Air

Motorists throughout the United States can help clear our nation's air as part of National Car Care Month.

The goal can be achieved by following simple driving and maintenance procedures that will help reduce vehicle emissions from automobiles, a Washington, D.C.-

based transportation research group reports.

"Motorists can become 'green drivers' by taking positive steps that will help improve our nation's air quality," said William M. Wilkins, executive director of The Road Information Program (TRIP).

Wilkins said the environmental driving tips primarily involve routine automobile maintenance procedures and driving habits that are easy to follow.

The tips for motorists outlined in TRIP's newly-released brochure "The Road to a Greener Future" include:

- Keep your car engine well-tuned.

- Avoid excess idling in non-traffic situations.

- Avoid gunning or racing the engine.

- Plan and consolidate your automobile trips.

- Don't pump the accelerator before starting your car if your car has fuel injection.

- Have your vehicle's emissions equipment inspected.

- Don't overfill your gas tank when refueling.

"Some of these 'green driving' tips may be surprising to motorists," Wilkins said.

"For example, if you're in a non-traffic situation such as leaving your car running while you go to the store or a friend's house, it's better to shut off your engine rather than let it idle," Wilkins said. "Restarting your car consumes less fuel and emits fewer emissions than letting it idle for 30 seconds or more."

Wilkins also said advanced automotive technology is playing a significant role in improving air quality. Equipment found in most new model vehicles such as catalytic converters, fuel injection and overdrive transmissions helps reduce vehicle emissions.

Many older model cars may not have this emission-reducing equipment. In fact, just 10 percent of cars on the road today produce 50 to 60 percent of carbon monoxide and 40 to 50 percent of hydrocarbon emissions, according to a joint report by The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Replace Wipers In Good Weather

Nighttime driving in unfamiliar territory is difficult when you're tired. Add a little rain plus a smearing, noisy windshield wiper and you have a potentially dangerous finale to a long day on the road.

To prevent this scenario, plan to quit driving before dark, suggests the Car Care Council, and be sure your lights and windshield wipers are okay.

Windshield wipers are among the most popular replacement items on a car. To be sure you select the right type and size for your particular vehicle, shop for wiper blades in good weather.

You will see various aerodynamic features, single, double and triple blade designs and some with rubber boots to prevent freezing, some blades offer a selection of colors.

The best time to learn how to install wiper blades is while you are in the store. There you can compare instructions on the packages and, if necessary, ask questions.

Take the old blade with you, as sizes range from 15 to 22 inches and blade assembly connectors vary from brand to brand, vehicle to vehicle. When choosing a blade that must be adapted to your vehicle, be sure the package includes necessary fittings.

If the wiper blade holder still is serviceable, you may want to buy blade refills only.

Car In Need Of Tune-Up Uses 10% More Gasoline

Engineers at Tune-Up Manufacturers Institute, whose products directly affect engine efficiency, say an engine that needs a tune-up will use about 10% more gas than one that's running efficiently.

Simple procedures like repairing a sticking choke mechanism, leaning fuel injectors or replacing worn spark plugs can make a big difference in an engine's performance. And don't overlook the spark plug wires.

With one out of the three vehicles having a fuel wasting mechanical discrepancy, the benefits of routine engine diagnosis and preventive maintenance are fairly obvious.

Annual engine tune-ups not only increase gas mileage but also reduce exhaust emissions.

Raiders Host Silver Lake Friday

North In Lackluster Win Over Don Bosco

By DAVE SOUTHWICK
North Quincy handed Don Bosco a 28-6 loss Saturday at Daly Field in Brighton. Despite the score, Red Raider head coach Ken McPhee was disappointed with his team's lackluster performance.

North Quincy (4-2) will host Silver Lake Friday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium in an Old Colony League matchup. Kickoff is set for 7 p.m. North won last year's meeting, 28-12.

Leading Don Bosco (1-5) only 14-6 at the half, McPhee and his staff elected not to stay with the team in the locker room during the intermission. "I had nothing much to say," said the coach. "They needed to

The two first-half North Quincy touchdowns were scored by Shawn Nee. The running back ended the game with 173 yards on 24 carries. He also kicked all four extra points.

"Nee played very well this week," said McPhee. "He is very good at what he does and he'll find a way to beat you somehow."

North scored on their first two drives of the first quarter. After Don Bosco went out on four plays, North went to work with Nee doing most of the running. He rushed for 40 of North's 46 yards on the first scoring drive. Glenn Peterson picked up the

Silver Lake At A Glance

Record: 0-6. 0-4 in the OCL. Lost to Taunton, 25-0, last week.

Coach: Jeff Knight (first year).

Previous Meeting: North Quincy beat Silver Lake, 28-12, last season. It was the Lakers' seventh loss during and 0-10 campaign.

Offense: As one Silver Lake coach said, "we really have nothing." The Lakers have not scored a point since the third game of the season. They have scored a total of just 26.

Defense: Safeties Matt Guevremont and Jacob Barnes are strong defenders. The defense has looked better than the offense but suffers from a lack of size and experience.

Player to Watch: FB/LB Ryan Ewell - a 175-pound fireplug. RB Tucker Apple has the best name in the OCL.

other 6. "Nee raced 31 yards down the sideline for his first score.

It didn't take the Red Raiders long to strike again. On the ensuing kickoff, the Bears could not hang on to the ball and North Quincy recovered. Nee ran for 25 yards on the first play. After a 1-yard loss on the next, he ran in for his second score from 4 yards out with 3:51 left in the first.

The second quarter was a tough one for North Quincy. With two penalties and a number of missed tackles, North let Don Bosco get on the board with 52 seconds left as sophomore Joe O'Malley scored from the 1-yard line on a quarterback keeper. His pass for two points failed.

North had one more chance to score before the half but a holding penalty brought back a 40-yard run by Nee.

The Red Raiders felt they needed a score to open the second half despite having the lead. Starting from their own 40, North quickly marched into Bear territory, thanks to a 25-yard run by Nee and a 14-yard dash by Peterson. Derek Epps carried the ball around left end for the final 4 yards and the score. Nee's well-hit extra point sailed over the goal posts and into the Charles River to give North a 21-6 lead.

The Bears touched the ball just twice in the third quarter and were shut down by an improved Red Raider defense. The defensive attack was led by Dave Carney, Neil Kiley, Ricky Maciera, Mike Coner and Gerry Fernandez.

"We played extremely well defensively in the second half," said McPhee. "We just didn't play well defensively in the first half."

The Raiders controlled the ball for most of the fourth quarter, including the drive that led to an insurance touchdown. Quarterback Sean Dolbear, after missing the entire week of practice with a temperature of 103, played the entire game and completed his only two passes in the fourth quarter - one to Epps and a 15-yard scoring strike to Eric Zimmerman.

"Give Dolbear a lot of credit. He missed the whole week of practice and led this team well today," said McPhee.

McPhee cleared his bench late and Kenny Burke, Mike Ferguson and Michael Sampson played well.

Youth Football

Apaches Remain Unscored Upon

Chris Bregoli scored two touchdowns to lead the North Quincy Apaches to a 16-0 win over the Quincy Point Panthers in Quincy Youth Football League play.

The Apaches remain undefeated and unscored upon.

The two clubs battled to a 0-0 deadlock at halftime, but Bregoli returned the opening kickoff of the second half 65 yards for a touchdown. His second score came on a 1-yard plunge up the middle early in the second quarter. The

TD was set up by a 75-yard run by Fred Elfman on a reverse. Elfman was caught just before he reached the end zone.

Two-point conversion efforts after both touchdowns were successful.

Will Tracey, Frank (Tank) McNamara and Tim McAdams were the defensive stalwarts for the Apaches.

Tom Daley, James Bennett and quarterback Anthony Placet led the Panthers offensively. Sean Burke was tough on defense and Keith and Larry Antonellis played well on both sides of the ball.

The Houghs Neck Manets bested the West Quincy Elks, 26-6.

Danny Paluzzi and Jim Shea played well for the Elks. Bob McDonnell had his best game of the season running the ball.

The Manets win set up a showdown with the Panthers this weekend. The winner will face the Apaches in the QYFL title game.

North Golfers Win South Sectional

The North Quincy High golf team, in the midst of its finest season in years, captured first place in the South Sectional tournament Monday at Pocasset Country Club.

The Red Raiders won as their top four golfers combined for a score of 328 over 18 holes.

Senior co-captain Brendan O'Brien led North and finished fourth overall with a score of 77. First-year golfer Chris Geary placed eighth overall with a score of 82.

Seniors Steve Heroux

and Keith Cross (co-captain) also place in the top 20 with scores of 84 and 85, respectively.

Red Raiders Dave Doherty and Brian Degan also played well in the tournament.

Eleven teams and 74 individuals competed in the sectional.

Braintree High finished second.

North Quincy finished the regular season with a 13-3 record, good enough for second in the Old Colony League. "This has to be one of the best years in the history of North Quincy golf," said coach Rick Hutchins.

The Red Raiders had a chance to finish first in the OCL regular season standings but were edged out by Barnstable which finished 14-2.

North was scheduled to compete in the OCL championships Wednesday in Halifax. North won the OCLs in 1992 and finished third last season.

The state tourney takes place Monday at Norton Country Club. The Red Raiders can finish no worse than fifth.

Presidents Travel To Falmouth Friday

Quincy Outdefended By Weymouth, 7-6

By KERRY BYRNE

If you like defensive football, this was your game. If you like the Quincy Presidents, this was not.

Neither team was able to move the ball effectively as Quincy fell to their cross-bridge rival Weymouth, 7-6, Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Quincy dropped to 3-3, 2-2 in the Old Colony League. Weymouth, the surprise of the OCL, improved to 4-2, 4-1 OCL.

Quincy travels to Falmouth Friday night. The Clippers are 5-1.

"We gotta re-group. We've got some problems offensively," said Quincy High coach Jack Raymer. His Presidents have scored just one touchdown in the last two games. The problem? Opposing defenses have discovered that if you stop the run, you stop Quincy. "We've got to spread the ball out. People are coming out with a nine-man line (to take away the run)," said Raymer. The Presidents rushed for just 35 yards on 27 attempts.

Quincy's lone touchdown came in the second quarter after a 23-yard Greg Santoro punt return and a face masking penalty put the ball on the Weymouth 22. Sam Brown took the ball in from 15 yards for Quincy's only points of the game. The extra-point kick attempt failed.

Weymouth scored on the second play of the second half. With the ball on his own 20, quarterback Ryan Quill hit John Lydon in the left flat. Lydon raced 80 yards for the Wildcat score. Chris McDonald's extra-point kick provided the winning margin.

"That [was] a fired up Weymouth team. They deserved the win," said Raymer. "They're a lot like we were last year. Nobody really knew a lot about them, but they've surprised a few people."

The defense has been the story in Weymouth. They have given up just 50 points after six games. Almost half those came in their opening-week 21-7 loss to Waltham.

Quincy defensive coordinator Bob Keuther probably felt like ripping his heart out: Weymouth led 7-6 in the third but had still not recorded one first down in the game. Six times in the first half Weymouth punted after three plays or turned the ball over on downs. They gained just 23 yards in the first half.

Linemen Mike Feeley, Mike Flagg, John Moss, Matt Goguen and Butch Palaza, and linebackers Bill Dunn, Jon Ryan, Ed Anderson and Santoro controlled the line of scrimmage for the Quincy defense.

Again, defensive end Flagg was dominant. He sacked Quill for a 14-yard loss, combined with Anderson for a tackle 5 yards behind the line of scrimmage, recovered a mis-fielded Weymouth punt return, and pressured Quill a number of times. Ryan and Santoro also combined for a sack. Goguen and Moss made tackles behind the line of scrimmage.

Defensive backs Matt Miller, Mike Sheffer, Terry Bowman, Chris McArdle and Scott Pye limited Quill to 105 yards on a 4 for 10 passing effort. Eighty of those yards came on the lone Wildcat touchdown.

"Defensively I was very happy with the way we played," said Raymer.

Dunn recovered a botched Weymouth punt in WARD 2 COUNCILLOR and Quincy High School alumnus Ted DeCristofaro joins Quincy High football coach Jack Raymer before the start of last week's game at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. DeCristofaro, wearing No. 41 because he is a 1941 graduate of Quincy High, served as an honorary captain of the Presidents.

Falmouth At A Glance

Record: 5-1. 4-1 in the OCL. Beat Plymouth South, 34-0, last week.

Coach: Ed Winslow (20th year, 110-76-10).

Previous Meeting: Quincy blanked Falmouth, 21-0, last season. It was Quincy's second of three consecutive shutouts.

Offense: The Clippers returned most of their starters from last season's 2-7-1 squad. One impressive newcomer is sophomore RB Willie Ford (6 feet 3 inches, 190 pounds). Ford adds to Falmouth's already speedy backfield. QB Mike Andrews is a great all-around athlete.

Defense: Falmouth has held all but one opponent (Bridgewater-Raynham) to two touchdowns or less this season. LB Elias Gregoriadis (14 tackles last week) and DL Wes Glover lead the defense. If Quincy can air the ball out they will be able to score.

Player to Watch: Ford, and sophomore safety Pye. Bowman, a junior, started at tailback in the place of Brown who was questionable going into the game. Raymer refused to point to injuries as a reason for Quincy's loss.

"Those [younger] kids have practiced all week with us. Injuries were not a factor."

Brown took over for Bowman midway through the second quarter.

The big play has been the Achilles' Heel of the President defense this season. In their loss to Bridgewater-Raynham the second week of the season, Quincy bottled up the powerful B-R ground game and punished superstar running back Matt Pauline (26 yards, nine carries). Two second-half runs of over 50 yards each gave the Trojans the 22-13 win.

In their 29-0 loss to New Bedford last week, the Presidents hammered Jo Jo Goodine (5 yards, 12 carries), the state's top scorer for the last two seasons. But a 48-yard run and a 95-yard pass play broke Quincy's back. Against Weymouth it was the 80-yard Quill-to-Lydon pass play.

Former Bruin Chris Nilan Urges:

'Take Advantage Of Your Opportunities'

By KERRY BYRNE

Former Montreal Canadian and Boston Bruin Chris Nilan had a message for the young athletes of Quincy: take advantage of your opportunities, work towards success, and rise to the challenges that face you.

"Don't take any opportunities in life for granted," said Nilan as he spoke at a Kiwanis Club luncheon Wednesday.

"The one thing sports presents to all of us is the opportunity to succeed or fail, you can't have one without the other. You can't become the best at your craft until you have failed every possible way. Failure is simply nature's way of fine tuning."

Nilan knows what it takes to overcome long odds and succeed at big-time athletics. As a tough, working-class kid growing up in West Roxbury he dreamed of playing in the NHL but didn't know if he had the talent it took to get him there.

When he was drafted by the Canadiens in the 17th round of the 1978 draft - the 231st pick out of 235 taken that year - it was almost as an after-thought. Seventeenth round picks just don't make it to the NHL.

"But I knew I had one thing," said Nilan. "I had a chance and I knew I'd make the most of it."

"Few athletes have that natural ability, maybe a Gretzky or an Orr. But even the great ones push their natural ability to the limit, that's what makes them No. 1."

"Why do some athletes become better than others? Take a look at the sweat factor. The great ones work at it. The most frustrating thing to see is underutilized talent - people who have what it takes but don't want to work for it."

"Perhaps the most important advice I ever got was from [former] Canadiens coach Claude Ruel. He said to me, 'you have to be willing to pay the price for success if you want to get anywhere in this game.'"

In 1979 Nilan was playing for a Montreal farm team in Nova Scotia when he got the call to lace up his skates for the parent club. "There in the locker room was Guy Lafleur, Bob Gainey, Larry Robinson. I was awestruck," said Nilan. "I skated six shifts that first game but I don't remember any of it. I was dumb. I forgot everything I had ever learned. That night at the hotel I thought, 'Chris, you blew it in your first game.'"

Nilan was lucky, he got another chance to prove himself. But this time it was against the feared Philadelphia Flyers, FORMER MONTREAL CANADIAN and Boston Bruin Chris Nilan, center, was a recent guest speaker at the Quincy Kiwanis Club. He was presented a pen set as a gift of appreciation from Kiwanis President Bob Fitzgerald as Beverly Reinhardt, chairman of the Quincy Kiwanis Hockey Tournament, looks on.

known in those days as the "Broad Street Bullies" because of their quick fists and rough play. Again, coach Ruel had words of wisdom for the nervous young rookie as he sat on the bench: "Don't be afraid of these guys. They're men just like us."

"From that moment on I played like I was a man amongst little boys," said Nilan. "I fought Bob Kelley, one of the toughest of the Broad Street Bullies, and got my team fired up. Later in the game I put the puck on Pierre LaPoint's stick and he put it in the net and we won, 3-2. That night at the hotel I really felt like I had helped the team win. I had risen to the challenge."

Nilan then issued a challenge to the young athletes of Quincy: "How many of you are going to step on the ice against the Broad Street Bullies. I believe the more you face the Broad Street Bullies, the better you'll be at what you do."

"Force yourself into the fire. Take on those challenges that await you."

The Devils assaulted the Sharks' goalie early with 16 shots in the first period alone but could not find a seam between the leather. Two shots clanked off the posts - missing paydirt by just inches.

Kevin Lynch of Milton and James McDonald of Everett led the high-powered but unlucky attack with numerous shots.

Blueliner Kevin Patten of Quincy kept the puck in the Bay State zone and unloaded a series of blistering slap shots.

Children Should:

- Cross only at corners.
- Never cross between parked cars.
- Walk facing the oncoming traffic if there is no sidewalk.
- Always remove masks before crossing streets.
- Be aware of cars that may be turning into or backing out of driveways.
- Never go into a stranger's house.

Parents Should:

- Know the route their children will be taking.
- Make sure children are accompanied by an adult.
- Know what other activities a child may be attending, such as parties.
- Set time limits on when children should return home.
- Explain to children the difference between tricks and vandalism.
- Instruct children NOT to eat treats until they return home and parents have had a chance to inspect those treats.

Costumes Should:

- Be made of flame retardant material.
- Be made of bright material.
- Include a flashlight, or reflector strips on the costume, so that children can be seen.
- Not include high heel shoes or long dangling pieces that a child may trip over.

Motorists Should

- Drive cautiously on Halloween Eve. Excited youngsters may forget some of these safety rules and dart out in front of your car.

A FAMILIAR PING TO IT?

A pinging sound coming from an engine is likely due to premature ignition of gasoline in one or more cylinders by a source other than the spark plugs. Engine ping (also known as spark knock, detonation and auto-ignition) comes from a vibrating cylinder head in response to the premature ignition. If pinging is barely audible and occurs only when the engine accelerates, the problem may not be deemed harmful. When pinging is more pervasive, however, it could signal serious damage to pistons and valves. The first step to eliminating engine ping rests with switching to higher octane fuel to increase the resistance of gasoline to premature ignition. If this does not work, spark plugs' heat range, ignition timing, carbon buildup on the cylinders, etc. must be checked. HINT: Engine ping may also be caused by an engine operating at higher than normal temperatures or exhaust gas recirculation (ERG) systems that are performing improperly.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that for every great man mentioned in history, there are millions of unheralded great men mentioned in history. The following thought penned by an unknown author tells the story...

"A man is no bigger than the way he treats his fellow man! This standard has his measure been since time itself began! He's measured not by titles or creed high-sounding though they be; nor by the gold that's put aside; nor by his sanctity! He's measured not by social rank, when character's the test; nor by his earthly pomp or show, displaying wealth possessed! He's measured by his justice right, his fairness at his play; his equanimity in all dealings made, his honest, upright way! These are his measures, ever near to serve him when they can; for men's no bigger than the way he treats his fellow man!" ...

We know and know a great many great men who "measure up." And we know you do, too...

Downplays Report Of Financial Problems

Studds Remains Confident About Shipyard Project

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Despite a published report of dire financial straits that could jeopardize the planned revitalization of the Fore River shipyard, U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds said he is confident the project will come to pass.

Studds, during a visit to The Quincy Sun Tuesday, said a recent newspaper article describing the financial status of the owner of the company that plans to build cruise ships at the shipyard does not, in all likelihood, reflect all of the facts about the situation.

"The corporate structure is confusing," said Studds. "Frankly, I don't think that reporter (who wrote the article) has any more of an idea of how it works than I do."

The article in question cited documents filed by Cayman-Island based Regency Holdings Inc., the cruise line company that runs a fleet of six ships, with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). The documents, according to the article, show that the company had $5.1 million in cash last June when approximately $60 million in debt was about to come due.

The newspaper article stated that the corporation's documents were filed with the SEC last month as part of a plan to sell $26 million worth of stock to the public.

Regency Holdings is a separate company from Northeast Shipbuilders, that company that plans to hire up to 3,000 workers to build at least three cruise ships at the shipyard in Quincy Point. However, both companies are owned by the same man—Anthony Lelakis—and the newspaper article stated that $230 million in federal loan guarantees that will make the shipyard revitalization possible depends on his overall financial strength.

Studds, however, downplayed that notion, noting that the U.S. Maritime Administration is the designated watchdog of finances in such situations. (The newspaper article also made this fact clear). The congressman, who admitted he is "no financial expert," placed faith in the Maritime Administration.

"The Maritime Administration assesses financial structures," said Studds. "Congress, and reporters, are not in the position to judge those structures. The Maritime Administration is not going to put at risk taxpayer dollars with a corporation that is not financially sound. They are the ones with the expertise."

Studds added that the same newspaper article quoted a Regency official as stating that most cruise companies operate in the same way and have similar financial structures.

The congressman, who noted that he has made the revitalization of the shipyard a priority since the City of Quincy was added to his district during state redistricting two years ago, said he remains confident the project will become reality.

"I've always felt good about it, or else I wouldn't have ventured upon it," he said.

Saying that the project has "never been a sure thing," Studds added that many people were probably surprised by the announcement earlier this month that Lelakis' firm had agreed to a long-term lease at the shipyard.

"There's a worldwide shortage of shipbuilding, and this is a golden opportunity," he said. "It's now or never, and we're already a lot closer than a lot of people ever thought we would be."

Studds said he has been talking with several other shipbuilders about coming to the shipyard "since Day 1" of the proposed project and there is plenty of other interest in the site that could be tapped if for some reason the deal with Regency Holdings does not work out.

The shipyard is currently owned by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority. Before Northeast Shipbuilders could start building ships in Quincy, the MWRA will require a $3 million letter of credit as security for a lease, according to a draft agreement between the MWRA and the company.

The MWRA could use the money at any time if the term of the lease were broken.

Council Passes Sidewalk Ordinance

The City Council recently passed a new city ordinance which will improve the quality of Quincy's streets and sidewalk repairs.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers worked for several months with Mayor Sheets office and the Department of Public Works to set a new standard for street and sidewalk repairs.

"In the past, the City of Quincy had the burden of repairing unsatisfactory street openings and sidewalk repairs made by the utility companies," said Ayers. "This created an extra expense to the taxpayers and additional work for city employees."

The new ordinance makes the utility companies more accountable for their workmanship. If the electric, gas, or telephone companies do an unsatisfactory repair, the city will correct the repair at the expense of the utility company. A bond is required for each street opening to assure the quality.

"This will ensure that our roads will have a longer service life, requiring less frequent resurfacing, resulting in a cost savings to the City of Quincy," said Ayers.

STATE TREASURER Joseph Malone (third from right) recently awarded The Co-operative Bank with a $2.2 million deposit for its outstanding community reinvestment. Treasurer Malone Honors The Co-Operative Bank For Community Reinvestment

State Treasurer Joseph Malone announces that The Co-operative Bank of Concord, with branches in Quincy, will receive a deposit of $2.1 million in recognition of its commitment to meeting the banking and credit needs of the local community, including low and moderate income neighborhoods.

Statewide, Malone has made available for deposit approximately $125 million in state funds to 40 banks that have demonstrated fair lending practices and an outstanding record of serving all neighborhoods in the communities in which they operate.

The new initiative is the latest attempt by the treasurer's office to encourage lending activity in all areas of the state.

"This is the best way we know of to acknowledge those banks that provide access to capital to segments of their community and to encourage other banks to do the same," Malone said. "We want to put the state's money to work in those areas where it will do the most good in creating jobs and a better quality of life for every citizen."

All state and federally-chartered banks that receive a rating of "outstanding" under the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 are given the option of accepting a deposit equivalent to five percent of their capital. The monies made available are part of the state's Stabilization Fund.

"We are very proud of our record of community banking which serves as a catalyst for housing initiatives for families of various economic circumstances, access to loans and deposit services for small business owners and banking services for all members of the communities we serve," said David E. Bradbury, chairman and CEO of The Co-operative Bank. "It is very gratifying to have Treasurer Malone acknowledge our leadership position in these areas."

In 1992, Malone launched the Treasurer's Award for Community Reinvestment by depositing $100,000 each in banks with outstanding community reinvestment ratings.

Today's program represents an expansion of the program to recognize Banks receive one of four possible ratings: outstanding, satisfactory, needs improvement and substantial non-compliance. Ratings for federally-chartered banks are issued by either the Comptroller of the Currency, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or the Office of Thrift Supervision. The state's Division of Banks issues ratings for state-chartered banks.

"This program allows the Commonwealth to earn a competitive rate of return while at the same time answering people's needs for access to capital, whether it's for mortgage loans, small business loans or community development projects," Malone said.

You Can Have A Backyard Haven

By CHRISTINE DONOVAN

In ancient China, people believed that nature made men and life simple, and all the world was happy. More and more people are to drawn to the relaxation and satisfaction that comes from backyard bird-feeding.

Autumn is a time of readiness, as we prepare for the winter months ahead. It is the perfect year to enhance your year-round birding pleasure. Your yard can be your haven, a sanctuary from the frenzy and hassles of work-a-day living.

Fall brings garden center bargains. By selecting and planting shrubs and trees that provide both food and shelter for birds, you will attract greater varieties to your yards.
Considerations may be privet, yew, juniper, autumn olive or bittersweet.
Multi-service trees include oak, mountain oak, dogwood, Japanese and red maples, aspen, Eastern white pine, and birch. Vary the size and heights of your plantings to offer the widest array of backyard habitat.

Plants attract birds, and many of our feathered friends are voracious insect eaters, such as red and white-breasted nuthatches, downy woodpeckers, chickadees and house finches. Use caution with lawn treatments and pesticides that may be harmful to these natural insect predators.

Fall is also the ideal time to place birdhouses in your yards. Two or three birdhouses per half-acre is a successful ratio. Use caution with any wood pre-servatives and avoid lead-based paints. Earthtones make ideal exterior paint colors. Always place the entrance holes in a south, west, or southwest direction to avoid fierce easterly storms. Fall allows ample time for the seasoning of the houses before the spring nesting season, and offers shelter during winter's big chill.

Purchase quality seed, and birdfeeders appropriate for your selections. Offer a constant supply of fresh water, even during the coldest weather. Heated birdbaths and birdbath heaters are available.

Plan now for year-round enjoyment. Your backyard can be a haven for you and our feathered neighbors. As we improve the balance of nature within our own yards, so do we join together to enhance the quality of the natural world at large.

bird Emporium in East

Fore River Building Demolition Begins

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority began demolition of Building 86, located on the outside perimeter of the Fore River Staging Area, last week.

Officials said Building 86 was painted with lead-based paint many years prior to the MWRA's purchase of the former General Dynamics Shipyard in 1987 and the paint, now deteriorated, has begun to flake off and become airborne.

Recent tests have indicated that the lead concentration was over acceptable limits, officials said. Building 86 is within several feet of a few Quincy eating establishments.

"The demolition of Building 86 will eliminate an obvious eyesore and a potential health hazard," said MWRA Executive Director Douglas MacDonald. "This project is in response to a significant and long-standing community concern."

MacDonald credited state Rep. Ronald Mariano for bringing residents' concerns regarding the building to the MWRA's attention.

The one-story building stands 44 feet high and is 123 feet wide. Officials said the demolition will cost $145,000 and is expected to take three months to complete.

68 Percent Turnout Seen

Senate Race, Referendums Top Draws Tuesday

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The U.S. Senate race, gubernatorial contest and nine referendums should draw 68 percent of Quincy's electorate to the polls Tuesday, Nov. 8, predicts City Clerk Joseph Shea.

"The Senate race is the big draw and I think the unenrolled will come out and vote in the Senate race. There's a lot of interest in the ballot questions. The governor's race is also heating up," Shea said earlier this week.

"I'd go as high as 70 percent but locally there is no state senate race and only one out of three state rep. races. That leads me to believe turnout will be around 68 percent."

Shea said he doubts turnout will approach the 91 percent mark attained in the 1992 presidential election nor the 71 percent mark reached in 1990, the last non-presidential state election.

The clerk noted more people tend to vote in a presidential election. He also pointed out this non-presidential election year has only one local state race, unlike four years ago when there were more legislative contests here and an open governor's seat.

However, there are indications that interest is growing with Election Day less than a week away.

First, nearly 1800 new voters registered in Quincy since the September primary six weeks ago, an average of 300 per week. That surge raised the number of registered voters to 47,225 from 45,427.

"That's good," Shea said. "It's not like a presidential year but it's good. We've been as high as 51,000 (registered voters). Two years ago we have 48,208 but that was a presidential year."

Democrats remain the dominant party of choice in Quincy with 27,914 registered voters. Unenrolled are next with 12,707 followed by Republicans with 6,592. There are also 10 Libertarians, six "United We Stand" and two socialists enrolled in Quincy.

Although most of the newly registered opted for unenrolled status, Shea added, "There's no noticeable trends."

The high number of absentee ballots requested and returned also indicates turnout should be decent.

Since the state delivered absentee ballots to Quincy City Hall Friday, Oct. 21, over 800 have been requested and another 222 returned. "We had 1,400 absentee ballots in 1992 and I think we'll have about 900 before we're through," Shea said.

Headlining Election Day is the U.S. Senate contest. Thirty-two-year incumbent Democrat Sen. Edward Kennedy faces the political fight of his public service career by challenger Republican venture capitalist Mitt Romney. Polls indicate Kennedy is pulling away but Romney is considered a formidable foe who could pull off one of the major upsets nationally.

Election Day also features state-wide contested races for governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, secretary of state, state treasurer, auditor, and Congressman in the 10th District. In addition, there are three county-wide contested races: clerk of courts, register of deeds and county commission.

Locally, only one state legislator, Rep. Steve Tobin in the Second Norfolk District, faces opposition. The Democrat is challenged by political newcomer Steven Williams, a Republican.

Shea said the nine referendum questions, particularly Nos. 6 and 7 (graduated income tax); No. 2 (seatbelt law); and No. 4 (term limits) are also generating high interest locally.

Because some of the ballot questions are lengthy, Shea encourages voters to read over the questions in the Information for Voters guide furnished by the Secretary of State's office before heading to the polls. "They're (the questions) are very long and voters should read them over carefully before they vote," he said.

The ballot lists the following contested races and candidates in this order:

U.S. Senator
Incumbent Democrat Edward M. Kennedy; Republican W. Mitt Romney, Libertarian Laurie Leigh Dozier; and Lyndon LaRouche loyalist William A. Ferguson, Jr.
Governor/Lt. Governor

Studds, Officials Meet On Harbor Islands Park

Cong. Gerry Studds met in Quincy Tuesday with officials from four South Shore towns to discuss his proposal to incorporate the Boston Harbor Islands into a National Park System and boost tourism in the towns by linking them with the islands.

The meeting was held in congressmen's Quincy office, 1212 Hancock St. Scheduled to attend were officials from Quincy, Weymouth, Hingham and Hull, as well as representatives of the National Park Service and aides to Cong. Joseph Moakley.

Two weeks ago, Studds met with local officials in Hull to discuss having ferry service between Hull and one or more of the islands as a way to boost tourism. Studds has also been exploring linking the Harbor Islands with the Adams National Historic Site in Quincy and the Abigail Adams Park in Weymouth, and is working with the Park Service to expand transportation along the water.

In 1992, Studds authored legislation requiring the National Park Service to study whether to include the Harbor Islands as a national park. That study will be completed next month.

The only member of the House of Representatives to vote against entering the second World War was Jeannette Rankin (R-Montana).

FAMILIAR SOURCE FOR ARTHRITIS HOPE

Your mother may have stirred something more than TLC into the chicken soup she set simmering at the first sign of someone's illness. Researchers from Boston's Beth Israel Hospital and Harvard Medical School have found that a protein solution derived from chicken bone cartilage may help control rheumatoid arthritis. A small group of patients were given oral doses of the collagen solution mixed in their morning orange juice. In a response called "oral tolerization," the patients' bodies stopped attacking their own joint tissues and began producing the chicken protein instead. While the Arthritis Foundation has called the findings encouraging, researchers caution that further tests on the techniques are needed. P.S. More than 2.1 million American suffer from the progressive crippling effects of rheumatoid arthritis.

If you are suffering from a chronic illness and haven't visited a physician recently, you may be denying yourself the comfort that only the latest medical information can provide. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and myself offer a full range of cardiopulmonary services, including cardiac and respiratory therapy and rehabilitation. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Office hours by appointment. Call 472-2550. We're here at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy.

Delahunt's Last Run?

Speculation around Quincy's Democrat front is that this could be Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Delahunt's last run.

As a district attorney candidate, anyway.

The speculation was fueled at a recent meeting of about 25 Quincy City Democratic Committee members at the Ted Kennedy-Gerry Studds campaign headquarters on Granite St.

Purpose of the get-together was to coordinate support for all the Democratic candidates on the Nov. 8 ballot. Delahunt stressed how important such support is to candidates not only now, but in the future.

"Not so much for me," Delahunt reportedly noted. "This may be my last term. I'm not planning on running again."

Or words to that effect.

Delahunt is unopposed next Tuesday and will have a free ride to another four-year term. Will he actually step down after this one?

That remains to be seen. But politicians like to look ahead—especially if they might be seeing a strong incumbent stepping down and leaving his office up for political grabs.

No doubt there are several prospective candidates a bit interested in the speculation right now. Among them: former state Senator Paul Harold, School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymondi, state Senator William Keating of Sharon and Rep. Paul Haley of Weymouth. And, there are probably more.

HAROLD

One source close to Delahunt thinks this could be his final run—for district attorney.

But not his final run. Period.

He doesn't think Delahunt is getting ready to step away from politics. He believes Delahunt has something bigger in mind. Like governor.

TOM GILMARTIN, former Ward 6 city councillor, says he is retiring his crystal ball after 25 years of forecasting election results.

Here are some of the winners he's predicting in next week's election which he says will be the last forecast:

Senator Edward Kennedy, Governor William Weld, Atty. General Scott Harshbarger, Treasurer Joseph Malone, William Galvin for Secretary of State.

He says it will be "No" on seat belts, and on the graduated income tax (Questions 6 and 7) but a big "Yes" on term limits.

Nationwide, he predicts Republicans will gain three or four Senate seats and 18 to 20 House seats, and will pick up two governor seats.

Gilmartin claims a 93 percent batting average the last 25 years.

Okay, Tom, we have a prediction of our own. We predict you won't retire. Old fire horses really don't, you know.

SENATOR Edward Kennedy, who has been rising in the post-debate polls, seems to be also gaining in the "dandelion" department. His signs on Quincy front lawns now appear to outnumber those of challenger Mitt Romney who had the sign lead here a few weeks ago. If the number of signs means anything, I would predict that Kennedy will carry Independence Ave. and Romney will take the Merrymount section of Quincy Shore Drive.

SPEAKING OF ROMNEY, his father, George, former governor of Michigan, will be in Quincy tomorrow (Friday) stumping for his son. The elder Romney, a political powerhouse in his day, is scheduled to appear at the River Bay Club, Brackett St., at 10 a.m.

MIKE D'AMICO, who made an impressive run for the Ward 4 City Council seat in his political debut last year, appears to be eyeing another run in 1995.

D'Amico already has some bumper stickers in circulation. That doesn't make him an official candidate though. He reportedly is waiting to see what prospects look like for next year before making a final commitment. Like, whether Ward 4 incumbent Tom Fabrizio runs at-large. Or, gets an appointment that might take him out of the campaign field.

REMEMBER THE RECENT item here about seven-year-old Kristin Sweeney and her lost rabbit "Bun Bun" out in Muskegon, Mich.?

Kristin is the granddaughter of former Quincy School Committeeman Charles and Betty Sweeney of Ames St., and the daughter of their son, Donald, and daughter-in-law, Meg.

"Bun Bun" somehow got loose and disappeared. So Kristin hand-colored some posters proclaiming "Lost Bunny, Help."

They were posted on trees and utility poles and someone who saw one of them, spotted "Bun Bun" and reunited Kristin and her pet.

But Kristin's Mom was cited for littering and faced a fine of $500 or three months in jail.

When word got out, the local newspapers had a field day with the story [one called it Bunnygate] and it was picked up by USA Today.

Readers rallied to Kristin's defense, peppering Muskegon officials with irate calls.

Happy ending to story: Prosecutors bowed to public pressure and dropped the charges.

NO ONE HAS loved North Quincy High School more than Bryant Carter, Sr., class of 1942, and past commander of Wollaston Legion Post.

Though now a patient at the Crestview Nursing Home (86 Greenleaf St.), as the result of a stroke last April, he got out to watch his beloved Red Raiders play Plymouth South in their first home game of the season.

He sat in a wheelchair on the sideline near the North bench, proudly wearing his North Quincy alumni jacket and the North 1992 Super Bowl champion hat.

Coach Ken McPhee and the team voted to present him with the game ball from the Stoughton game the week before. In a touching moment, the presentation was made by his grandson, Tim Semchenko, backup quarterback.

Bryant, you've got a lot of people rooting for you including your fellow Senior Strollers at the Plaza who really miss you and are waiting for you to get back.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN OLD postcard view of the first Catholic Church in Houghs Neck, St. Francis By the Sea, which was established over one hundred years ago as a mission church of St. John's in Quincy Center. Located near the corner of Winthrop St. and Manet Ave. It was across from the old Houghs Neck Catholic Lyceum shown here on the right. Cardinal O'Connell, when setting up a new separate parish for Houghs Neck in 1915, renamed this the Most Blessed Sacrament Church. This building was torn down in 1919 after the present church of that name was built on Sea St.

Keep Mandatory Seat Belt Law

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Let's put safety ahead of politics on Nov. 8 and vote to keep the mandatory seat belt law in Massachusetts.

Voting to eliminate the law may feel politically satisfying to some who don't like the way it became law. Yet this would be a hollow victory. From every standpoint, wearing seat belts makes sense.

As the largest ambulance service in Massachusetts, Ambulance Systems of America responds to more than 150,000 medical transportation calls each year throughout Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Many of these are the direct result of an automobile accident. No words can adequately describe the tragic loss of life, or disfigurement, that we see when a driver or passenger was not wearing a seat belt. There are a number of good reasons to support Question 2 on the Nov. 8 ballot, including the fact that seat belts keep medical costs lower. For us, however, the only reason we need is that wearing seat belts can save lives and prevent injury.

We urge a "yes" vote on Question 2 in the Nov. 8 election. A vote to keep the mandatory seat belt law is a vote for public safety.

Urges No Vote On Question 3

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
This letter urges your readers to vote NO on Question 3 next Tuesday, Nov. 8.

Question 3 is a repeal of a law passed by the Legislature in 1993. Behind its muddled, confusing language, it is an effort by greedy special interests to stop college students from being involved in civic activities. It was passed in the middle of the night as part of the state budget, and it has nothing to do with budgetary matters.

Basically, Question 3 would erase dozens of democratic votes taken on Massachusetts college campuses to support community service programs with students' own money.

If Quincy residents want to say NO to politics as usual on Beacon Hill, NO on special interest lobbyists, and NO to restricting well-intentioned college students from, for example, raising money for local homeless shelters, they should vote NO on Question 3.

A 'Thank You' To St. John's Baseball

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We are writing this as a thanks for a program that our daughter was fortunate to take part in. At an early age, she showed an interest in playing organized baseball. Looking around, we came across a league which follows for and encourages the growth and development of children regardless of sex or ability.

We are grateful to the coaches who took the time to teach, encourage, and nurture a young child's ability and enthusiasm. We're thankful a league exists which places value on fun over winning, participation before rewards, fairness over superstardom.

It seems today the emphasis is on being the best, beating the rest, forgetting it's only a game, and putting too much pressure on the kids. The youth of today grow up so fast it was a pleasure to be part of an organization which allowed us to be kids. It was our experience at St. John's to find teams where the players were equal regardless of their level of ability and performance was not important. Values like these made it fun to go to the park, to look forward to every game no matter what the outcome.

We are indebted to a group which planted a seed, watered it and permitted the sun to shine so it could grow. We would like to thank all who are a part of such a positive youth group. The coaches, especially Dick Sweeney, Peter Marino, and John Rodenhiser, men who have given of themselves to better the youth of Quincy and particularly our daughter. Men who teach as well as coach, who light the spark of enthusiasm and kindle it. To Pat McMann, who takes that enthusiasm and brings it to another level, whose instruction has proven invaluable to the kids of St. John's.

To all those we left out, we owe you also for your encouragement and dedication. To the kids who make this a fun league, thanks. Your desire and good sportsmanship kept us coming back year after year. We will miss you all, and always carry part of you with us.

And finally, St. John's, thanks for giving a young girl a change she might not have had someplace else. For six years of enjoyment, and faith in the youth of Quincy. Because of all those involved and the strong foundation received, many will go on to advance their baseball abilities.

To the parents who are looking for a starting point in sports without intimidation, lack of pressure, and a positive environment for your child: the St. John's baseball experience is well worth the ride. The rewards go beyond balls and strikes.

Anita's Sweet Potato Pie

While vacationing at Martha's Vineyard recently, our friends Paul and Anita joined us at a waterfront restaurant in Edgartown where the conversation led to various recipes. One was a great recipe for sweet potato pie that Anita was raving about. Later, I got the recipe from her for today's food column. It will be wonderful to serve at Thanksgiving dinner.

ANITA'S SWEET POTATO PIE

1 1/2 cups mashed sweet potatoes
1/2 cup sugar
2 eggs slightly beaten

1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups cream
2 tablespoons melted butter
1/4 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1 nine inch pie crust (unbaked)

Mix all ingredients together until well blended and then place in the unbaked pie crust. Bake in a 400 degree oven for 10 minutes and then reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake for an additional 35 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean.

Melissa, 15, is currently a varsity cheerleader for the NQHS Red Raiders and basketball teams. She was also a cheerleader for the school's hockey team in her freshman year.

Her cheerleading experience began as a member of the Quincy Point Panthers' junior varsity cheerleading squad. In addition, she was a member of the St. Joseph's cheerleading squad of which she was a captain in

Over 50,000 Witness USS Salem Return Home

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

With 600 passengers aboard and an estimated 50,000 spectators dotting the shoreline from Boston to Quincy, the USS Salem took her final voyage Sunday, returning home to the Fore River Shipyard to take her place as the centerpiece of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum.

The Quincy-built cruiser's three and a half-hour trip home was capped by a picture-perfect scene as well-wishers waved from atop and below the Fore River Bridge and a fireboat sprayed towering streams of water beneath a bright orange sunset.

It was, many said, a beautiful day for a glorious occasion.

The Salem, built at the Fore River Shipyard in 1947 and commissioned in 1949, is one of the finest examples of naval engineering in the world. The ship, which served as the flagship of the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, is one of the Navy's two completely air conditioned warships.

Her distinguished tour of duty included carrying out U.S. foreign policy during the Cold War years, and using her speed, mobility and potential force to prevent the very action she was designed to carry out. In 1953, Salem was the first ship to arrive at the earthquake devastated Ionian Islands of Greece, where her crew worked for days caring for the injured and dying and distributed supplies for the homeless.

After her decommissioning in 1959, Salem was mothballed and berthed at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard. For 35 years she remained in Philadelphia until her return trip home to Quincy which began last Tuesday.

The last leg of her final voyage began from the Black Falcon Terminal in South Boston Sunday at 12:45 p.m. Among those on board were museum plankowners and other contributors, local officials and invited guests, as well as former Salem crew members, including the ship's last commanding officer, Ret. Admiral Alan B. Roby.

The 87-year-old Roby renewed old friendships with former crewmates and chatted with guests as he toured his former command under escort. Salem is the second ship formerly commanded by Roby to become a museum, a historical first. The destroyer USS Kidd is a museum vessel in Baton Rouge, La.

For those on deck as Salem was tugged through the Fore River channel and into her final berth, the trip was an experience for all to remember.

Museum Executive Director William MacMullen said Salem's return was a big day in the museum's history but a bigger event will be the official opening of the maritime museum. "The opening of the museum, that's the day I'm really waiting for. This is just like collecting the other artifacts that we have; it's just a very big artifact."

MacMullen said he was very pleased by the turnout on the ship.

"I'm just really happy as these people came. We proved that we could do this. There's a lot of satisfaction from that. We did it."

"That 'don't give up the ship' stuff, it's true."

Although in need of new paint, deck work and other repairs, the inside of the Salem is well-preserved, and museum officials said they expect the heavy cruiser will be open for visitors next May.

The museum has a program for getting Salem in tip-top ship shape, MacMullen said, adding "We'll take this thing and we'll make it shine."

MacMullen said Admiral Roby was happy to be aboard Salem's last voyage.

"He's real pleased to be aboard. He's living in Virginia and when I asked him to come up, I think I made his year. It's really good to have him here because a lot of people remember him."

At a brief ceremony following Salem's arrival at the shipyard, Sen. Edward Kennedy said the day had special meaning for him.

He recalled that the USS destroyer Joseph Kennedy named in memory of his brother, Joseph, who lost his life in World War II, was built at the Quincy yard.

Congressman Gerry Studds called the return of Salem as a tribute to Quincy's historic shipbuilding past and hoped it would be a good

Congressman Kennedy Supports Questions 6 And 7

Editor, The Quincy Sun

What do New York, California, Vermont, Rhode Island, North Carolina and 30 other states have that Massachusetts doesn't?

A graduated income tax.

By voting "yes" on Questions 6 and 7 Nov. 8, Massachusetts can join a majority of our neighbors and competitors in bringing greater fairness to our tax system.

Under the grad tax, nine out of 10 Massachusetts taxpayers would pay less. A typical family of our would save more than $500 a year. That's a lot for parents struggling to pay their mortgages, buy groceries and save for their children's future.

Four out of five small business owners would also see their taxes go down. That's good news for the people whose hard work produces the lion's share of jobs and economic growth in our state.

The grad tax also offers relief to seniors who are hard pressed to pay rising water and sewer bills as well as property taxes, and to those currently paying a high 12 percent tax rate on their retirement dividends.

Is it any wonder who's behind the well-oiled campaign against 6 and 7? None other than the wealthy individuals whose taxes would go up if it passes. They're spending their companies' funds to protect their own bottom line, even if it means denying their employees a tax break.

Don't be fooled by the well-financed defenders of the status quo, who disguise self-interest as good public policy. Vote yourself a tax break. Vote "yes" on Questions 6 and 7 Nov. 8.

Water Rate And Tax Relief Headed Our Way

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

For a lot of Quincy residents, the clean-up of the Boston Harbor couldn't have come at a worse time. Just as the state sank into its deepest recession since the 1930s, water and sewer bills started rising. And rising. And rising.

The increases aren't over yet, but there's some relief in sight for those who are particularly hard-pressed, including many seniors on a fixed income. Questions 6 and 7 on the November ballot, commonly known as the graduated income tax proposal, would provide 292,000 homeowners and tenants who have high water bills with $53 million in water rate and property tax relief every year.

That's one reason why residents of Quincy should support it. There are two more:

"It would cut income taxes for 92 percent of Massachusetts taxpayers by a total of $600 million."

"The relief would be paid for by asking the wealthiest 8 percent of the population to pay more, not by taking one penny out of public services."

To qualify these questions for the ballot, over 250,000 signatures were collected by Massachusetts residents, including 5,940 from Quincy. Question 6 replaces the current constitutional requirement for a flat income tax with a sliding scale system similar to ones already in place in 35 of the 42 states that levy income taxes. Question 7 creates that new system, with new rates, deductions and credits.

A Weld administration study show these initiatives would cut taxes in nine out of 10 residents, including all individuals making less than $62,050 per year and married couples making less than $101,700 per year. A family of four earning the Massachusetts average annual salary of $53,000 would save $561 a year.

While the grad tax as a whole is well publicized, the water rate provision is less well known. Under it, eligible residents would receive a credit of up to $200 a year, even if they owe nothing in state income taxes. Here's how:

If you are married and making less than $30,000 per year, a single parent making less than $25,000 per year or an individual making less than $20,000 per year, you would simply file a state income tax return with a separate worksheet attached. If that worksheet shows you spend at least 10 percent of your income on property taxes and water bills, you'd receive a rebate of up to $200 per year to help offset those excessive costs.

You'd get that rebate even if you pay nothing in state income taxes. Tenants would also be eligible since a portion of their rent goes to property taxes and water bills.

Even for those who don't qualify, there are good reasons to support the grad tax. In addition to cutting rates, it would:

"Double the current dependent exemption from $1,000 to $2,000 and double the value of the child care credit."

"Increase the thresholds below which residents owe nothing in taxes to $10,000 for individuals and $14,000 for couples."

"Cut taxes on profits from investments in Massachusetts-based businesses, and

"Eliminate the current 12 percent tax on dividends and other "unearned" income, taxing it instead on a sliding scale from 5.5 to 9.8 percent. This provision would not only encourage investments, but also would provide long-overdue relief to seniors who live on a moderate income from their dividends."

This proposal is revenue-neutral, meaning it would raise the same amount of money as the current system. Relief would be paid for by asking the wealthiest 8 percent to pay at a higher rate, which is hardly unreasonable in light of the fact that today millionaires actually pay a much smaller share of their income to state and local taxes than do middle- and low-income families.

Given these facts, who could be against Questions 6 and 7?

Some of the wealthiest 8 percent are opposed, but instead of saying "tax me less," they're trying to win support from the 92 percenters by saying, "don't give legislators new power to raise everyone's taxes."

What they fail to tell you is that legislators already have the power to raise everyone's taxes. The only new power they'd have to target relief toward middle- and low-income residents through such provisions as the water bill and property tax rebate.

The old way of levying income taxes in Massachusetts has got to go. Bring on the new, and give yourself a break. Vote "yes" on Questions 6 and 7 in November.

Grad Tax Is Bad Business

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

For over a year now, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce has been working very diligently to defeat two pro-tax petitions that will be offered for public vote on Nov. 8. The so-called graduated income tax (Questions 6 and 7), although a personal state income tax, if passed will threaten the way business is conducted throughout this Commonwealth.

Most simply, the Massachusetts business community in collaboration with the state Legislature has battled long and hard to move the tax policy, philosophy and reputation away from the bygone days of Taxachusetts.

Questions 6 and 7 simply fly in the face of that work. This Chamber will continue to be an active participant toward the defeat of this tax trap. Let me take a moment to let you know why.

I could launch into how this Commonwealth's economic success has been built by the small business. That the simple demographic fact is that 80 percent of our Commonwealth's business community is classified as small business. The percentage of South Shore Chamber members that are considered small business members is even higher at 87 percent. For these sole proprietorships, partnerships, and sub-chapter S corporations, the graduated income tax just doesn't add up. It is bad business.

I could further explain how "S" corporations would see increases in their state income taxes as high as 14.3 percent of income. That taxation on capital gains as ordinary income will become the highest in the nation eliminating capital formation and providing a disincentive for job creation.

Furthermore, I would be remiss if I didn't mention how a graduated income tax will force married couples to pay more in state taxes than singles, or that two-income families with incomes over $81,000 would pay a marginal tax rate almost 50 percent higher than now.

What I won't explain is that proponents' single biggest argument for the graduated tax is the progressivity argument. That is, the more you make, the more you should pay. According to the Massachusetts Taxpayers Association and the Commonwealth's Department of Revenue, Massachusetts, despite its constitutional requirement for uniform tax rates, has one of the most progressive state income taxes in the country. Those whose income is in the bottom 20 percent pay an average of 1.3 percent of their income in state taxes, while those with income in the top 20 percent pay an average of 5.8 percent or four to five times the rate of the bottom group. Like I said, I'll leave that argument up to the proponents.

What I won't do is bash the Legislature for their newly-formed constitutional powers (under the graduated tax proposal) to create income tax brackets and set tax rates. Nor will I criticize Massachusetts' 351 cities and towns for their newly-ordained power to create local income taxes, on top of the increased state tax.

No! The South Shore Chamber of Commerce in collaboration with the Commonwealth's concerned business community are fighting to prevent Mr. John Q. Public from being hoodwinked by a tax trap from Mr. Braude and his army of union activists (TEAM). The citizens of this Commonwealth have already spoken on four separate occasions against a graduated income tax proposal. The unifying principle surrounding the proponents of this initiative is that the state's very large employees union are seeking to increase their payrolls, pensions and purses by the deception of a 92 percent tax cut. That's the trap!

Let's not fall for their shell game. Horace Greeley once advised to "Go West, young man," to find the land of opportunity and prosperity. The passage of the graduated income tax on Nov. 8 will lead the young man West, and I'm afraid, many will follow.

Kevin M. Cuff,

Chamber of Commerce

CPA Society Opposes Questions 6, 7

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants Inc., representing 7800 members, a substantial number of which are tax practitioners [and] whose job it is to evaluate how tax laws affect taxpayers, both large and small, opposes Questions 6 and 7, the proposed graduated income tax measures, which will appear on the November ballot.

Careful analysis of the proposed legislation behind the ballot questions revealed that the legislation is poorly drafted and probably won't accomplish the objectives as publicized by its supporters. In addition, Questions 6 and 7 pose a serious threat to the state's economic tax recovery.

Contrary to graduated tax supporters' claims that approval of these questions "would not add one nickel to the tax bill of any company, small or large," they would result in an immediate tax rate increase of up to 65 percent for tens of thousands of small businesses.

Many small business employers (sole proprietors, electing small business corporations and partnerships) include their business income on their individual income tax returns. If Questions 6 and 7 pass, as written, these small business employers and other individuals would see their rates rise from the current level of 5.95 percent to a high of 9.8 percent, a 65 percent increase. In fact, the cumulative income tax rate on the income from some small business corporations could exceed 14 percent. Ironically, it is the small growing companies—the ones that have created nearly all the new jobs in the commonwealth since the onset of the recession—that would be affected by this tax increase.

Targeting small business for such a huge tax hike makes no economic sense. Most small business owners pour their profits back into their businesses. Under this plan, however, they would first have to pay more taxes to state government, reducing the amount they can invest in their firms and create jobs! Quite simply, taking money out of the hands of small companies and putting it into the hands of state government will do nothing to encourage growth or promote job creation.

The so-called "capital formation incentive" contained in Question 7 is complicated and drafted so poorly that ultimately no more than a handful of shareholders may benefit from it.

We have also found that the proposed tax rates are deceptively stated. Question 7 arbitrarily phases out (reduces to zero) personal exemptions. This phase-out has the effect of increasing the tax rates to levels that are even higher than those reported on the ballot question.

In our professional opinion, burdening job creators with additional taxes and adding complexity during a time of needed economic recovery is detrimental to our state and to all Massachusetts taxpayers.

Over the past quarter century, WORK, Inc. has made it possible for both adolescents and adults with disabilities to experience dignity, self-worth and confidence through comprehensive rehabilitation services.

Those being recognized are:

MediSense, Inc., a Waltham-based company that manufactures self-diagnostics for the home market will receive the Corporate Award for its commitment and ideals. Since early 1993, when they moved assembly of their medical kits from their source in Canada to a local supplier, MediSense has employed more than 30 WORK Inc. clients to assemble kits that measure blood glucose levels.

Angela Hawes will receive the award for Outstanding Progress in the Employment and Training Program. Hawes, who came to WORK, Inc. from the Boston Public Schools four years ago, has volunteered for several charities and at the Thomas Crane Public Library. She now travels daily from Boston to WORK Inc.'s Work Center located at 3 Arlington St., North Quincy where she holds a full-time, paid position.

Patricia Perry will receive the Outstanding Progress in the Residential Program award. Two years into the program, Perry has moved into an apartment in Methuen where she lives with another WORK, Inc. client. With just intermittent supervision, she is learning how to budget, cook and shop on her own. She also is employed at the Quincy work center.

The South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens will receive the Probus Award in recognition of its advocacy and programs on behalf of individuals with disabilities and for its instrumental role in establishing WORK, Inc. 25 years ago.

Former Quincy native Jack Platner, chairman of WORK's Board of Directors from 1983-1993, will be honored with the distinguished service award. The recently retired president of Burgin, Platner and Company, an insurance agency based in Quincy, was a leading force in shaping WORK over the past 10 years.

"The awards ceremony and celebration is an opportunity to acknowledge the accomplishments of WORK, Inc.'s participants and staff as well as our partners in the community," said WORK's Dr. William P. Wolk.

"Our 25th anniversary is a time to reflect back on the strides that have been made in the way people with disabilities are perceived and treated and to rededicate ourselves to ensure their improved self-reliance and greater inclusion in society."

WORK, Inc.'s mission is to offer individuals with serious disabilities residential and vocational training to enable them to achieve their potential and lead satisfying lives in the community.

Citizen Flag Alliance Survey Shows: Kennedy, Romney Differ Over Flag Amendment

A survey of Massachusetts' congressional candidates shows growing bipartisan support for protection of the American flag--except in the hotly contested U.S. Senate race.

Republican candidate Mitt Romney said he would support a constitutional amendment to protect the flag from physical desecration and also would co-sponsor legislation if the 104th Congress, if elected.

Romney's opponent, U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy, did not return the survey which was sent to all incumbents and challengers for seats in the U.S. Senate and U.S. House of Representatives by the Citizens Flag Alliance along with The American Legion.

However, according to the survey, Sen. Kennedy's voting record on the issue clearly illustrates his opposition to a flag protection amendment. In 1989, Sen. Kennedy voted against the Flag Protection Act, federal legislation which would have made physical desecration of the flag illegal.

Although the legislation passed, it was later declared unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court. In 1990, Sen. Kennedy twice voted against resolutions for a constitutional amendment to protect the flag.

Also indicating his support for a flag protection amendment is U.S. Rep. Richard Neal (D-2nd District). His opponent, Republican John Briare, did not return the survey.

The following Massachusetts candidates support the flag protection amendment:

In addition, Romney, Blute, Torkildsen, Bailey and Hemeon indicated they would co-sponsor an amendment.

U.S. Rep. Barney Frank (D-4th District) was the only respondent to the survey who does not support the amendment.

The bipartisan support shown in the survey reflects the overall support for a flag protection amendment among the American people. A recent Gallup Poll showed that more than three out of four Americans would favor such an amendment.

The Citizens Flag Alliance is a broad-based, national coalition seeking to pass a constitutional amendment to protect the American flag from purposeful acts of desecration, while still upholding First Amendment rights to free speech.

Its membership includes 73 civic, fraternal, veterans, business and labor organizations, representing more than 26 million people.

The Massachusetts chapter of Citizens Flag Alliance is headed by John "Jake" Comer of Quincy, past national commander of The American Legion.

Board Approves Auctioneer

The Quincy License Board granted a request from Quirk Ford for permission to transfer their auctioneer license from 55 Broad St. to Ricciuti Drive., following a discussion at Tuesday's meeting.

Representing Quirk Ford was Richard Burleigh who showed an upgraded parking plan for 930 cars. Board member Matt Mulvey said the company would have to amend their license because the existing license calls for just 500 cars.Cars include those used and leased.

Chairman Joseph Shea told the board that the move to Ricciuti Drive is a "positive step" as they have "outgrown Broad Street." Shea said he had spoken to Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio who last week was unable to attend the meeting and had some questions. Shea said Fabrizio approved the move.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said the move would work well because there are "no neighborhood problems" When he asked Burleigh about security around the area, Burleigh assured the board they would have 24 hour security..

Deputy Chief Paul Cuddy said the Fire Department had no objection to the move and that the 2,000 underground gallon storage tank was properly licensed and said the move should "go very smoothly".

The 9 Ballot Questions And What YES And NO Mean

(The following information was excerpted from the Official Massachusetts Information for Voters Guide on the 1994 Ballot Questions published by the Office of the Secretary of State. For more complete information on the questions, The Sun suggests voters consult the guide, which was mailed to every household and is available at City Hall, before heading to the polls Nov. 8.)

There are nine statewide questions appearing on the Nov. 8 ballot which fall into three classifications: initiative petition for a constitutional amendment; initiative petition for a law; and a referendum petition.

One of the questions, Question 6, is an initiative petition for a constitutional amendment regarding a proposed graduated income tax. An initiative amendment, brought before the legislatures by citizens obtaining the required number of signatures from Massachusetts voters, must be approved by one fourth of the members of two consecutively elected legislatures in order to appear on the ballot for voter approval or disapproval.

If such a measure receives more "yes" votes than "no" votes, the measure would take effect 30 days after the election.

Six other questions are initiative petitions for a law. They are Question 1 (regulating spending on ballot question campaigns); Question 4 (term limits); Question 5 (opening of retail stores on Sunday morning and certain holidays); Question 7 (personal income tax changes); Question 8 (state highway fund changes); and Question 9 (prohibiting rent control).

These initiative petitions for a law have been proposed by citizens who obtained the required number of signatures from Massachusetts voters. If such a measure receives more "yes" votes than "no" votes, and also receives "yes" votes from at least 30 percent of those voting in the election, it will become law.

The remaining two questions, Question 2 regarding the seat belt law, and Question 3 concerning changing the law regarding student fees, are referendum petitions. The Legislature has already passed these laws, but citizens have obtained the required number of signatures from state voters to place the laws on the Nov. 8 ballot for voter approval or disapproval.

If at least as many voters vote "no" as vote "yes" on this question and if at least 30 percent of those voting in the election vote "no," this law will be repealed.

Listed below are the nine questions in the order they appear on the ballot as well as what a "yes" and "no" vote means in each instance.

QUESTION 1

Question 1 proposes to limit the way in which business and certain nonprofit corporations could contribute to and spend money on campaigns involving an initiative, referendum or other question submitted to the voters at a state or local election.

YES

A YES VOTE would limit the way in which business and certain nonprofit corporations contribute to and spend money on ballot question campaigns.

NO

A NO VOTE would make no change in the way corporations may contribute to and spend money on ballot question campaigns.

QUESTION 2

Question 2 pertains to the state law requiring drivers and passengers in certain motor vehicles on public ways to wear properly adjusted and fastened safety belts.

YES

A YES VOTE would continue the new law passed by the Legislature requiring use of seat belts.

NO

A NO VOTE would repeal the new seat belt law.

QUESTION 3

Question 3 involves changing the law regarding student fees. The law eliminates one of the two ways in which students may authorize fees to be assessed on tuition bills at state-operated colleges and universities to support nonpartisan student organizations that attempt to influence state legislation.

YES

A YES VOTE would approve the new law passed by the Legislature.

NO

A NO VOTE would repeal the new law regarding student fees.

QUESTION 4

Question 4 asks voters whether they support a proposed law that would limit the terms of office for governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state auditor, treasurer, and state attorney general to two consecutive terms (eight years); governor's councillor, state rep, state senator, or congressman to four consecutive terms (eight years) and U.S. senator to two consecutive terms (12 years).

YES

A YES VOTE would prevent the name of a person from being printed on the state ballot as a candidate for certain offices if the person had already served a specified number of terms in that office.

NO

A NO VOTE would make no change in the state election laws and impose no limit on terms outlined in Question 4.

QUESTION 5

QUESTION 5 is a proposed law which would allow retail stores to open at any time on Sundays and on the legal holidays of Memorial Day, Independence Day (July 4) and Labor Day. It would not affect current restrictions on the sale of alcoholic beverages on Sundays and these holidays.

YES

A YES VOTE would allow retail stores to open on Sunday morning and on Memorial Day, Independence Day, and Labor Day.

NO

A NO VOTE would make no changes in the laws regulating the hours of retail stores on Sunday morning or on Memorial Day, Independence Day and Labor Day.

QUESTION 6

QUESTION 6 is a proposed constitutional amendment which would require Massachusetts income tax rates to be graduated, in order to distribute the burden of the tax fairly and equitably. The proposed amendment would require the rates for taxpayers in higher income brackets to be higher than the rates for taxpayers in lower income brackets.

YES

A YES VOTE would change the state constitution to replace the current flat income tax system with a graduated system outlined under Question 7.

NO

A NO VOTE would leave the state constitution unchanged, thus maintaining the current flat income tax system.

QUESTION 7

QUESTION 7 is a proposed law which would change the state personal income tax laws if a proposed amendment to the Massachusetts Constitution requiring income tax rates to be graduated is approved at the 1994 state election (see Question 6).

YES

A YES VOTE would enact into law graduated income tax rates, and would change certain deductions, exemptions and credits, if the proposed constitutional amendment requiring a graduated income tax system (Question 6) is approved.

NO

A NO VOTE would make no change in the state personal income tax laws.

QUESTION 8

QUESTION 8 is a proposed law by initiative petition which would increase the portion of gasoline tax revenues that would be credited to the state Highway Fund.

YES

A YES VOTE would increase the portion of gasoline tax revenues that would be credited to the state Highway Fund; prohibit the transfer of money from the fund to any other state fund and require the preparation of a detailed plan for highway, road and bridge repairs.

NO

A NO VOTE would make no change in the operation of the Highway Fund, and would not require the preparation of a detailed plan for highway, road and bridge repair.

QUESTION 9

QUESTION 9 is a law proposed by initiative petition which would prohibit rent control for most privately owned housing units in Massachusetts.

YES

A YES VOTE would prohibit rent control for most housing units, eliminate certain existing rent control laws, and allow cities and towns to adopt a limited form of rent control for six month period.

NO

A NO VOTE would make no change in existing rent control laws or in the authority of cities and towns to adopt rent control.

The joint venture enables the two institutions to share resources and improve access to care for people throughout the region, hospital officials said.

The collaboration between the two hospitals illustrates how cooperation between a teaching hospital and a community hospital can benefit local residents and keep costs under control. Patients living south of Boston who previously had to travel out of the area for cardiac catheterization now have access to this technology in their own backyard at Quincy Hospital, officials said.

When necessary, more advanced treatments are available from BUMCH.

Through the efforts of the cardiologists and radiologists on staff at Quincy Hospital, the Cardiac Cath Lab serves a dual purpose as a special procedures suite to perform angiographies. Both are critical components in the detection and treatment of heart disease.

Together, these two procedures help physicians detect blockages in the arteries supplying blood to the heart and other parts of the body. Because the two services share space and equipment, the hospital has saved more than $1 million.

"The physician uses the results from these tests to determine the best course of treatment," Berman said. "Treatments include bypass surgery, balloon angioplasty or a laser procedure."

"Patients can receive these advanced treatments at Boston University Medical Center Hospital, as well as other in-town teaching facilities."

A support team of experienced nurses and radiology technicians is shared by the two hospitals. Quincy Hospital physicians perform catheterizations and angiographies on their own patients.

More than 200 patients are expected to benefit from the catheterization service in its first year of operation.

North Quincy Dunks Lakers, 24-6

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

Aided by another strong performance by Shawn Nee and one of the best passing performances of the season by Sean Dolbeare, North Quincy upped their football record to 5-2 with a convincing 24-6 win Friday night against Silver Lake (0-7). It was their final home game before Thanksgiving.

North has a tough task ahead of them Saturday afternoon when they hit the road to face a strong Bridgewater-Raynham team. The Red Raiders have defeated the Trojans two straight seasons, including a 12-3 decision last year.

"I'm very happy with this game," said head coach Ken McPhee. "This team (Silver Lake) played very well also, but we came through tonight."

Nee had another busy evening, rushing for 100 yards on 15 carries. It was his fifth 100-yard game of the season, all Raider victories. Also gaining good yardage were Glenn Peterson with 16 yards, Derek Epps with 20 and Jamie Karvelis with 19.

"Shawn played another great game," said McPhee. "Most of all he was very unselfish, letting others run with the ball."

Quarterback Dolbeare completed five of nine passes for 89 yards and a touchdown. He did not throw an incomplection in the second half. Eric Zimmerman (two catches, 51 yards) and Derek Epps (two catches, 30 yards and one touchdown) were Dolbeare's leading receivers.

"Dolbeare was great tonight," said McPhee. "He had his best passing game of the season tonight and is really coming along."

Silver Lake did not go home with their heads down. This game featured their first individual 100-yard performance the season (junior Tucker Apple ran for 103 yards on 12 carries) and an overall positive attitude that lasted until the final whistle.

"They're an 0-7 team right now," said McPhee. "I've been there and it's not something you want to see any team go through. They're a great bunch of kids and they played hard tonight."

North got on the board with 2:42 left in the first when Nee scored on a 3-yard run. The touchdown capped a seven-play, 54-yard drive that featured the combined running talents of Nee, Epps, Peterson and Karvelis. Nee kicked the extra point, his first of three on the day, to make the score 7-0.

North took a 14-0 lead with 3:32 left in the second quarter when Nee scored on a 10-yard run. The score ended a nine-play, 72-yard drive during which Nee ran for 35 yards.

The Raiders struck again with 23 seconds left in the quarter when Dolbeare hit Epps with an 8-yard scoring strike which

B-R At A Glance

Record: 5-2, 3-2 in the OCL. Lost 17-6 to Weymouth last week.

Coach: Dan Buron (second year, 12-5).

Previous Meeting: North beat B-R, 12-3, last season at rain-soaked Veterans' Memorial Stadium. It was North's third of five consecutive wins to close out the season.

Offense: The Trojans feature perhaps the most impressive ground attack in the Old Colony League. Matt Pauline is the featured back in the option attack. QB Jeff DiMarzio capped a seven-play, 36-yard march. North took the 21-0 lead into the locker room.

Nee scored North's final points with a 22-yard field goal on the first play of the fourth quarter. Nee leads the Old Colony League in scoring with 84 points.

Coach McPhee received two heart-stopping scares in the third quarter when Nee and Epps went down on separate plays. Both had to be helped off the field but jumped back almost as quick as they left with only minor bruises. Silver Lake scored in the fourth quarter when Apple ran the ball in from 5 yards out. Apple did most of the running to set up the score. The extra-point kick was blocked.

Defense: The Trojans have given up more than two touchdowns just once, during their 28-14 loss to Barnstable. The game could be one of those low-scoring affairs that North has mastered over the last three seasons.

Player to Watch: Pauline.

Apaches To Face Manets In Title Game

The North Quincy Apaches will face the Houghs Neck Manets in the Quincy Youth Football League title game Saturday at 6 p.m.

Both teams posted big wins in their final regular season games.

The Manets are up against a seemingly invincible opponent as the Apaches remained unbeaten and unscored upon following their 26-0 win over the West Quincy Elks Sunday.

Chris Bregoli scored two touchdowns to lead the Apaches in the regular season finale. He scored on a 22-yard bootleg run in the first quarter and returned the opening kickoff of the second half 70 yards for a score. It was the third week in a row that Bregoli has accomplished that feat.

Corey Awed and Pat Dolbeare scored from 20 and 6 yards out for the other scores. Following his first TD, Bregoli threw to Frank McNamara for North Quincy's only successful two-point conversion.

Jason Allen led the Apaches' defense with two INTs. Awed picked off one. Chris Carthas, Jon Healy, Brian Deputala and Fred Elfman played well.

The Manets pounded the Quincy Point Panthers to set up their showdown with the Apaches.

The Quincy Youth Football League cheer-leading competition will take place Saturday at 10 a.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Quincy Girls, North Boys Win Season Finales

The Quincy High girls' cross country team beat North Quincy, 27-30, for their first win over their arch-rivals since 1975.

The North Quincy boys beat the Presidents, 23-37.

In the girls' contest, Quincy's Liz Sawa (17 minutes, 20 seconds), Julie Dunn and Kathryn Lencki placed 1-2-3 to clinch the win. The next six spots were taken by North Quincy's Kelly Duggan (17:58), Laura Blaikie, Amy Drysdale, Diane McGunagle, Colleen Cotter and Ursula Feurtado. Presidents Katie Gallagher and Amy Nicklas finished 10th and 11th.

The Quincy girls finished with a dual meet record of 4-4, their best season in years. North ended at 1-7.

The North Quincy boys placed all seven scorers in the top 10 to secure their win over Quincy.

President Jim Lencki (14:31) led wire-to-wire to take the top spot, but Red Raider freshman phenom Brian Linskey placed second with a time of 14:41.

Other North Quincy runners who helped insure the win were Kevin McCue (third), Greg Burke (fifth), Brian O'Donnell (sixth), Matt Quinn (seventh), Jimmy Wan (eighth) and Joe Linskey (10th). Quincy's Erik Palluccio and Neil Petit placed fourth and ninth, respectively.

The Red Raiders boys' and girls' teams performed well in losses to Bridgewater-Raynham.

The girls lost by a single point despite missing five top runners due to injuries. Duggan (third), Blaikie (fourth), Cotter (sixth), Feurtado (seventh) and Vivian Chan (ninth) scored for North.

The inexperienced North Quincy boys were beaten, 15-46, by the Trojans. McCue, Brian Linskey, Wan, Mike Devin and Quinn scored for the Red Raiders.

Only Wan has more than one year of cross country experience.

Quincy and North Quincy were scheduled to take part in the Old Colony League championships at Silver Lake Tuesday (Nov. 1). Both schools will have runners compete in the State Coaches Invitational Saturday at Franklin Park.

Soccer

Quincy-NQ Boys, Girls Play To Ties

The second round of this year's Quincy-North Quincy boys' and girls' soccer matches ended in no decision in both games Saturday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

The boys fought to a 0-0 tie while the girls ended in a 1-1 stalemate.

The North Quincy boys and girls both eked out single-goal wins when the arch-rivals first met Oct. 1. The boys beat Quincy, 3-2, while the girls edged the Presidents, 2-1.

"According to the records we should have won [the most recent game]," said North Quincy boys' head coach Jim Johnston. "But when you have the intensity of a Quincy-North game it changes things."

Quincy head coach Barry Austin also acknowledged that the Quincy-North battles are more intense than other contests. "It's always a tough game because it's a local derby," said the British-born coach.

As the score indicates, both defenses rose to the occasion. Red Raider goalie Tom Meade and fullbacks Ralph DiMattia and Peter Johnson played brilliantly.

Senior fullback Jason Downey was outstanding on the President defense. "He's been a brick for me all season," said Austin. Junior Mike Martin, sophomore Jason Lumaghini and sophomore keeper Brian Snow backboned the shutout effort for Quincy.

In the girls' contest Kara McSweeney scored to give Quincy a lead in the first half. She was assisted by Jessica Barry.

A second-half tally by North Quincy's Laurie Flynn knotted the game. Fullback Liz Fitzpatrick and forward Kelly Keegan were the top Red Raiders.

Kelly Howard was strong offensively for the Presidents.

Quincy defenders Barry, Janet Kane, Jessica DiBona and Katie Sullivan stifled the North Quincy attack.

Saturday's contests were played under very different conditions than the first meetings between the two schools. The field at Veterans' Stadium Oct. 1 was a quagmire of mud and water. The biggest problem in the most recent games was dust being kicked up from the bone-dry pitch.

Mite House

Duggan's Nine Points Pace Purdy's

Tim Duggan recorded nine points (four goals, five assists) as Purdy's Ice Cream blasted Lydon

Russell, 12-0, in Mite House League action.

Matt Grazioso also had an outstanding day with four goals and one assist. Mike Faherty, Dave Oronte, Nick Leger and Joe Sweeney netted single goals. Leger (3), Oronte (2) and Pat Kelley assisted.

Barry's Deli nicked Doherty & White, 3-2.

Danny Sullivan, Justin Swierk and Andrew Patten scored for the winning club. Swierk also notched two assists.

Pat Casper and Steve Crispo scored for Doherty. Tim Watson and Mark DeCoste assisted.

Billy and Ryan Barter lit the lamp two times each to lead M. Sugarman Co. to a 7-1 win over Granite Rail Pizza.

Josh Sawtelle, Jimmy Kennedy and Chris Sheehan also tallied in the winning effort. Assists were handed out by Kennedy (2), Ryan Conley, Joey McManus, Matt Connors and Dan Reggiani.

Josh Giordani netted the Granite Rail goal. He was assisted.

Samoset Pharmacy bested Paul Harold Club, 5-1, on the strength of two goals each by Bret Martinson and Steve Kelley.

Paul McLean scored once for Samoset. Matt Lavery, Ed Laura, Steve Ohlson, McLean and Kelley made assists.

Brian Lynch scored off a feed from Ryan Feldhoff for Harold Club.

By KERRY BYRNE

Former Quincy High School all-scholastic football player Ron Ivil is among those behind a move to gather together all the all-scholastic football players from Quincy and North Quincy who played between 1950 and 1960.

They may expand their search for players back to the 1940s.

Ivil, a fullback for Quincy in the mid-1950s, has a meeting scheduled for Nov. 10 at Matt's Villa in Holbrook. He expects nearly 200 people to attend.

The still-burly Ivil hopes, among other things, that his efforts will bring more recognition to some of the older players who may have been overlooked by the Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame Committee.

"The all-scholastic listings go back to 1928," said Ivil. "I think a lot of those guys have been forgotten when the Hall of Fame Committee makes its picks. They pick guys who played a few years ago when there are a lot older players who definitely deserve to be in."

Ivil is hoping to get all the former players together in a reserved section at the Quincy-North Quincy Thanksgiving Day game. He also hopes to get plaques recognizing the players placed in the athletic pride rooms at each high school.

If you're like me - God forbid you are - but if you are, you probably spend a lot of time talking about the bozos who own professional sports teams and the even less-able-to-see-a-good-thing-when-they-have-it clowns they hire as players.

To be honest, I don't really know what the issues are in the baseball strike and the hockey lockout. The reason? I don't care what the issues are! What are any of these people lacking that should cause me to sympathize with their plight?

Without even knowing the specifics, I can probably tell you what the problem is: the players want more than the owners are willing to give, and vice-versa. Simple economics.

What I don't understand is why players in any sport can have any sort of gripe. Especially the baseball players. Just take a look at their job title: They are players. Players! They play for a living!

"What do you do, son?"

"Oh, I play. That's my job. I'm a player."

They're not paid to landscape, labor, construct, forge, build, mold, weld, design, dig, or even think. They are paid to play.

If the players think making exorbitant amounts of money to play is so rough then why don't they get a job making pennies to work! You know, labor, that thing most of us do so that we can make money to play.

Maybe some of 'em can learn how to pump gas for six bucks and hour. Then we'll see how bad a life full of things like fine hotel rooms, free meals and trashy women falling all over them in every city seems.

One thing I just can't comprehend is how a player's union can strike over an issue like free agency. They'll join a union for mutual protection and then call for the right to get every penny they think they're worth individually. I'm sorry, it doesn't work that way. Take your pick guys, socialism or capitalism. Which one do you want?

Now before all you union people start hollerin', let me set the record straight. I come from a long line of union people. My father, both grandfathers, my grandmother, uncles, aunts - all union people.

Now if one of my union relatives ventures out on his or her own to get their fair 'market value', yet still wants to remain in the union, what do you think the union's going to say? Probably wouldn't like that idea. Imagine a cop telling his partners, "Guys, I'm better than the rest of ya. So I'm gonna see if I can see the city will pay me twice as much as everyone else. But I also want all the benefits that come with being in the union."

They have cement shoes for people like that.

Players shouldn't even have a union if they're going to fight against safety caps or for free agency. Unions were needed by coal miners in West Virginia who died of black lung disease at frightening rates because they were forced to spend a lifetime groveling in the dirt for barely enough money to feed their family; unions were needed by textile workers in Lowell or Manhattan who were sick of getting their heads bashed in by government troops every time they demanded that their boss put ventilation in their factory or shorten their work week.

Unions are not needed by spoiled brats who think that after a few short years of playing they should never have to work.

More than 16 million people play golf in the U.S. every year.

FITTING CONCLUSIONS

Conscientious car owners may inquire about having various suspension and steering components lubricated only to find that their cars do not come equipped with grease fittings. Thus, lubrication is not possible. If such a seal were to fail and grease is lost, it would have to be replaced instead of repacked with grease and resealed. This does not mean, however, that these areas of the car should be dismissed altogether. In fact, the auto technician should be reminded to check the constant velocity (CV) joints of the drive axles every time the car is brought in for an oil change. Even though the seals or boots covering these joints are sealed, spotting and replacing a failed seal right away can preclude damage to the CV joint and a more costly repair.

HINT: Wheel bearings may also be sealed.

It makes good sense to keep every part of your vehicle properly maintained. To help you do this the professional service team at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is available at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Look For Win Over Silver Lake Friday Afternoon

Falmouth Clippers Sail By Quincy, 42-8

By KERRY BYRNE

Over the past three weeks the Quincy High football team has run into one great team after another. Their last three opponents - New Bedford, Weymouth and Falmouth - have a combined record of 18-3.

The Presidents (3-4) played the first two tough but Friday night the Clippers (6-1) of Falmouth laid a 42-8 whipping on the Quincy boys.

The Presidents get a break from their brutal string of games Friday afternoon when Silver Lake (0-7) comes to town. The game will be played at 5 p.m. to accommodate SAT testing Saturday morning. Last season Quincy beat Silver Lake 20-0 in a quagmire.

Quincy found the Falmouth wishbone attack too much to handle as the Cape team rushed for over 400 yards. Six different Clippers scored touchdowns.

"Our defense has played well all year but not tonight," said dejected Quincy head coach Jack Raymer after the game. "We just didn't tackle and did a lot of poor things defensively."

Quincy trailed 13-0 at the intermission and still had a chance to win the game, but on the first play from scrimmage of the second half Falmouth fullback Eric Ayers went 68 yards up the chute for a touchdown that broke the back of the Presidents. Touchdown runs by Willie Ford and Nathan Lewis and a 23-yard Mike Andrews to Ryan Sullivan strike closed out the Falmouth scoring.

Jason Gourdine and Andrews scored on first-half runs for the Clippers.

Offensively, the Presidents were plagued by the same problems they've faced the past few weeks: turnovers and an inability to put the ball in the end zone after marching down field. Quincy gave the ball away four times (three fumbles, one interception). They drove deep into Falmouth territory twice in the first half but were unable to score. The first attempt was foiled due to a fumble. On the second chance the Presidents were unable to convert a fourth-and-three play at the Falmouth 16.

Six penalties hurt Quincy. Four were of the major 15-yard variety. "What can I say?" said Raymer. "We hurt ourselves. Key penalties, fumbles, you name it. You don't win games doing things like that."

Quincy got on the board in the second half when running back Sam Brown (140 yards, 19 carries) raced 72 yards around right end for the score. He also punched in the two-point conversion, Quincy's first of the year. The touchdown play was blocked beautifully by senior linemen Butch Palaza, Mike Feeley, Matt Strauchon, Jeff Burrell and junior Jake Drohan. The game marked Drohan's first varsity start.

Kevin Connolly played well in his first varsity start at safety. The sophomore made five tackles. Quincy's top defenders included linebackers Bill Dunn, Ed Anderson and Greg Santoro, linemen Mike Flagg, Mike Feeley and John Moss, and defensive backs Matt Miller, Mike Sheffer and Chris McArdle.

Dunn made a number of big hits for the President defense.

Quincy had not lost to Falmouth in their four previous meetings.

Silver Lake At A Glance

Record: 0-7. 0-5 in the OCL. Lost to North Quincy, 24-6, last week.

Coach: Jeff Knight (first year).

Previous Meeting: Quincy beat Silver Lake, 20-0, last season in a swamp at Silver Lake. It was the Lakers' eighth loss during an 0-10 campaign. The Lakers have not won since 1992.

Offense: As one Silver Lake coach said, "we really have nothing." The Lakers have scored just six points in their last four games. They have scored a total of 32 all season. RB Tucker Apple ran for over 100 yards last week versus NQ. Defense: Safeties Matt Guevremont and Jacob Barnes are strong defenders. The defense has looked 'better than the offense but suffers from a lack of size and experience.

Player to Watch: Apple.

losses this season came at home. The primary reason was that their three home opponents were Bridge-water-Raynham, perennial Old Colony League power; New Bedford, the No. 1 team in Eastern Mass. the last two years; and Weymouth, the team tied with Falmouth atop the OCL standings following their win over B-R Saturday.

Weymouth hosts Falmouth Friday in a game that will probably determine the OCL's Super Bowl representative.

The Presidents next opponent, Silver Lake, has not won since 1992.

The Quincy JV team is 4-3.

Wide receiver Eric Nunez and fullback Andrew Byrne led the Quincy offense with two touchdowns each. Nunez scored on a beautiful pass from quarterback John Hanafin and on an impressive 85-yard kick return.

Byrne raced to the end zone from 35 yards out after catching a Hanafin pass in the flat and later punched in Quincy's final score on a dive from 5 yards out. His short TD run was set up by a long Hanafin to Tom McIntyre pass play.

Halfback Tim Santos

bullied his way in for Quincy's other touchdown. Kevin Connolly did most of the ground work for the Presidents. Mark Belanger and Ed McGee also ran well.

Offensive linemen Jay Fennelly, Sean Thomas, Don McCarthy, Chuck Feeley and Paul Daley made short work of the Falmouth defensive line.

The Clipper offense was unable to move the ball against linemen Thomas, Dan Wong and Jeremy Wray and' linebackers Santos, Jon Ryan and Anthony Lallis. Santos, Ryan and Lallis punished the Falmouth backs on multiple occasions. Defensive backs Sev Tan and John Leonard played extremely well.

Quincy Freshmen Romp Past Clippers, 28-6

The Quincy High freshmen football team sunk the Falmouth Clippers, 28-6.

The young Presidents dominated the line of scrimmage on both sides of the ball. A powerful run game led to four long, impressive touchdown drives.

Fullback Steve Verlicco reached paydirt three times to lead Quincy. Halfback Shaun Faherty scored once. Faherty and wingback Brian Dunn were on the receiving end of two-point conversion passes from quarterback Kevin Cellucci to round out the Quincy scoring.

Cellucci combined with tight end Kevin McPartlin for a key completion that sustained Quincy's second

TD drive.

Bull-Elephant backfield mates Bill Viera and Jamel Copeland were stopped on one two-point conversion effort.

Offensive linemen Dan Chenette, Steve Wiltshire, Tom Kelley, Dan Nichol, Lucas Chenette, Will Trenh and Pat (Offensive) Young, and tight ends McPartlin and Brad Croall opened a series of massive holes in the Falmouth defense.

Running backs Tim Lewis, Tom Santos and Rich (Axl) Rose, and wings Steve Clark and Dunn moved the ball well.

On defense it was Jason Crossman, Jeff Corey, Stan Westland, Dan Kane, John (Defensive) Young who controlled the line.

Linebackers Verlicco and Bill Armstrong shut down the Falmouth run game. Defensive backs Jon Caliri, Pat Harrington, Kevin Moore and Justin Doty nullified the Clipper pass attack.

Moore hammered one Clipper ball carrier, causing a fumble that was recovered by Verlicco.

The Quincy defense was been without the talents of heavy-hitting linebacker/defensive captain Steve Maze who was hurt earlier in the season.

Sunshine Fruit played South Boston Savings Bank.

Nicole Cahill, Katelyn Lynch, Michela King and Kristina Manganaro led the Sunshine band.

Impact Quincy To Release Results Of Youth Survey At Fall Meeting Nov. 10

Impact Quincy will release the results of the 1994 Survey of Quincy Youth at the fall IQ Coalition meeting on Thursday, Nov. 10 at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room on Quincy City Hall.

A panel of community members will respond to the survey results, followed by open discussion on the information. The public is invited to attend and participate.

Almost 2,500 youth ages 11-18 took part in the survey, which was administered for the second year in a row last spring. The survey asked questions regarding youths' attitudes and behaviors regarding alcohol, tobacco, and other drug use; medical and personal health; safety and "life satisfaction."

The 1993 survey indicated that for the most part, Quincy's youth were using alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs at similar or slightly lower rates than youths in other parts of the state and country. Last year's survey also found that while very few youths in Quincy had ever carried weapons compared to youths in similar sized cities throughout the state, young people in Quincy were very concerned about violence among their peers.

"Last year's survey results allowed us to provide helpful information to several organizations that work with youth," said

Impact Quincy's Project Director Mitch Finnegan. "We did adjust some of this year's questions slightly based upon last year's results, and hope to have even more valuable information to help our entire community address the needs of young people."

Several recently released national surveys have indicated that use of alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs is beginning to rise again, after several years of a down-turn. This has occurred despite the recent alcohol and drug-related deaths of such figures as actor River Phoenix and songwriter Kurt Cobain.

"We have been very alarmed at the increase in use by young people across the country," Finnegan said. "This national trend makes it even more imperative that we look closely at what our young people tell us in Quincy, and respond effectively."

The Nov. 10 meeting of the IQ Coalition will also include a brief overview of the activities of the coalition throughout the city. Refreshments will be served beginning at 6:30 p.m., and a brief orientation for people interested in learning more about the Coalition will begin at 6:45 p.m. The regular meeting begins at 7 p.m.

For more information, call the IQ office at 472-6027.

SAVE YOUR BACK WHILE RAKING LEAVES

Once again the change of season is upon us; the summer vacation in New Hampshire or the Cape is just a memory, and we realize that soon enough we will be dealing with snow and ice. Autumn is, for many folks, the prettiest season of the year, but it is not without potential health risks to the back and spine. In my opinion, the two main culprits of the Fall season are the fallen leaves and the changing weather conditions.

It has been my experience that Fall's colder and occasionally damper weather can contribute to the aggravation of many back or neck problems, such as chronic sprains, strains or arthritic conditions. Secondly, the repetitive twisting and bending actions done by a person while raking leaves is a very common cause of lower back, mid back and/or shoulder problems.

If you are planning to clean up your yard and will be raking leaves, the following guidelines may be helpful:

- 1) Warm up prior to raking as you would do before exercising.
- 2) Switch sides when raking so that you are not always raking the leaves in the same direction.
- 3) Try to keep your back straight and, whenever possible, get down on your knees to rake under bushes or hedges, or when lifting leaves into a trash barrel.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehning, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

Dealing With Gun Violence*

In television, the daily news, and conversation, guns seize our attention and fuel our fears.

Guns by the Numbers

•Every day 15 children under the age of 19 are killed by gunfire, and many more are injured.

•Homicide is the second leading cause of death for young ages 10 to 19. For black males ages 10 to 19, it's the leading cause of death. More are committed with firearms, especially handguns.

•An estimated 1.2 million elementary aged, latchkey children have access to guns in their homes. •More than half of suicides among youths ages 10-14 and roughly two-thirds of suicides completed by youth ages 15 to 19 are committed with firearms.

•Although the U.S. regulates the safety of countless products, including teddy bears, blankets, toys and pajamas, it does not regulate the safety of firearms.

•The average hospital bill for treating a child wounded by gunfire is $14,343, enough to pay for a year of college.

FORE RIVER BRIDGE frames the cruiser USS Salem as the Quincy-built vessel approaches the Quincy shipyard.

omen for its shipbuilding future.

The day also had significance for former Salem crewmates who said they were overjoyed by the prospect of restoring and preserving their former ship.

One of those crew members, Bill McGrain of Salem, served on the cruiser from 1953 to 1954 as a damage controlman.

"The Salem means a lot to me," McGrain began. "The Salem to me is like how the old Irishman feels about this comment. He'd say my wife is my wife but my pipe is my comfort. Well, I think that way about this ship."

"My wife is my wife but this ship is my comfort. It's a great thrill to be here. I drove all the way from Florida to take this little ride and I'm really enjoying it."

"It will look better when we get this paint shipped and cleaned up a little bit. It will be interesting to get back inside it when they open it up to the public. I'm going to come back every time I get a chance but it'll be neat to get back down below to see what's it still like down there."

"If I'm still alive for the grand opening I'll be here," McGrain vowed. "Nothing will keep me from coming."

Another former Salem crew member, Bob Ahearn of Milton, also served from 1953-54. He fondly recalled the ship's tour in the Caribbean, including a stop in Haiti, and later in the Mediterranean.

"As the flagship of the Sixth Fleet, this was just a beautiful ship, well-maintained. It was the pride of the fleet. Taking pictures of the deck it's hard to believe what's happened but looking inside it looks like the ship is in terrific shape."

"After they have it sand-blasted and the deck straightened out, it's going to be a proud ship and I'm looking forward to visiting it and even spending some time helping with it."

Ahearn said he served on another ship that was not spared. "We still have the ship association and we still meet regularly and it's been a disappointment that we can't visit or see the ship because it's gone."

"But this here (Salem) is a treasure that will stay for generations and I think the young people will see what the United States has had in the past and what will be maintained in the future."

Another person looking forward to Salem's restoration and preservation is Richard B. Amirault, commanding officer of the U.S.S. Constitution.

"What's unique about saving a ship like this is usually you find it's old people who are preserving something from their youth for the youth of today. It allows kids who reads these books and see these shows on TV about World War II and previous wars and the War of 1812 in the case of the Constitution, but they can't touch it."

"But here they come to Quincy to see Salem or they can come to Boston to see Constitution or they can go to Fall River to see the (battleship) Massachusetts, and (destroyer) Kennedy, they can touch history."

"It kind of brings those lessons home."

The Salem and Constitution will be linked by water shuttle, which will be a key aspect for future tourism in Quincy.

Amirault said he is also excited by the prospects of incorporating the Boston Harbor Islands into a National Park System, a goal of Congressman Gerry Studds.

As the sun shimmered across Boston Harbor and Salem passed George's Island, Amirault envisioned a harbor island park system for all to enjoy. "All of these islands have some history but they have been somewhat inaccessible.

"I applaud the efforts of all involved to make those islands accessible. The water shuttle between Quincy and Boston will just be a part of that. I think that's great that we can share these histories."

One of those historic points of interest is Nix's Mate, a place where pirates were hanged and left hanging "as an example to the sailors that went in and out (of the harbor) in case they had ideas of taking over their ship and being a mutiny," Amirault explained.

"These islands in the outer harbor have supported commerce and have abruptly stopped some commerce many times. There's a lot of shipwrecks in these islands. There's tremendous history here," Amirault added.

For some, the Salem arrival was a bittersweet day. A group of former USS Lexington crewmates huddled together on the main deck recounting tales of the "Blue Ghost" and how they wished it was the "Lady Lex" coming home. Former Lexington crewman Charles Ryberg of Plymouth, who was part of the movement to bring the aircraft carrier home to Quincy, said he'll always be disappointed Quincy was bypassed for Corpus Christi as the final port for the Lex.

Ryberg called Corpus Christi's landing of the Lex "sacrilege," sarcastically adding the aircraft carrier belongs in Corpus Christi as much the Alamo belongs on Cape Cod.

Asked if the Salem's return takes the edge off the Lexington loss, Ryberg replied, "It takes it off, a little bit, but it didn't have the World War II record that the Lexington had. The Lexington had 13 battle stars; only the Essex and Enterprise had more."

"A lot of people don't know the Lexington was built in record time, one year ahead of schedule by those shipyard workers. And let me tell you, the night we got hit by a torpedo, it showed how great they built this ship."

"I am pleased something has come to Quincy and we'll do all we can to help the museum. We're going to do the best we can."

Others say the Lexington loss was a blessing in disguise, that it was too big a project with only limited resources.

They also say it's time to move on, and rally behind Salem and make her a proud ship once again.

Let her restoration, and preservation, begin.

Paul E. Hurley Sr., 77

Owned Quincy Insurance Firm;
Decorated WWII Veteran; Active In YMCA

A memorial service for Paul E. Hurley Sr., 77, of Boston, formerly of Quincy, will be celebrated Tuesday, Nov. 8 at 7 p.m. at the South Shore YMCA.

Mr. Hurley died Oct. 19 while visiting in New York City. He had been ill for a long time.

He was the former owner of the Paul E. Hurley Insurance Agency in Quincy.

Past president of the South Shore YMCA, he was instrumental in the purchase of the 92-acre site in Sandwich for a youth camp.

"We chose the site of the service to reflect my father's lifelong commitment to the values that are best expressed by the South Shore YMCA," said Mr. Hurley's son, Paul E. Hurley Jr. of Braintree.

Mr. Hurley started his insurance business in 1940 before the outbreak of World War II.

When the war came, he was a gunnery officer and executive officer aboard the USS Converse in the South Pacific, part of the "Little Beavers" Destroyer Squadron 23. He saw action in Buka, Rabaul, Kavieng, Bougainville and other Pacific island areas and received the Bronze Star Medal, the Navy Commendation Medal, a Presidential Unit Citation, and several battle stars.

Admiral Arleigh Burke, with whom Mr. Hurley served in Destroyer Squadron 23 in the South Pacific, had a special tribute for him when he was honored by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce in 1984. Burke said, in part:

"Paul Hurley was in the responsible position of gunnery officer of a destroyer in the Solomon campaign. Just a couple of years before that, he had little idea of the tremendous responsibility of that important job. He had become gunnery officer because he worked as hard as he could. He did more than his share and he inspired his people to do more than their share, too."

"Paul, his ship, the Converse, won their battles. Not just one battle, but engagement after engagement. Why? Because of Paul, and others who aspired to have the same characteristics, that he repeatedly demonstrated."

"Paul has a great sense of obligation, greater than most of us. It is people who do have the feeling that they owe something to their society, to their country, to their associates, who help create great communities and great nations."

Mr. Hurley got his insurance agency on the move after the war and built it to a 20-employee operation before he sold it in 1991.

He was former chairman of the Hancock Bank & Trust Co. board.

The South Shore YMCA named Mr. Hurley to the Hall of Fame in 1990 after he served as vice president, president, and chairman of the long-range planning committee.

He was a chairman of the Quincy City Hospital Board of Managers, head of the Quincy Visiting Nurse Association, the Quincy Heart Fund Drive, the Cerebral Palsy Fund and the Quincy Community Chest.

He received the Distinguished Service Award from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce in 1984.

Born in Quincy, where he lived most of his life, he moved to Boston in 1961.

Mr. Hurley graduated from Quincy High School and received a degree in 1940 at Dartmouth College where he was a tennis champion. He continued to play tennis in later years and was former head of the Quincy Tennis Club and Wollaston Golf Club. He was a member of the Fore River Railroad organization.

He is also survived by his wife, Constance C. (Wiseman) Hurley; a daughter, Constance Cohen of New York City; two brothers, William Hurley and Warren Hurley, both of New Hampshire; three sisters, Dorothy Johnson of California, Miriam Lyons of Newton and Ruth Ruggiero of Florida; and two grandchildren.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once said that character is the foundation stone upon which one must build to win respect. Just as no worthy building can be erected on a weak foundation, so no lasting reputation worthy of respect can be built on a weak character.

"Character grows out of an awareness of the difference between right and wrong. It develops from a desire to embrace the right and avoid the wrong. It matures in the making of deliberate choices between doing what one ought to do and what one may prefer to do, especially when the former requires some sacrifice and hardship. It enables us to resist every kind of pressure when expediency clashes with principle and when shortsighted people clamor today for something they will condemn tomorrow."

St. Moritz

Devils Tie BC Junior Eagles

The hard-luck St. Moritz Devils squirt major hockey team got a big morale booster Sunday when they battled the Boston College Junior Eagles to a 2-2 tie.

Steve Segalla of Quincy put the Devils on the board with a goal in the third period. Set up by his brother John and Ryan McLinnis of Wellesley, Segalla raced down the ice and fired a bullet between the goalies pads.

John Segalla scored the Devils' other goal with just seconds left in the middle period.

The Devils controlled the game from the outset. One of the primary reasons was an outstanding, aggressive defense led by Rich Howe of Milton, Nathan Shaller of Newton and Steve Cavanaugh of Hingham.

The Junior Eagles were able to tie the score in the third period. A flurry of potential game-winning shots by the Devils were turned away. Kevin Lynch of Milton unloaded a hard slapshot that zipped past the Eagle goalie but clanked off the post.

U.S. CONGRESSMAN Raymond Bates speaking at the commissioning of the U.S.S. Salem at the Charlestown Naval Yard, May of 1949.

Some Facts About . . .

The U.S.S. Salem (CA-139)

One of the finest examples of naval engineering in the world, the USS SALEM (CA-139) was the third and last ship in the Des Moines Class of Heavy Cruisers commissioned. Her overall length of 718 feet and displacement of 17,000 tons make her comparable in size to some of the famous "dreadnoughts" of World War I.

She also shared with her sister ship, the NEWPORT NEWS (CA-145), the distinction of being one of the Navy's two completely air conditioned warships. Virtually all of her living compartments were air conditioned to improve living conditions on board and increase the fighting efficiency of her crew.

The SALEM originally carried a helicopter (rather than the catapult-type cruiser float planes used during World War II) to assist her gun crews in laying down precise, accurate fire when engaged in shore bombardment.

In efficiency and seaworthiness, SALEM is unsurpassed by anything afloat. But her greatly increased firepower was perhaps her most important feature. The main battery consists of nine eight-inch, 55-caliber guns, triple mounted in three turrets. These guns, loaded automatically from the ammunition handling rooms to the gun muzzles, were capable of firing at a rate that was nearly four times faster than any guns of the same or larger caliber.

While her armament was awesome, it is to her credit that the SALEM never once fired her guns in anger. For eight years she served as Flagship of the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, carrying out U.S. foreign policy during the Cold War years and using her speed, mobility, and potential force to prevent the very action she was designed to carry out.

During her fourth year as Sixth Fleet Flagship, in 1953, SALEM was the first ship to arrive at the earthquake devastated Ionian Islands of Greece, where he crew worked for days caring for the injured and dying and distributing supplies to the homeless. For her efforts, the SALEM earned the personal praise of the King and Queen of Greece.

Throughout her career she played host to many distinguished visitors, among them the U.S. Ambassador to Spain, John D. Lodge, the Honorable Thomas S. Gates, Under Secretary of the Navy, the Shah of Iran, and the President of Lebanon.

She was decommissioned in 1959.

To Make Your Visit To The Shipyard More Enjoyable We Ask That You . . .

Arrive early. We anticipate that the SALEM will dock between 2 and 3 p.m. Use our free shuttle service. Whether walking or driving to the Shipyard, all visitors will be asked to ride our shuttle buses from the main gate to the viewing site. No foot or auto traffic will be permitted inside the Yard.

Bring your own chairs. Because we cannot provide seating for everyone, we ask that you bring your own lawn or beach chairs so you'll be comfortable while you wait.

Leave all alcoholic beverages at home. Alcoholic drinks are not permitted at the Shipyard and will be confiscated if brought in. (We reserve the right to inspect any coolers as well.) Soft drinks and coffee will be available at the USNSM-sponsored concession stand in the Shipyard.

Dress appropriately. As all New Englanders know, autumn can be balmy and beautiful or brisk and cool (or wet!). Dressing for the weather will make your stay much more pleasant.

Look for our designated volunteer staff for assistance. They are easily identified by their badges should you need information or help.

Where To Park For The Salem's Arrival

By special arrangement with local businesses and the Quincy School Department, free shuttle service will be available to the public from the following parking areas to the USNSM site:

1. Des Moines Road and East Howard Street (corner lot)
2. American Overseas, 116 East Howard Street
3. Cleverly Court West
4. Read Avenue

Additional parking space and shuttle service will be available in Squantum when the first four lots are filled.

Preserving The Most Productive Shipyard In The World

United States Naval & Shipbuilding Museum

The past twelve months have been a period of enormous activity for a group of dedicated volunteers working to establish the United States Naval & Shipbuilding Museum (USNSM) at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy, MA.

During that time, these men and women have worked for the successful passage of legislation to establish the museum as a private, nonprofit corporation. They have obtained from the Navy the last heavy cruiser in existence, the USS SALEM, built at the shipyard, as the centerpiece of the museum collection. They have negotiated a lease for space with the MWRA and have arranged for the issuance of tax exempt bonds to support the museum's construction and start-up activities. They have also arranged for the Massachusetts

Military Research Center, the largest collection of its kind outside of Washington, D.C., to be housed at the museum site.

The construction of the USNSM represents a unique opportunity to preserve a portion of what was once the most productive shipyard in the world. It will showcase the skills of the shipbuilders and the history of the steel navy they created, including such historic vessels as the USS NEVADA, the USS LEXINGTON, and the USS SALEM.

Scheduled to open in 1994, the museum complex will encompass 10 acres of exhibits and activities on Quincy's historic Fore River. Visitors will discover:

• The USS SALEM (CA-139) heavy cruiser open for viewing and guided tours of the crew's quarters, bridge, and command centers—and special events in the Admiral's suite.

• The new Massachusetts Military Research Center and archives including hands-on exhibits of artillery, tanks, and other equipment for U.S. and enemy forces from the Revolution through operation Desert Storm.

• Three exhibit halls full of displays on Shipbuilding in Quincy, Naval History, Naval Life, Ship Models, and Ship Design.

• A 200-seat theater showing vintage feature films and video interviews with former Shipyard workers.

• The Benefactor's Lounge and Function Room that accommodates up to 800 people, with catering for ship reunions and social functions.

• Drill grounds for militia musters by historical reenactment groups.

USNSM

UNITED STATES NAVAL SHIPBUILDING MUSEUM

• Tours of the Fore River Shipyard and its shipbuilding equipment by the workers who made it famous.

• A memorial to all members of the Armed Services.

• Visiting Tall Ships and other foreign vessels.

• A museum shop offering gifts, photos, books and other memorabilia.

• Easy access by Water Shuttle from Boston and by car from Route 3A, with parking for up to 1500 vehicles.

Through an educational program to be operated in conjunction with the Massachusetts

Maritime Academy, Quincy College, and the Quincy Public Schools, young people will have the opportunity to work on board SALEM. They will learn how to preserve and maintain artifacts in the Military Research Center, and will give tours of the facilities as trained docents.

The museum began as the idea of a Quincy school student, inspired by a dedicated teacher. It has evolved into an undertaking that will help revitalize the Shipyard and make a substantial contribution to the economy of the South Shore

Quincy voters, like those across Massachusetts, split party preference at the top of the ballot to give Senator Edward Kennedy and Gov. William Weld smashing victories in Tuesday's state election.

Quincy, which was with Kennedy 32 years ago was there for him once again, to help turn back the aggressive challenge of Republican Mitt Romney and give him a political ride into the 21st century on another six-year term.

This Democratic stronghold where Democrats outnumber both Republicans and independents then crossed over to help give Weld and Lt. Governor A. Paul Cellucci a rousing win over the Democratic ticket of Mark Roosevelt and Robert Massie.

Kennedy's vote over Romney was Romney was 18,726 to 12,443, not quite as smashing as Weld and Cellucci, who made Quincy look like Republican country. They piled up a 21,497 vote to Roosevelt and Massie's 9,582.

Atty. General L. Scott Harshbarger crushed Janis M. Berry here 21,863 to 8,853.

Auditor Joseph DeNucci ran by Forrester Clark, Jr. 23,308 to 5,413. Geoff Weill had 793.

William Galvin swamped Arthur Chase and Peter Everett by a vote of 19,244 to 8,484 respectively for Secretary of State.

Quincy also lined up solidly behind one other Christopher Iannella, Jr. Republican, Treasurer Joseph Malone, and then Atty. William Delahunt of the rest of the ballot.

Malone's vote was 19,098 to Shannon Patricia O'Brien's 10,363.

The Quincy turnout was 68.7 percent of the city's 47,225 registered voters.

Congressman Gerry Studds was an easy winner here over Sandwich Republican Keith Jason Hemeon 21,569 to 7,818 and was piling up votes throughout the 10th Congressional District with returns incomplete at press time.

In the lone Quincy contest, State Rep. Steve Tobin rolled by his Republican challenger Steven Williams in the Second Norfolk District with a vote of 9,906 to 3,125.

Tobin's Quincy delegation colleagues, Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Ron Mariano and Michael Bellotti, were unopposed.

Also unopposed were Governor Councillor Christopher Iannella, Jr. Republican, Treasurer Joseph Malone, and then Atty. William Delahunt of the Quincy.

Norfolk County Clerk of Courts Nicholas Barbadoro of Braintree, formerly of Quincy had little trouble carrying the city against Michael H. Mushnick of Milton with a vote of 21,079 to 6,860.

Register of Deeds Barry T. Hannon of Braintree was an easy winner here over Stoughton's Ronald J. Smith, 22,668 to 4,358.

Peter H. Collins of Milton was a strong base here for challenging Norfolk County Commission incumbent Bruce D. Olsen of Stoughton, racking up a 17,791 to 10,118 vote margin.

County wide returns for those three posts were incomplete.

For Public Housing Improvements

Housing Authority Receives $4.6M Grant

The Quincy Housing Authority has received a state grant of nearly $4.6 million to renovate public housing throughout the city, its first such award from the state in more than seven years.

The grant, which totals $4,572,000 and comes from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD), marks the first time since the mid-1980s that the QHA has received money for improving its state-funded facilities. QHA Executive Director John "Jake" Comer said the authority received around $3.5 million "about seven or eight years ago."

"This is a banner day for the Quincy Housing Authority," he said.

State Rep. Ronald Mariano, who helped fight for the state funding, agreed.

"We rallied the troops, and it's good to see how something you've worked very hard on is being spent," he said. Mariano also called Comer a "vociferous and vocal advocate for the housing authority" and praised Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Stephen Tobin and Michael Bellotti for their part in helping to secure the funds by joining Mariano in working to get the $130 million housing modernization bond bill approved earlier this year.

Both Comer and Mariano said they will continue to fight for more funding.

More than $4 million of the state grant will go to replace old roofs, siding and windows and repair roofs at the 400-unit Snug Harbor family complex in Germantown. The rest of the money will pay for a variety of repairs at the West Acres family housing complex in West Quincy and the Sawyer Towers, Tobin Towers and Crowley Court apartments for the elderly.

The QHA also manages federally-funded apartments. The federal government provided funding for upgrading those units two years ago.

Comer said renovations will begin as soon as possible, with the windows being the top priority. Replacing the windows could reduce the amount of time and money spent to remove lead-based paint from Snug Harbor because much of the material is located on window frames, he added.

Other state-funded improvements will include road repairs at West Acres, road and railing repairs at Crowley Court, a new roof on Tobin Towers and new hot water tanks at Sawyer Towers. A smaller portion of the funding is earmarked for handicapped accessibility improvements at Sawyer and Tobin towers.

In addition, the QHA received a separate $108,000 grant to plan and design new kitchens and bathrooms at the Snug Harbor complex. Officials are hopeful the state will grant more money for construction once the design work is complete.

The EOCD distributed $59 million of the $130 million earlier this year for emergency repairs, Comer said. Quincy received about $2.2 million to begin removing lead-based paint from family housing, to install sprinkler systems at high-rise buildings for the elderly and to replace aging elevators at Sawyer and Tobin towers, he added.

Comer said competition

Council Approves Tri-Town Easement

The towns of Braintree, Holbrook and Randolph have been granted permission by the City Council to build an easement through part of West Quincy so that it may tap into the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority water system. Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton, noting the water problems the three towns have had in the past, said the easement will only be used to utilize the MWRA system in emergency situations. He stressed that the city's system is separate from the MWRA's and Quincy's water pressure will be unaffected by the project.

Colton said no digging will be done in any streets,

Final Decision To Be Made Nov. 21

3 Women Among Interim College Presidency Finalists

A field of 92 candidates for the position of interim Quincy College president has been narrowed to a field of five finalists, three of whom are women.

The five are: Stephen F. Kenney of Quincy, director of developments and grant services at the college; Alice V. Letteney, until recently executive dean of academic affairs at Mount Wachusett Community College in Gardner; Carol A. Moore of Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., a provost and vice president of academic affairs at Mercy College; Linda B. Wilson of Rockland, director of the Quincy Public Schools Dropout Prevention Program and current interim Quincy College President Donald Young. Letteney and Young interviewed for the interim position, which will be a one-year term, with the Quincy College Board of Governors Monday night. The other three candidates are scheduled to appear next Monday at 7:15 p.m. in the Saville Hall Board Room at the college to give a five-minute presentation and answer questions for up to 90 minutes.

The Board of Governors will then narrow the field to three finalists, who will return Nov. 21 for another round of interviews. Those will be immediately followed by a vote by the 13-member board for the interim president.

If one of the three women is chosen, it will be the first time in the college's history that the school has not been headed by a man.

Nearly 100 college employees have signed petitions to retain Young for another year. Board Chairman Daniel Raymond said that he has received a petition with 60 signatures and another with 20 to 40 signatures urging the board to keep Young, who was appointed to the interim position more than a year ago to replace former Quincy College President O. Clayton Johnson, who was fired.

Johnson has appealed his termination and arbitration is still pending.

Council: Bradlee's Will Not Be Rezoned

The City Council has decided not to rezone the southerly portion of Quincy Avenue, which includes the Bradlee's store at Presidents Plaza, from Business "B" zoning to Planned Unit Development (PUD).

The council Monday night cancelled a public hearing on the matter scheduled for Nov. 21.

Council President Michael Cheney said the council was initially concerned by news that Bradlee's, which is located down the street from the Wal-Mart store scheduled to open near The Falls condominium complex next year, planned to expand in order to compete with Wal-Mart. Traffic was among the councilors' major concerns, he said.

Some Bradlee's officials had said in the past that the company had no plans to expand the Quincy Avenue store and objected to the council's plans to rezone the site.

However, Cheney said that whether or not Bradlee's plans to expand is now a "moot point" because Wal-Mart has agreed to make $1 million in area traffic improvements. The improvements are one of a number of stipulations Cheney included in the permit the council granted to Wal-Mart in September to build the $20 million Granite Crossing shopping center, which will also include a supermarket and possibly an additional retail store, at the site.

Ambulance Systems Of America To Acquire Charter Ambulance

Ambulance Systems of America, which has a municipal contract with Quincy, has signed a letter of intent to acquire Charter Ambulance Service to take effect this month.

Charter Ambulance Services, headquartered in Springfield, is joining one of the largest privately held ambulance companies in the nation. ASA is also affiliated with Norfolk-Bristol Ambulance, Worcester Himmer Ambulance, and Stavis Ambulance. The Foxboro-based firm last year acquired Para-Med Ambulance of Rhode Island.

With the acquisition of Charter Ambulance

Service, ASA adds Western Massachusetts to the region it presently covers, which includes Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Officials involved in the acquisition said the move will bring additional management and financial expertise, as well as back-up vehicles and personnel, to the Springfield location.

Neighborhood Meeting On Shaw's Proposal Tonight

Residents from Wards 5 and 6 will meet with officials from Shaw's Supermarkets tonight (Thursday) at a neighborhood meeting regarding the company's proposal to open a new store at the site of the former Boston Gear Works.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at Quincy City Hall.

Last year, Shaw's withdrew plans for a new supermarket at the site, which is located on the North Quincy-Wollaston line, after members of the City Council indicated they would vote against the project. At the time, both Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers both voiced opposition to the proposal.

However, Phelan said Monday night that the company is requesting to come back to the council with a revised proposal. He added that before any filing takes place with the council, he and Ayers would like Shaw's representatives to meet with area residents to discuss their plans.

City Parking Fee Increased To $10

The City Council has approved an increase in the annual fee for Quincy's on-street parking permits from $2 to $10.

The change will be implemented by the end of the month.

The council voted 6-2 on the increase, with Council President Michael Cheney and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who both favored an increase from $2 to $20, voting in opposition. Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio was not in attendance during the vote.

Parking on Quincy streets is illegal without a permit, but officials have said thousands of vehicles are regularly parked illegally because the law is not strictly enforced.

The $20 fee had been recommended by the department of public works, police and fire departments, and Quincy's snow removal task force. The increase was intended to motivate drivers to get their cars off the city's narrow, congested streets, Cheney said.

Cheney also suggested that city taxpayers who have provided driveways have subsidized those who do not.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, however, disagreed, saying that a 5-fold increase in the parking fee is enough and that many residents have no place to park except on the street.

"Let's be reasonable," he said.

Other councillors supported Cahill, including Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson who said the fee can be increased next year if the council deems it necessary.

After Monday night's council meeting, Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said he would have preferred the increase to $20 but called the new $10 fee "a step in the right direction."

The council recently changed winter on-street parking restrictions so residents do not have to move their cars to the other side of the street halfway through the snow season.

Previously, residents would park on the even side of the street during even-numbered years and on the odd side of the street during odd-numbered years, switching the side of the street after Jan. 1.

Now, residents must park on the same side of the street throughout the winter, depending on whether the winter begins with an odd or even-numbered year.

PAINT PARTY was recently held at Atherton Hough School where faculty, parents and students joined to paint the school's interior. Among the volunteers were, from left, Lori Sloboder, resource teacher Bill Murray, Christopher Smeglin, Lorie Hammerstrom, grade five teacher Mike Smeglin and John Flaherty.

As Part Of Long-Range Consolidation MBTA To Relocate Quincy Center Office

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority plans to move four of its offices, including one in Quincy Center, into a single location near South Station in Boston as part of a long-range consolidation.

Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets, made the announcement at press time after consulting with Gerald Marquis, director of the MBTA Real Estate Department.

Mader termed the MBTA's course of action a "policy decision" to move the four offices, which contain employees affiliated with the planned construction of the Old Colony Railroad, closer to the State Transportation Building near the T's South Station on the Red Line.

"It's part of a long-range planning and streamlining," she said.

According to Mader, the four offices are located at South Station, Arborway, Charlestown and Quincy Center. The downtown Quincy office is

A DOWN SIDE TO DIETING

Being overweight is bad for your health, so losing weight is good for you, right?

Not always, according to studies being reviewed by the American Heart Association. Researchers have found that men who diet frequently are more at risk for developing heart disease and diabetes than those who never diet, even if the non-dieters are somewhat overweight. The frequent dieters studied had a 38.3 percent rate of hypertension and a 14.6 percent rate of diabetes. Still, the healthiest subjects by far were those who practiced a moderate lifestyle including maintaining a stable, normal body weight.

P.S. One of the healthiest ways to lose weight and keep it off is through regular exercise, not regular dieting.

Many people need medical assistance when it comes to creating a diet and exercise regimen that matches your lifestyle. We can inform you of what adjustments you can make in your diet and exercise to best maintain your health. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE (472-2550), we offer complete health care with a focus on heart problems and their prevention. We are conveniently located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. Call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli with questions. Office hours are by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

4 Seek Asst. City Clerk Job

Quincy's new assistant City Clerk will be selected from an unusually small field of four applicants.

The job, which pays $30,541 to start and goes to $34,489 after 10 years under the current salary schedule, was held by popular Patricia Toland who died Sept. 7 at age 62 after a long, courageous battle with cancer.

City Clerk Joseph Shea has interviewed the four candidates whom he declined to identify by name in fairness to them because all four are current city employees.

The four, he acknowledged, are members of the Quincy Employees Clerical Union 925.

They are currently employed in the Assessor's office, the City Clerk's office, the Police Department and the Water Department office. The Police Department civilian employee is the lone male applicant.

The City Clerk office applicant is not Josephine Carnali, long-time secretary and right arm to former City Clerk John Gillis and now Shea. She no doubt could have had the job if she wanted it but is not interested in it at this point in her career.

Two members of the City Council reportedly had expressed interest in the job but did not pursue it.

Shea will recommend one of the four to the City Council for confirmation. The city clerk and assistant city clerk are appointees of the City Council.

He says he expects to make his recommendation for approval by the City Council by Nov. 21.

QUINCY'S HANK BRADLEY, American Legion state commander, will be honored at a testimonial dinner Saturday, Nov. 19 at Lantana, Randolph.

BRADLEY

Bradley, who is Quincy's Veterans Services officer, was elected and installed state commander at the American Legion Massachusetts Department convention in Plymouth in June.

Bradley is a member and past commander of Morrisette Legion Post and a past Norfolk County Legion commander.

In addition to his Legion involvement, Bradley is also very active on the local community front.

It was at his suggestion that the Quincy, Mass. to Quincy, Ill. fund-raising effort was launched during last year's terrible Midwest floods. Some 140 tons of food along with $23,000 was shipped to sister city Quincy, Ill. to help residents through their ordeal.

Bradley is also involved with the Pantry Shelf to assist those in need of food. He is also a fund-raiser coordinator for the American Cancer Society and a member of the Shriners Committee to raise funds to treat children suffering from burns.

Committee co-chairmen for the dinner are John (Jake) Comer (471-3534), Larry Connors (472-6546) and Tim Sullivan (762-0399).

Comer, of course, is Past National Commander of the American Legion. And many think that Hank Bradley may be a future one.

NICE PERSON DEPT.: To some who don't really know him, George Parker, owner of the Yellow Cab Co. in Quincy might seem like a bit on the tough, gruff side. But he's a softie at heart—and a generous one—when it comes to kids in need.

I first got to know George back in 1976 when The Sun became the Quincy-South Shore pledge center for the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Labor Day telethon.

And every Labor Day for the next 10 years, George dropped by with two checks, a $400 personal one and a $400 company one to help Jerry's Kids.

The pledge center and committee raised over $1 million in those 10 years. With the help of people like George.

Because of space limitations, the pledge center is no longer at the Sun. That hasn't stopped George from coming by each year with two $400 checks.

He recently brought in two more which have been forwarded to MDA.

If our arithmetic is correct, George has donated something like $14,400 to help fight muscular dystrophy.

George will be surprised—and probably embarrassed—when he sees this item. He has been doing this good deed without fanfare for 18 years. So I decided it was time to spill the beans on him.

Sorry, George, you old softie.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD was an advertising card for the Purity Lunch which was located at 73 East Howard St. across from the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. Claus Samuelson shown here with his wife, Lavina, operated this store for 20 years until the late 1930's when the building was demolished to allow for the widening of the road. Samuelson who has immigrated to the United States in 1903, then became a sexton at the Faith Lutheran Church until he died in the early 1950's. In addition to the fresh Ferguson bread, the store also sold fresh milk which was delivered in the cans on the right. Note the 'Chew Copenhagen snuff' sign.

Fabrizio 'Not Interested' In Council-At-Large, Appointment

Editor, The Quincy Sun

Recent speculation in Henry Bosworth's Sunbeams column suggesting I might be interested in a high-level City job offer or a seat as Councillor-at-Large is totally unfounded.

I am not seeking, nor would I accept, either position. Since 1990, I have had the high honor of representing the people of Ward 4 as their City Councillor.

Recently, the people of Ward 4 have witnessed the completion and dedication of three major projects -- the expansion of the Charles A. Bernazzani School, the opening of the new Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center and Ward 4 Community Center, and also the unveiling of the Granite Workers' Memorial at Shea Park.

Although much has been accomplished, a number of new and exciting projects are on the horizon in Ward 4. Renovations to area playgrounds and parks, the opening of a new southwest Quincy ambulance substation (the first neighborhood station opened by the City ambulance contractor), public safety improvements and the expansion of the Quincy Police Athletic League are some of the projects I have been working on.

While I am honored that Mr. Bosworth has indicated that I might be a good candidate for advancement, I would like to make it clear that my plan is to continue to work closely with the people of Ward 4 to improve City services and the quality of life in South and West Quincy.

We Do Not Gain When We Boost Shopping Hours

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

People's right to choose when to shop is contested as hotly as a woman's right to choose. We are a consumer society; we are good at it, maybe too good.

We do not gain when we boost available shopping hours. On the contrary, we lose. Germany enjoys great success with a 28-hour work week. They are adamant about preserving their lives outside of work. Not long ago in Germany there was harsh worker backlash when retail stores proposed staying open until 8 p.m. on Thursday only. They reason that people can plan for what they need. We, on the other hand, can't wait for much. The novelty of a 24-hour service wore off long ago, and instead became a standard of measure.

Who will work Sundays? This question can't help but beg for problems in employer-employee relations. It can't help but provide opportunity for family-time splintering. Where car dealers did a brisk Saturday business they now do two moderate days' business: no gain. We have to burn resources to open longer hours. Shouldn't we cut back instead? Worker dissatisfaction drives turnover rates. This raises the cost of doing business, which of course we all pay.

I hope you voted no on Question 5.

Marie's Kitchen

Ravioli Lasagne

Although I have prepared lasagne in many ways, from the conventional way with the flat noodles, to vegetables layered with it to lazy man's lasagne, this new way uses ravioli as the pasta and it is the ultimate best.

My friend Dell told me about it and I immediately spread the news. The next day our daughter Nancy prepared it and gave me a taste. So delicious and easy because it eliminates having to prepare the ricotta cheese since it's already in the ravioli.

The following recipe feeds about six persons (or four extra hungry ones.)

RAVIOLE LASAGNE

2 packages of ravioli (60 to a package) tomato sauce (about a quart or two depending on how you desire it) 1 large package of shredded mozzarella or cheddar cheese or a combination of both.

grated cheese

Prepare raviolis according to directions. On the bottom of a slightly greased baking pan, place some tomato sauce. Add cooked ravioli in a layer, then more sauce, the shredded cheese and grated cheese. Layer until done and top it off with more shredded cheese and sauce. Bake in a 350 degree oven covered for about 20 minutes and uncovered for 10 more minutes until bubbly. Let cool for a few minutes and it cuts in perfect squares. I know that's what our family will be having at the start of our Christmas dinner.

250 Attend Quincy Point Junior High Reunion

Alumni from the 1930s to 1960s attended a Quincy Point Junior High School Reunion held recently at the Fore River Clubhouse.

Approximately 250 people enjoyed a fun-filled evening of seeing old friends, reliving fond memories and dancing. The Clubhouse was decorated in the former school's colors of green and white, along with past photos and memorabilia.

Those attending the event also raised $1,000 for a scholarship that will go to a Quincy Point resident graduating high school and going on to college. The scholarship, which will be an ongoing effort, has been named "The Quincy Point Memorial Scholarship" in memory of friends and family members originally from Quincy Point who have passed away.

Those wishing to contribute to this year's scholarship, which will be presented at the Quincy High Scholarship Awards Night in the spring, may send a check payable to "Quincy Point Reunion" to Donna Bertrand, 30 Harrington Ave., Quincy, 02169, or Rosemary Nolan, 50 Baxter St., Quincy, 02169.

Due to the overwhelming success of the reunion, consideration is being given to holding the event again next year.

The Reunion Committee gives special thanks to the following for their support and contributions which helped make the event a success:

The Quincy Park Department, the Fore River Clubhouse, photographer Robert Noble, caterer Frank Brillo, D.J. Jack McTiernan, Bill Morrill of Creative Fairs, Mullaney's Variety, The Quincy Sun, Continental Cablevision and WJDA Radio.

WJDA Airing Program On 'Letters Of Abigail Adams'

In honor of her 250th birthday, WJDA has created and will air a special program entitled, "The Letters of Abigail Adams: The Revolutionary War Years."

The program will air five times daily through Nov. 18 and is made up of excerpts from the letters Abigail wrote to her husband John while he was a member of the Continental Congress in Philadelphia.

The program has a distinct local flavor. Listeners will hear Abigail describing the war from Penn's Hill; how men were called to serve from Milton, Braintree, Weymouth and Hingham; how the militia protected the Harbor Islands from British soldiers; how British ships were anchored off Great Hill in Weymouth; and what it was like to live in Boston under martial law.

It is a fascinating account of war, as it happened, right here on the South Shore.

WJDA has also scheduled guests on Partyline program to talk about Abigail Adams and her contributions to the South Shore.

Tune in to NewsInfo 1300 WJDA throughout the coming weeks and celebrate the birth of this influential First Lady and advocate for women's rights.

It is a fascinating account of war, as it happened, right here on the South Shore.

Quincy Hospital CEO Ralph DiPisa:

Balancing Fiscal Health With Patient Care

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. What's the transition from Brockton Hospital to Quincy Hospital been like your first couple of months on the job?

A. Actually, the transition from one institution to the other, from Brockton Hospital to Quincy Hospital, has been fairly easy. Both institutions are roughly the same size; they operate in the same state, so I'm familiar with the regulations, and the complexity is roughly the same. So that part of it's been fairly easy.

The other side of it, the human resource side of it—meeting all the new people within the institution: the employees, the medical staff, the management team, the board; and outside the institution, mainly the community—is new. It takes time to learn who people are, and to make connections with their affiliations. So it's a little overwhelming at times, but I'm sure in a few months I'll feel like I've known everyone for a long time.

Q. Have you found any major differences between the two hospitals?

A. Well, basically, the cities are very different. They're roughly the same size, but demographically, economically I think there's major differences between the two cities. The institutions, though, are roughly the same size: Brockton Hospital has 300 beds, Quincy Hospital has 290 beds. We will be offering at Quincy roughly the same menu of services that Brockton Hospital offers; radiation therapy and cardiac catheterization are two of the newer services that Quincy will be providing, and Brockton offers those as well.

The one really distinct service (at Brockton) was the teaching program; Brockton Hospital was a teaching hospital affiliated with Boston University Medical Center, and though Quincy Hospital is not, it is something that's being explored with BU.

Q. Ellen Zane was very well-liked in the city, and credited with turning the hospital's financial situation around. What's it like replacing her as director?

A. (Smiles.) A very difficult task. I would say it's basically impossible to replace Ellen Zane. I was only in Brockton, so I was not far away, and was able to observe all the positive changes and positive momentum that developed under Ellen's leadership at Quincy Hospital. My hope is not to replace Ellen, but to come in and build upon that positive momentum, that attempt to move Quincy Hospital forward and into the future.

Q. After Ellen left, you were chosen for the director's position from a field of about 150 candidates and ultimately six finalists. That's quite an honor.

A. Yes, it is quite an honor, and I'm relatively young, or people tell me that I'm relatively young (smiles), for a position like this, although I assure you I've had plenty of years in the business. But it is quite an honor, and I know that because the network of hospitals in the state and in the region is fairly small, I knew most of the people, or many of the people, who were competing for the position. So I certainly was very happy to be selected.

Q. You've been credited with helping to stabilize the financial status of Brockton Hospital, much like Ellen Zane did here.

A. Well, when I joined Brockton Hospital in 1990, I was part of a new management team that was coming in and replaced a management team that had been there for many, many years. The agenda, when I arrived at Brockton Hospital, was changed, and that was the game plan. So we made many changes with the infrastructure of people, and by virtue of that we also got into a program of cost containment and cost reduction. And over the next several years, as chief operating officer, a great deal of my time was spent on trying to reduce our cost per day, and our cost per admission. And by virtue of that, we went to a position-personnel attrition

FULL NAME: Ralph DiPisa

AGE: 37

ADDRESS: Wrentham

OCCUPATION: director of Quincy Hospital since Sept. 6. Previously served in a number of positions from 1981 to 1990 at St. Anne's Hospital in Fall River, leaving as chief operating officer; later served as chief operating officer of Brockton Hospital from 1990 to August of this year.

EDUCATION: graduated from Hasbrouck Heights High School in New Jersey, received bachelor's degree in health services administration from Providence College, received master's degree in health care administration from George Washington University.

FAMILY: married to the former Tricia Harrison. They have three children: Brian, 6; Matthew, 4 and Christopher, 2.

program, as well as some major supply cost reduction programs.

I'd like to just add, though, that coming into Quincy is a very different time. The agenda is not for change, in terms of the operational infrastructure. The agenda is for building upon the successes of the last several years and moving the organization forward.

Q. What are some of your immediate plans for the hospital, and what are some of your long-range plans?

A. In terms of short-range plans, it's really to transition in as quickly and as effectively as possible. Because so many things are running well, and moving forward, I want to begin to understand the systems we use here, the way business is conducted. To get out, and meet the medical staff, meet the staff, within the institution. To understand the community. To get up to speed on where the institution is vis-a-vis its strategic plan. And I view those as short-term issues.

Long-term—and long-term is not that far out these days because the health care business is changing so rapidly—it's to position Quincy Hospital in this new restructured health care reform environment that will allow Quincy to continue to be successful, to continue to provide services in a leadership way in this community.

Q. What does your daily routine, your typical day, consist of now?

A. A stop at Dunkin' Donuts at about 7:15 in the morning for a cup of coffee (laughs). We have a Dunkin' Donuts shop right in the lobby of the hospital, which is terrific. But I've been in the community at several meetings, meeting the leadership from the community. I've met with the mayor and with some of the city councillors. I've met with the medical staff, and I'll continue to do that, as well as the staff within the institution. I think I'm still on a pace of meeting a lot of people.

Additionally, and concurrently, I have to get up to speed on a vast number of issues and initiatives that the institution has been involved in over the last several years. So it's been intense update and saying hello to a lot of people (smiles).

Q. In terms of the present financial picture at the hospital, would you like to see any changes made?

A. Well, the health care industry has changed significantly in the last several years. Certainly when I came into the business—the health care field for 14 years ago—we were considered a service industry attempting to provide health care services to all corners and to the best of our ability. We still continue to do that, but the business aspect of health care has finally entered the fray. Because during that 14-year period, a dozen or so hospitals in Massachusetts have failed and have closed. And there's tremendous pressure to consolidate a number of facilities as utilization rates and utilization trends continue to drop. So the word "business" has really entered the picture in a much greater way.

So I have to be concerned about the overall viability and the financial success of the institution. At the same time, we've got to balance that with still providing the service that people in this community have come to know and expect. And we still need to expand with initiatives like radiation therapy and the cardiac cath lab. So it's a balance, and financial success is very important for this institution and this community, and I will continually try to balance the issue of providing services and meeting the need in the community with having a financially healthy institution.

Q. The hospital is owned by the city, but managed by Quorum Health Resources of Waltham. Why is that?

A. Many municipally-owned institutions have found that running health care institutions is very complex these days, and there are programs in hospital administration similar to the ones I went through in Providence and George Washington University that train people especially in those areas. And in the state of Massachusetts, there's about 85 to 90 hospitals, and so there's not a lot of people trained in that area that would be living in the state. And I believe that a city looks for a way of providing the best possible management for its institution. In Quincy, they've turned to a management company, Quorum Health Resources, to go out and find them the best people they can to manage these facilities. So it's common, I think, in municipally-owned hospitals, to look for that kind of expertise.

Q. You're a Wrentham resident. What have you learned about Quincy, and do you have any plans to move here?

A. First of all, I think it's a wonderful city. I'm very impressed with it; I think there is truly a strong working relationship that exists between the local business community and the people in the community. It's been very positive; the Quincy 2000 program, as I've come to understand it, has been extremely successful, and I know there's that sense in the community as well.

In terms of where my wife and I live, we have three small children, and we feel this is a good time to make a move. And we will be moving, hopefully closer to Quincy, maybe in Quincy, but we really haven't finalized that yet.

Q. What do you enjoy most in life?

A. I enjoy my family most of all (smiles). I've been married for 11 years, and I have three great kids. As much time as I can spend with them is not enough in my eyes, and that's the greatest enjoyment in my life. I think a close second is my professional career; as much as I'm still trying to fit it all together and piece it all together at Quincy, I must say I really enjoy being director of Quincy Hospital.

 Homeowner*

Martin and Shirley Morey were living in an apartment where nothing ever got fixed unless they did it themselves. And owning a home had always been just a dream that would remain one for years to come. But then, Martin and Shirley came to Fleet and learned how they could get a mortgage at a rate they could afford with only a small down payment required. Today, they're homeowners. That's the kind of thinking that's at the heart of our INCITY program for people and communities in need. INCITY has set aside $8 billion for loans to people just like Martin and Shirley Morey - the most comprehensive lending commitment ever made by any financial institution in the country. And the program to date has already made over 27000 loans totaling $1.6 billion. So if you'd like to participate in the Fleet INCITY program, call 1-800-CALL-FLEET (1-800-225-5353). MAYOR JAMES SHEETS, who proclaimed Sunday as Ted DeCristofaro Day, congratulates the Ward 2 councillor at ceremony naming a Quincy Point park in his honor.

"I LOVE MY WORK," Councillor Ted DeCristofaro tells the crowd of near 200 that attended the dedication ceremony Sunday.

Park Named For Ted DeCristofaro A Special Honor For A Quincy Point Legend

By HENRY BOSWORTH

It's now Theodore DeCristofaro Park, a special honor for a man who is as much a Quincy Point legend as the Fore River Bridge is a Quincy Point landmark.

Appropriately, the mini-park at Southern Artery, Baxter Ave. and Washington St. is on the site he led the fight to keep from becoming a gas station or fast food stand.

And, appropriately, it is located just up the street from the Murdock Ave., family homestead where he was born 71 years ago, grew up and lived most of his adult life.

Little did he realize that when the land was donated to the city by Arthur Simon, and the park built in 1987 and dedicated to the residents of Quincy Point that one day it would bear his name.

And he never realized it during the many hours he spent there since, planting flowers, yanking weeds, mowing the grass and sweeping the brick walk.

But, on Sunday, he realized it.

With family, friends, city and state officials and clergy—nearly 200 in all looking on, he and Betty, his wife and childhood sweetheart were asked to unveil the bronze plaque atop a steel pole.

When the bunting came down and he saw the words "Theodore DeCristofaro Park", his tears came down, too.

"I'm overwhelmed," said DeCristofaro, who has represented his beloved Quincy Point and Ward 2 in the City Council since 1982. "This is unbelievable."

And, as the rain began to fall, he stood there without a hat or coat, shifting credit for the park from himself to others.

THE BRONZE PLAQUE behind City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro and his wife, Betty, proclaims the park as Theodore DeCristofaro Park.

"I love working here," he said. I enjoy it. I wish everybody could be honored for doing what they enjoy."

Earlier, Mayor James Sheets praised DeCristofaro as "the kind of public servant upon which cities are built, upon which states are built and upon which countries are built."

"Ted and h is family are the building blocks that have made us what we are today."

Sheets noted that DeCristofaro never had political aspirations beyond Ward 2 councillor. "The only thing, I want to do, he told me "is to represent the people of Quincy Point."

But, said Sheets, as Mayor, he was declaring Sunday Ted DeCristofaro Day not only in Quincy Point, but in the entire

City of Quincy."

Sheets also spoke of the close personal friendship that has developed between him, his wife, Joann, and DeCristofaro and his wife, Betty. Sheets also added: "My wife Joann, and I are blessed by the friendship with Betty and Ted. Joann and I both love you from the depth of our hearts."

DeCristofaro stood to give Sheets a hug.

City Council President Michael Cheney presented DeCristofaro with a City Council commendation and paid tribute to him as a family man and one "who has had a model public life."

There were State House presentations from Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Ron Mariano, Steve Tobin and Michael Bellotti and a gift from Mary Timcoe, representing the Quincy Veteran's Council.

Fr. Daniel Riley, associate pastor of St. Joseph's Church, one of five members of the clergy participating, kiddingly recalled that when he came to that church he thought DeCristofaro was Catholic because of his name.

"There is no one more generous than Ted DeCristofaro," he said. "When you need help, you turn to Ted."

And, he joked: "We'd still like to convert you."

Rev. Carol Atwood-Lyon, co-pastor of Quincy Point Congregational Church which DeCristofaro attends, said she was pleasantly surprised to find he was a member of that church.

There were also tributes from, her husband and co-pastor, Rev. Fred Atwood-Lyon, Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue and Iman Talal Eid of the New England Islamic Center.

Dennis Sweeney, president of the Ward 2 Civic Association that sponsored the dedication ceremony presented a gift and said: "Without Ted there would be no Ward 2 Civic Association."

John Bagen, an active member of the Ward 2 Association who helps DeCristofaro keep the park tidy, was the emcee for the ceremony.

And typical, he noted

"This morning, Ted and Betty were waiting on tables at 1000 Southern Artery."

Among those attending the ceremony were fellow City Councillors Tim Cahill, Joseph LaRaia, Peter Kolson, Thomas Fabrizio, Lawrence Chretien and Bruce Ayers, School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymondi, Police Chief Francis Mullen, former Senator Paul Harold, City Clerk Joseph Shea, Norfolk County Commissioner and former City Clerk John Gillis, Thomas Koch, executive secretary to Mayor Sheets, Raymond Cattaneo, executive secretary Park-Forest-Cemeteries Department; Recreation Director Barry Welch, George Page of the Park Department, Peter Kenney, former executive secretary to Mayor Francis McCauley, former School Committeeman Charles Sweeny, Frank Kearns, Quincy Housing Authority Commissioner and Rosemary Wahlberg, former QHA commissioner.

The ceremony committee was comprised of Robert LaFleur, Phyllis Bagen and Owen Eaton.

It was a day to remember for Ted DeCristofaro and for Quincy Point.

LEASING IN INCREASING NUMBERS

The fact that the monthly benefit of relieving you of the payments associated with leasing an automobile compare favorably with the payments on a car loan has led increasing numbers of Americans to lease their cars. Consider that, with the average cost of a new car at about the $18,000 level, it would cost almost $990 per month with $2,000 down and a 7.5 percent loan over four years to own the "average" car. For the same monthly cost, it is possible to lease a car in the luxury class. A lease can also be applied to a decidedly less expensive car to come up with a very reasonable monthly payment. Either way, one out of every four people who drives a new car out of a showroom is choosing to lease, to account for 1.7 million people annually.

HINT: Leasing offers the MBTA To Relocate Quincy Center Office

located at 1515 Hancock St., the site of the former Remick's clothing store.

Mader said Marquis told her that the MBTA plans to move the four offices to a site near the Transportation Building, which contains a number of the T's employees, by sometime next spring. After three to five years, the MBTA hopes to move all of its employees into a single location in Boston, she added.

A recent advertisement in another newspaper confirms the plan. The ad states that the MBTA is currently seeking approximately 36,000 to 40,000 square feet in the South Station/State Transportation Building area.

Mader said she had hoped Quincy could bid on any new headquarters the MBTA planned to open. However, she noted that the T's policy decision—which she said was made by new MBTA Assistant General Manager of Construction Howard Hawood—was to keep the headquarters in Boston.

"I can't say I'm not disappointed," said Mader.

Mader, who serves as the city's liaison to the MBTA Advisory Board, said the T has an FY94 operating budget of $424.7 million. She could not say how much money the MBTA plans to save by the consolidation.

Sheets said he is not concerned about finding a new tenant for the Remick's site, saying that Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation, is constantly in touch with a number of potential tenants for the downtown area.

"I don't think we'd have a problem bringing someone in there," said the mayor.

The Philco Finance Corp. is the current owner of the Remick's site, according to Board of Assessors Chairman Marion Fantucchio. While she did not have an address for the company, she said that the loss of such a small office should not impact Quincy Center.

The Old Colony Railroad is scheduled to open by Dec. 31, 1996. Mader noted that during an appearance she made before the City Council last July, the council agreed to appropriate about $40,000 to pay for a study to determine the engineering components and cost estimates of a Quincy Center Old Colony Station. Results of that study will be available in two to three weeks, she said.

Sterling Task Force Meeting

The new Sterling Middle School Task Force was scheduled to hold its first meeting yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m. in the Superintendent of Schools Conference Room, Quincy Public Schools Main Office, Coddington St., Quincy.

for the remaining $71 million was strong. The state received more than 2,100 requests for funding to do an estimated $220 million worth of repairs at 193 housing authorities statewide, and the QHA was one of 137 authorities that received money, he said.

However, Comer added that only 10 of the QHA's

52 requests were filled. As examples of projects that did not get funded, he cited handicapped-accessible laundry rooms at Crowley Court and Louis George Village, the oldest public housing developments in the city as well as new security measures for Sawyer and Tobin towers.

The QHA is also currently in the middle of renovations to its federally-funded units, Comer said. He noted that it has received $8 million to spend over a five-year period on new bathrooms, kitchens and windows at the Riverview family apartments in Germantown, as well as three apartment buildings for the elderly including Drohan Apartments, O'Brien Towers and Pagnano Towers.

CASE STUDY

MAN HAS RUN-IN WITH WALL

A young man sought chiropractic treatment after he, literally, had a run-in with a wall. Having taken up swimming for recreation, the fellow was enjoying an intense session of lap swimming. Unaware that he was nearing the side of the pool, he propelled himself head first into the wall. The impact snapped his neck down, thrusting his head forward until his chin reached his chest. The injuries sustained were torn neck muscles and ligaments, stiffness, headache, nausea and mild tingling in the right arm. A traditional medical approach to this young man's condition would probably involve drugs, muscle relaxers and pain killers. The side effects of these drugs would be drowsiness, inability to think clearly, and warnings against driving.

The doctor of chiropractic who treated the young man took another approach, an approach that was natural, drugless, and non-surgical. He designed an intense, six-week treatment plan utilizing ultrasound, electrical muscle stimulation, intermittent motorized traction, soft cervical collar and manipulation when appropriate. At the end of four months, the young swimmer was completely recovered.

CHIROPRACTIC WORKS-NO DRUGS-NO SURGERY. Dr. Barry Freedman has been the Director of FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC for the past 15 years, with offices at 112 McGrath Highway, Quincy Center. He is President of the Massachusetts Chiropractic Society, teaches nutrition at Massachusetts Community College and lectures extensively at many organizations and schools, including Harvard University School of Medicine and Boston University School of Nursing. If you have any question about chiropractic or need information about lectures for your organization please call Dr. Freedman's office at 472-4220.

$225,000 Appropriated To Replace Sewer-Water System At The Strand

The City Council has appropriated $225,000 for the construction of a new sewer and drain system for the area near Wollaston Beach known as The Strand.

The money for the project was taken from the city's Sewer Rehabilitation Fund.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said Monday night the current system at the site, which includes part of Quincy Shore Drive and other area streets, is the lowest in the city. It has caused a number of problems for the neighborhood, including pollution of Wollaston Beach and flooding, he said.

Colton said the project calls for the complete replacement of both the sewer and drain systems, including the pumping stations. The work will begin as soon as possible, he added.

The Sewer Rehabilitation Fund was created in the 1980s when Mayor James Sheets, then a city councillor, wrote an ordinance requiring anyone obtaining a building permit from the city to contribute 1 percent of construction costs to the improvement of city sewers. The fund, which can only be used for sewer and drain improvements, has been tapped several times in subsequent years, according to Colton.

City Auditor Robert Foy said with the appropriation of the $225,000, a total of $425,518 remains in the fund.

Interfaith Sheltering Coalition Sponsoring Homeless Awareness Week

The Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition will sponsor Homeless Awareness Week in Quincy beginning Monday, Nov. 14 with a reception from noon to 2 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library's Gallery.

The reception will mark the unveiling of a photo exhibit entitled, "The Faces of Homelessness," a black-and-white study of guests at Fr. Bill's Shelter. The exhibit is the work of J. David Congalton of Pembroke. Additional artwork by Roland Barnes and formerly homeless artist, Valerie Greenhill, will be featured.

On Wednesday, Nov. 16, a forum entitled "Homeless on the South Shore" will be held from 2:30 to 4 p.m. at Eastern Nazarene College, Shrader Hall, Room 15, near the corner of Wendell and Sachem Sts.

The forum will focus on local homelessness problems and long-term solutions. The panel will feature several of the community's most knowledgeable and experienced advocates for the homeless.

Grade school students of the Lincoln-Hancock School, under the director of teacher Steve Cantelli, will have skits and presentations on homelessness in Quincy throughout the week. They also are using the week to close their garden. Lincoln-Hancock School, through its garden program, provides fresh vegetables in season to Fr. Bill's Place.

QUINCY DEFENSIVE BACK Mike Sheffer knocks a pass away from a Silver Lake receiver. The 5-foot-7 inch Sheffer has played like a giant on the corner all season. He leads the team in deflected passes.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL'S brutish 230-pound tailback, Sam Brown, drags a Silver Lake defender into the end zone for his second touchdown of the game late in the second half. Brown leads the Presidents with 973 yards rushing and 10 touchdowns.

Hope For Repeat Of Last Year Against Barnstable

Quincy Back In Win Column, 34-12

By KERRY BYRNE

A 34-12 win over Silver Lake (0-8) could be just what the doctor ordered for the injury-riddled Quincy High football team.

The Presidents (4-4) were bumped and bruised badly in their previous three games against New Bedford (8-0), Weymouth (5-3) and Falmouth (7-1). New Bedford and Falmouth are likely Super Bowl teams while Weymouth was all but eliminated from post-season play with a 21-13 loss Friday to Falmouth.

"We came out of this [Silver Lake] game with-out injuries," said Quincy High coach Jack Raymer. "That's probably the best thing we could have happen going into the final two weeks."

Quincy plays another Super Bowl contender Friday when the Barnstable Red Raiders (5-3 overall, 5-1 OCL) come to town. Last season the Presidents ended Barnstable's Super Bowl hopes with an impressive 42-28 win on the road. It was the most awesome offensive show by a Quincy team in many years.

The Red Raiders of the Cape lost their only league game this season to the Red Raiders of North Quincy. Shawn Nee's last-minute field goal gave NQ an 11-9 win.

Terry Bowman got the Presidents going against Silver Lake when he returned the opening kickoff 80 yards for a touchdown. Touchdown runs by Sam Brown (1 and 3 yards), plus his two-point conversion and a Jeff Russell kick gave Quincy a 21-6 lead at the half.

In the second half Quincy scored when line-backer Ed Anderson returned an intercepted pass 25 yards for a TD and when Greg Santoro went up the middle from 3 yards out. Russell kicked successfully after Santoro's run to close out the President score sheet.

The Lakers scored on a 15-yard pass from quarterback Chris Robinson to Louis Chighisola in the second quarter and on a 22-yard run by Jim Mulcahy in the fourth quarter. One- and two-point conversion efforts were unsuccessful.

"This wasn't a perfect game by any means," said Raymer. "But it was a win and I'm happy the way the kids played. We go against a tough Barnstable team next week. The most important thing is that we should be back at full strength."

Raymer was pleased that his offense got on track after three weeks of unimpressive play. Sophomore quarterback Mark Glynn skillfully led the President attack. Although he didn't post big numbers, he did connect on two long pass plays to senior tight ends Mike Flagg (36 yards) and Martin Cloonan (31 yards) that set up short touchdown runs by Brown and Santoro. Cloonan looked sharp as he reached behind himself to catch the ball on the run and then raced down field before getting caught at the 1-yard line.

Santoro and Anderson filled in extremely well at fullback in the place of junior Bill Dunn who missed practice all week due to sickness. Dunn did man his middle linebacker spot.

Dunn and the Quincy defense displayed the tenacity they have shown in all but one game this season as they held the Laker offense to 130 total yards and four first downs. "The defense played well. Bent a little, but did not break. Really, they've been great all year except for that Falmouth game (a 42-8 loss)," said Raymer.

Defensive tackle Jason Bennett made two stops in the Laker backfield. Mike Feeley, Chris McArdle, Dunn and Anderson also made tackles behind the line of scrimmage. Safety Matt Miller made the hit of the game when he completely flipped Silver Lake running back Tucker Apple. Flagg caused, and recovered, a fumble by Apple and also blocked a punt which set up Brown's first touchdown. Bowman had one interception. Mike Sheffer has proved Quincy's top defensive back this season and again deflected a number of passes.

Brown, Anderson, Bennett, Sheffer and Dunn are all Quincy starters who have seen limited practice time the past several weeks because of injuries or sickness.

Barnstable At A Glance

Record: 5-3. 5-1 OCL. Beat Plymouth South, 17-14, last week on a last-second field goal. Have won four straight after last-minute loss to NQ Oct. 7.

Coach: Paul Demanche (sixth year, 37-20-1).

Previous Meeting: Quincy beat Barnstable, 42-28 last season, knocking the then 6-2-1 Red Raiders out of the Super Bowl.

Offense: Senior QB Micky Fein is arguably the best in the league. However, he is without a great target. After a slow start, the offense came alive in wins over Silver Lake, B-R and Taunton, but struggled last week.

Fein burnt the B-R defense in a 28-14 comeback win.

Score 17.9 points per game.

Defense: The Red Raiders were one of only two teams this season to hold powerful B-R to under 20 points when they handed them their first loss of the year three weeks ago.

Give up 11.6 ppg.

Player to Watch: Fein.

North Girls Set Sights On Fourth State Title

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

With the Old Colony League co-championship under their belts, the North Quincy High School girls' volleyball team is aiming at their next goal - their fourth Div. 1 state title in eight years.

The sixth-seeded Red Raiders (14-6) opened tournament play Tuesday (Nov. 8), hosting No. 3 seed Charlestown (10-2) in an East-Central Sectional quarterfinal match. A win puts North in the semifinals. The sectional final takes place Saturday night at Eastern Nazarene College.

"I think teams should still be afraid of us," said Red Raider head coach Jim Rendle. "We got better as the season progressed and we're playing our best volleyball right now."

North shared the OCL championship with Barnstable, the team that beat the Red Raiders in last year's state semifinal.

North's schedule wasn't an easy one. All six of their losses (the most since 1985) came against teams considered among the best in the state. North is regarded as one of the five best teams in the state. "It's a pretty good feather in our cap to be considered with those other teams though we have six losses," said Rendle.

Highlights during the regular season included two tough matches against New Bedford; a season sweep of cross-town rival Quincy; a split against defending state champion Barnstable (the visiting team won each time); and two season-ending wins over traditional state powers Milford and Medway.

Some of the leading individual performers on this "much improved" team include juniors Sara Stanton and Linda Jellison. Both middle hitters are very strong and have showed dominance at the end of the regular season. Jen Teahan and Amy Li are also top players.

"These are two very intelligent players and we rely on them a lot to unify the team and communicate," said the coach. Stanton, Jellison, Teahan and Li were all named to the OCL all-star team.

Sophomore setter Kerry Ginty, another improving player, has a "better understanding of the game and is playing with confidence," according to coach Rendle.

Another sophomore is outside hitter Erica Crawford, who started the season inexperienced but is now ready to compete at the statewide level.

Co-captain Amy Detwiler and defensive specialist Karen Shea also see a great deal of varsity action. Outside hitter Detwiler is a has the ability to play wherever she is needed. Shea can dig, pass and cover the floor. She is one of the best in the state at keeping the ball off the floor.

Kerry Jellison, a sophomore outside hitter, was playing well until a broken wrist put her out of action in mid-season. She could be back during the tournament.

Junior outside hitter Rachel Repoff has seen action in both varsity and JV matches this season. She continues to improve and will be ready for action in the tournament.

Defensive specialists include seniors Kim and Nghan Ho, Amber Maher and Meaghan Roche. All are fine leaders who help keep the team together.

Maryanne Patch, a junior outside hitter, has the ability to play all positions and can do anything coach Rendle needs.

Senior outside hitter Missy Roberts is an experienced player who sees a great deal of playing time.

"We don't have any standout individual performers this year," said Rendle. "Every match is a team effort."

Rendle's assistant coaches are Kipp Caldwell, the JV coach, and Jill (Caldwell) Dean, the freshmen coach. Jill was co-captain on North Quincy's first volleyball state championship team in 1987.

North Places Second In E. Mass State Finals

The North Quincy High School golf team closed out one of their best seasons in 40 years with a second place finish in the Div. 1 Eastern Mass. state finals.

The Red Raider links-men were edged by Braintree High. The Wamps finished behind North Quincy when the Red Raiders won the South Sectional two weeks ago.

"Had it been another day we may have won the whole thing," said a very pleased coach Rick Hutchins. "But it's not a time to look at maybes. I'm happy we had such a great season."

North finished just seven strokes behind the champions with a final score of 333, eight ahead of Andover High and Westford Academy who tied for third. The score is an aggregate of the number of strokes posted by the top four golfers from each school.

The Red Raiders were led in the state finals by the superb play of seniors Chris Geary, Keith Cross and Brendan O'Brien. Geary finished fourth individually with a score of 76 for 18 holes; Cross placed 11th with an 82; and O'Brien shot an 86, good enough for 14th in the state.

The three were unanimously named to the Old Colony League all-star team Monday and each boy is being looked at by Division I college golf programs.

Senior Steve Heroux

also shot well in the finals with a score of 89. Sophomore Brian Degan and senior Dave Doherty also competed for North Quincy in the tournament.

With only 14 golfers on the squad, NQ was the smallest program competing in the state tournament. OCL opponents such as Barnstable and Falmouth have upwards of 50 golfers on their teams.

The Red Raiders placed second in the OCL this season with a record of 13-3.

Red Raiders Halted By Trojans 28-10

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

The North Quincy High School football team expected a tough game at Bridgewater-Raynham Saturday. They got it as the Trojans handed the Raiders a 28-10 loss.

North (5-3) travels to Taunton (4-4) Friday for an Old Colony League match-up. The Red Raiders won last year's meeting, 26-0.

"This [B-R] was a very good football team we played here tonight," said North Quincy head coach Ken McPhee. "They proved to be very tough, but we had some good performances on our side."

One individual standout on offense was senior Derek Epps. He had his finest game, capped by a 91-yard kickoff return for a touchdown, North's only of the day.

Epps also had a great game receiving, catching five passes from quarterback Sean Dolbear for 110 yards. Epps intercepted a Trojan pass in the third quarter.

The Raider ground game was put to a halt with only 53 yards on the ground. Shawn Nee ran for only 40 yards on 8 carries. Although Nee did not score a touchdown for the first time this season, he did get on the scoreboard with a 22-yard field goal in the first half.

Some North defenders also had fine games. McPhee had high praise for Epps, Dave Carney, Gerry Fernandez and Tim Zaniboni.

B-R started fast, taking a 14-0 lead in the first quarter. John Ferrari ended the Trojans' opening drive by running the ball in from the two. Steve Medeiros added his first of four extra points. With 2:52 left, Derek Lennon (115 yards, 15 carries) scored from 29 yards out for the 14-0 lead.

Dolbear, who had his finest game of the year with 11 completions on 23 passes for 169 yards, completed all four of his passes in the first quarter.

The Trojans began the second quarter with a five-play, 45-yard drive that ended when Jeff DiMarzio scored from 16 yards out.

The 21-point margin lasted only a few seconds as Epps took the ensuing kickoff at the 9 and avoided several Trojan tacklers before sailing down the sideline for the score. Nee added the extra point.

North's first two drives of the second quarter ended in turnovers. Their third drive, though, had a different result. A Dolbear-to-Epps pass covered 41 yards and gave the Raiders a first and goal on the 7. After a Dolbear incompletion and a B-R penalty, Nee kicked a field goal with to cut the score to 21-10 at the half.

The third quarter went scoreless as the teams traded the ball back and forth on turnovers and punts. North's defense started to shine in the second half as Joe Renzi, Brian Walsh and Neil Kiley had good showings.

The Trojans scored their

Apaches Survive Scare, Win Title Game, 20-8

The good news for the Houghs Neck Manets was that they scored the first points of the season given up by the North Quincy Apaches. The bad news was that they lost in the Quincy Youth Football League title game, 20-8.

The Apaches entered the game undefeated and unscored upon but were given a scare in third quarter when Manet running back Jim Munchbach went around his left end for a touchdown from 13 yards out and John Katsarikas ran in the two-point conversion to give Houghs Neck an 8-6 lead.

The score did not last long as North Quincy's Chris Bregoli returned a punt 55 yards for a touchdown. He added the two-points on the last play of the third quarter to give the Apaches a 14-8 lead. The return was Bregoli's sixth return of a kick or punt for a touchdown this season.

"The Houghs Neck team played awesome," said North Quincy coach Steve Koski. "They gave us a big scare, especially when they took the lead. I could see it in the eyes of our kids, they were a little nervous. But we just had too many weapons."

Matt O'Day put the Apaches on the board in the first quarter when he was on the receiving end of a 25-yard pass from Bregoli. The score was a successful conversion of a penalty-induced fourth-and-goal from the 25.

Fred Elfman put the game out of reach in the fourth quarter when he scored on an 11-yard end-around.

Two-point conversion efforts after the first and final touchdowns fell short.

Both teams had a number of heroes. North Quincy linemen Brian Deptula, Will Tracey, Chris Carthas, Nick Cyr and Mike Reidy helped lead the Apaches to victory. Jayvee guard Brendan Bowes was called up to take the place of the injured Sean Hayhurst and played a stellar game.

Koski credited the kicking of Reidy as one of the keys to victory. "Mike kicked the ball deep each time which gave us an advantage in terms of field position. He did a great job kicking."

Seventh-grade field general Dan Kelly did a fine job of leading the Manet attack, which at times dominated the line of scrimmage against the powerful North Quincy boys.

Munchbach was the top ground gainer in the contest with 40 yards on seven carries, an average of nearly 6 yards per carry. Katsarikas carried six times for 20 yards.

Lineman Mike Chenette did a great job blocking and was all over the field on defense.

Take Action Stop The Violence

At Home

- Teach children, from preschoolers to teenagers, that guns and other weapons hurt and kill.
- Show children how to settle arguments without resorting to words or actions that hurt. Parents, relatives, older brothers and sisters, teachers, and babysitters should set a positive example.
- Consider removing guns, especially handguns, from homes with children or teens.
- Look at ways other than firearms to protect yourself. Invest in top grade locks, jamming devices for doors and windows, a dog, a security system. Ask police to recommend a self-defense class.
- If you choose to own firearms, hand-guns, rifles, or shotguns, make sure they are unloaded and securely stored. Invest in trigger locks, gun cabinets with a lock, or pistol lock boxes. Lock up ammunition separately.

At School

- Support school staff in their efforts to keep guns, knives, and other weapons out of school.
- Encourage students to report any weapons they know about on school grounds to the police or school authorities.
- Involve students in the issue. Young people can and do organize against handgun violence.
- Show students how to settle arguments without resorting to violence. Teach them to deal with conflict by calming down, identifying the problem, compromising, and asking someone else to listen to both sides.

In The Community

- Launch a public education campaign to raise awareness of the dangers of firearms, and the risks of keeping a gun in the home.
- Report stolen weapons to the police immediately.
- Work with your Neighborhood Watch or other group to hold a forum on how guns and violence affect the community. Include police, school, youth, local government, youth agencies and religious organizations.

Each year, guns end the lives of thousands of young people. Their families and friends are left to cope with the loss of a life barely lived and to face a future overshadowed by violence.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Throughout recorded history, it has been a tragic fact that the best of the young men have had to carry the burden of fighting the battles and the wars in which their families, their tribes, or their nations have been involved.

On this Veteran's Day let each and every one of us pause and reflect what this day means to us. To each of us, this Veteran's Day should represent pride, sadness and a great responsibility.

PRIDE for the deeds of all the men and women, who when needed, put on uniforms and did what had to be done for their country... SADNESS for those who never came back from the battlefield; sadness for mothers, fathers, wives and children who will never see their loved ones again; sadness for those who came back maimed and ill... RESPONSIBILITY this is the greatest bequest that they could leave us the responsibility of seeing that they didn't fight and die for nothing.

So on this Veteran's Day, let us all count our blessings and thank God that there were those willing to be called "Veterans"...

Set A Date To Quit Smoking

The American Cancer Society's (ACS) annual Great American Smokeout will be held Thursday, Nov. 17.

The Quincy Health Department, as a member of the Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program (MTCPC), is offering a tip for Quincy residents who smoke and want to take an important step toward quitting: "Set a Date to Quit."

"We know that, for many smokers, a simple and very effective first step toward successfully quitting is 'setting a date,'" said Robert W. Helfrich of the Quincy Tobacco Control Program. "We are pleased to offer information, resources, and programs to every Quincy resident who is interested in preparing now to make one smoke-free day on Nov. 17 a lifelong success."

The ACS and the Quincy Health Department offer the following tips to smokers who want to prepare to quit:

•Put it in writing. Make a list of the most important reasons why you want to quit, and write them down.

•Choose your weapon! Cold turkey is usually the most successful method of quitting, but cutting down by a certain number of cigarettes per day is fine.

•Talk to your doctor. Ask your health care provider if nicotine patch therapy is appropriate for you.

•Absence makes the heart grow stronger. Throw away all cigarettes and matches. Put away your ashtrays or fill them with sugar-free gum or candy.

•"Set a Date to Quit" and tell your friends and family.

"We can help anyone who wants to 'Set a Date to Quit,'" said Helfrich. "Nov. 17 is a great goal date to set because so many other people will be quitting too, and we can provide many kinds of programs, support and encouragement to people who want to get started now and prepare."

Those who are interested in more information can call the Quincy Health Department at 376-1161 or 1162. The Massachusetts Quit-line, 1-800-TRY-TO-STOP, a toll-free referral and telephone counselling service sponsored by the ACS, is also available from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The Quincy Health Department received a grant from the Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program, which is funded by the 25-cent tax on cigarettes that Massachusetts voters approved in a statewide referendum in November 1992. The MTCPC is intended to achieve three primary objectives: educate Massachusetts citizens about the dangers of smoking, provide services to help smokers quit, and encourage smoking prevention among youth.

COMMUNITY RATING SYSTEM FLOOD HAZARD MITIGATION

Dear Residents:

The City of Quincy is voluntarily participating in the National Flood Insurance Program Rating System in an effort to reduce flood insurance premiums for Quincy residents. This program is also part of a larger effort to promote community awareness of flood hazards and flood mitigation methods. As part of our participation in this program on hazards and risks of flooding, the City has developed methods and techniques for flood proofing, compiled a list of names and addresses of specialty contractors for retrofitting precautions during storms, gathered information on the availability of flood insurance and coordinated flood hazard mitigation projects. This information is available at the Quincy Building Department, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169 and at the Thomas Crane Library at 40 Washington Street, Quincy, MA 02169.

The City is currently funding the construction and repairs/improvements of drainage and flood protection works in various sections of the City. However, these works alone cannot protect all properties under all storm conditions. These have to be supplemented by retrofitting and flood proofing individual properties as well.

The information on public funded mitigation projects can be obtained at the Department of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169.

We urge you to obtain this information and let us help you in determining the best suitable approach to increase the level of protection for your property.

For additional information on the Community Rating System application prepared by the City of Quincy, please call the Quincy Department of Public Works at (617) 376-1934.

Council Approves Tri-Town Easement

as all the work will be done in a wooded area near Willard Street. The Tri-Town Board of Water Commissioners, which is paying for the project, hopes to get it underway as soon as possible.

Council President Michael Cheney said granting the Tri-Town Board permission to build the easement is simply a question of being a good neighbor.

"Quincy is happy to help the surrounding towns," he said.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson suggested that while the project is underway the Tri-Town Board study the feasibility of the utilization of the Braintree Dam to the advantage of the city in some way in the future. Kolson has championed that cause in the past.

Braintree Sewer and Water Commissioner John McSweeney, one of several Tri-Town Board representatives at Monday night's council meeting, said the MWRA has already included a condition that the board evaluate the dam during construction of the easement.

Public Hearing Dec. 5 On Stop & Shop Plan

The Quincy Planning Board and City Council will hold a joint public hearing regarding a proposal from Stop & Shop Supermarkets to build a new store at the Pneumatic Scale site on Newport Avenue.

The hearing will be held Monday, Dec. 5 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at Quincy City Hall. The Planning Board was also scheduled to hold a public hearing on the matter last night (Wednesday).

The planned 75,000-square-foot supermarket, which calls for the demolition of the Pneumatic Scale plant, would replace Stop & Shop's smaller store on Newport Avenue. Another 18,000-square-foot store is also planned for the Pneumatic Scale site.

The Pneumatic Scale site is zoned Planned Unit Development (PUD), meaning that the Stop & Shop plan requires a favorable recommendation from the Planning Board and approval by the City Council.

The company announced in June it plans to relocate outside of Quincy. However, company representatives have yet to say where or when, according to city officials.

In addition to the permit, Stop & Shop is seeking the rezoning of a small park on the corner of the property from open space to PUD. The change is needed to make room for the construction of Stop & Shop's parking lot. The company has offered the neighborhood other open parcels in return.

Stop & Shop has also promised nearly $1 million in area traffic improvements. Residents have cited traffic as one of their major concerns about the project, especially from the smaller store on the property.

In addition to the public hearing, Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, whose district includes the site, has scheduled a neighborhood meeting on the matter for Tuesday, Nov. 15 at 6:30 p.m. in the Montclair School.

Pneumatic Scale recently reached an agreement with its workers about its plans to relocate. A union that represents 150 of the company's 280 workers has agreed to accept a severance plan that will take effect when the firm relocates.

Chretien said the union's acceptance of the plan removes a "major obstacle" to his support of Stop & Shop's plans.

Bradley: 'Veterans Are Embodiment Of America'

"We celebrate Veterans' Day because veterans have given us the freedom to do so," declared Quincy Veterans Agent Henry (Hank) Bradley during the city's Veterans' Day ceremonies Friday.

Bradley, who is also serving as the state commander of the American Legion in Massachusetts, was the keynote speaker at the observance held outside the Adams Academy. In his address, Bradley said veterans are the embodiment of America and what has made this nation great.

"Veterans are citizens who throughout our history have served, fought and died to secure our future, so that you and I can stand here today, free and proud, with our families and friends. When the nation was threatened, they answered the call and stood tall and strong against any and all enemies.

"Who are these veterans we honor today? What do they look like? Where do they come from?" Bradley asked. He then replied, "In truth, our veterans are the very embodiment of American itself. They are the composite of our nation and all that has made it great.

"Veterans are black, and they are white, and red, and every other color

Six New Members To Be Added

Police Drug Unit To Double In Size

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy Police Department, through funding secured from the federal government, will double the size of its special Drug Unit within six months, according to police and city officials.

Mayor James Sheets, upon the request of Police Chief Francis Mullen, has agreed to add six new members to the unit in order to increase its strength in its war against illegal drug activity. The mayor said he feels the Drug Unit needs to be as strong as possible to deal with the realities of today's world.

"I believe the root cause of many crimes is drugs," he said.

Sheets said he was disturbed by the results of a recent Impact Quincy survey which he said serve as further evidence for the need to increase the Drug Unit's strength.

"Anytime someone indicates we're looking at double the marijuana use, I'm concerned about it," he said.

Related Story On Page 3

Results of the survey by the federally-funded, non-profit group that fights substance abuse showed that although the majority of Quincy teenagers do not use drugs, marijuana use has doubled in the past year among those who do, and use of alcohol and other drugs has also increased at certain age levels.

Mullen said the Drug Unit is important because through it, his department is able to crack down on street-level drug operations and trafficking by apprehending both those who use drugs and those who sell them.

"Drug enforcement takes a lot of time and surveillance to build a probable case," said Mullen. "It's not like in the movies when these cases are solved in two hours."

Sheets said the city has applied for funding available through the "Cops

Procter & Gamble Licenses Transferred

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After a lengthy discussion, the Quincy License Board Tuesday approved a transfer of all licenses formerly held by Procter & Gamble to Twin Rivers Technologies.

The transfer will allow Twin Rivers to store 572,000 barrels of petroleum and non-petroleum liquids at a tank farm at 740 Washington St. and to use, store and handle flammable liquids at Procter and Gamble's former manufacturing plant at 780 Washington St.

The owner, James Ritchie, president of the company was represented by Atty. Carl Johnson, Paul Angelico, vice president of the company and Engineer John Anderson.

Councillors Ted DeCristofaro and Michael Cheney and Peter Kolson addressed the concerns of the residents and the sound levels of the operation.

Cheney said that residents in the area are not able to obtain a mortgage on their property if the sound level is more than 40 decibels to the nearest resident. A long discussion ensued until an amendment to the condition was inserted stating instead of reading "a level less than 40 decibels to the nearest residence" it would read 40 decibels

Board Revokes NQ Lodging House License

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board Tuesday voted unanimously to permanently revoke a lodging house license at 110 Billings St. after hearing complaints from neighbors about the constant noise from drinking, partying and drugs.

The property is owned by the Federal Department Insurance Corporation (F.D.I.C.) and is managed by the Premier Management Co.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers presented a petition from the neighborhood with 79 names on it and told the board he had received numerous telephone calls and complaints about the noise.

A neighbor who wanted to remain anonymous cited tenants climbing out of windows, having to put bars on windows and doors, and called the place a "hang out" for undesirables.

Stephen George, manager of the building representing Premier Management Co. told the board he had repeatedly tried to evict a tenant living in the basement of the building which according to the board is a "violation of code".

He promised that by the end of December, two tenants who live in the upstairs apartments and the man living in the basement would be moved out.

The board said the structure is not to be occupied until the installation of a sprinkler is approved by the Quincy Building Department and the Quincy Fire Department.

The Quincy License Board took the following action at its meeting Tuesday:

Hosmer, authorized agent to Kenneth Beagle, doing business as Regal Beagle Liquors, 385 Hancock St. Board chairman Joseph Shea said the delay is procedural and a vote will be taken next week.

Quincy College is now less than a week away from learning who its new interim president will be.

The college's Board of Governors will choose among three finalists for the jobs, which will be a one-year position, Monday, Nov. 21 in the Saville Hall Board Room at the college. Majority Of Teens Still Drug-Free Marijuana Use Doubles Among Quincy Youth

Results of an Impact Quincy survey indicate that while the majority of the city's youth have continued to abstain from drugs during the past year, the use of marijuana has doubled in that same time period.

Impact Quincy is a federally-funded non-profit agency that fights substance abuse. The survey was administered to public school students in Grades 7-12 last June and results were released last Thursday.

"We are very grateful that most of our young people continue to exercise good judgement in avoiding the use of these substances," said Impact Quincy Project Director Mitch Finnegan. "We do see some trends in this year's figure's, however, that do concern us."

Finnegan said the primary goal of the survey is to use the results to target and tailor Impact Quincy's prevention efforts.

Some 1,887 youths were polled during the survey, with answers revealing that alcohol, tobacco and marijuana are still the most commonly used drugs among Quincy's youth. The survey showed that the number of girls using those substances increases greatly between Grades 7 and 8, while a similar increase for boys occurs in Grades 8 and 9.

Other results showed: •Twenty-five percent said they have used marijuana in the past month, as opposed to 12 percent last year.

•Forty-two percent said they have consumed alcohol in the past month, compared to 40 percent last year. More than half of those who drink said they do so at parties, while 18 percent said they drink in cars.

•Twenty-five percent said they smoke cigarettes, a slight decline from last year's total of 26 percent.

•Eight percent said they have used inhalants or sniffed glue in the last month, compared to 5 percent last year.

•A large percentage of girls and a smaller percentage of boys said they have been sexually harassed physically by an adult, older youth or someone of the same age in the last year. Physical sexual harassment was defined in the survey as unwanted or inappropriate touching, pinching or other contact.

•Twenty-three percent of girls and 13 percent of boys said they had considered committing suicide in the past 12 months.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, one of the community panelists, said the city must probe deeper to see what causes drug usage and other problems for Quincy's youth.

"We must look beyond these numbers to the root causes of these problems in our society," he said. "We must look at the fact that our young people are growing up in a world where they see so little hope and real opportunity for higher education, or well-paying jobs. To address the issues presented by these results, we need to address a much wider range of concerns."

WORKING TO SURVIVE HEART ATTACKS

Going to work may do a lot more for you than pull in a paycheck, at least when recovering from heart attacks is concerned. In a study of 143 individuals who had experienced their first heart attacks, researchers found that the people who went back to work within a few months of their attacks were much better off emotionally than those who remained off the job. The workers' mental distress declined dramatically, compared with that of the stay-at-home people, who generally experienced much greater stress and anxiety. Even considering differences in physical condition, education level, and social supports, the researchers concluded that resuming work may be a healthy move when it is physically possible. P.S. The benefits of working after a heart attack seem to apply even if a person was previously unhappy on the job. Many people need medical assistance when it comes to creating a diet and exercise regimen that matches your lifestyle. We can inform you what adjustments you can make in your diet and exercise to best maintain your health. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE (472-2550), we offer complete heart care with a focus on heart problems and their prevention. We are conveniently located at 780 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. Hallsen Seen Asst. City Clerk

The field of four candidates for the Quincy assistant city clerk post is down to one: Maureen Hallsen.

She is the choice of City Clerk Joseph Shea who is submitting her name to the City Council for confirmation.

And she should have no difficulty getting that confirmation. She has both the qualifications and experience.

She is a senior clerk in the City Clerk's office with 18 years service. She lives in Wollaston and is the mother of two.

Her name is on the agenda for the City Council meeting Nov. 21 and the council will probably confirm her that night.

She will succeed Patricia Toland who died Sept. 7 after a long battle with cancer.

The job pays $30,541 to start and the salary goes to $34,541 after 10 years.

The other three candidates for the job were employees in the Assessor's, and Water Department offices and a Police Department civilian employee.

SHEA

Former Sen. Paul Harold, Quincy's Marco Polo, is off again, this time to Poland where he will conduct a seminar at the Institute for Local Government and Administration in Krahov. His topic will be the role of government spokesperson in the political system.

HAROLD

Co-chairing the seminar will be Professor Charles Stowe of Sam Houston State University. Harold feels that besides politics, the pair have something else in common: shipbuilding.

He's from the city where some of the mightiest Navy warships were built and Stowe was a speechwriter for Secretary of the Navy John Lehman.

Harold will be in Poland through Thanksgiving.

INCIDENTALLY, Harold and Shea got what might be called a preview of the outcome of the Kennedy-Romney Senate battle.

The Saturday before the election, Harold brought 12 visitors from 12 foreign countries to City Hall to acquaint them with the punchcard voting system used in Quincy.

Harold says the countries represented were A to Z: Armenia to Zaire.

Shea instructed them in the system and then let them "vote" on demonstration ballots in polling booths set up for absentee voters.

Kennedy was the easy winner, getting nine out of the 12 votes to Romney's three.

Harold says he might have tipped the foreign vote for Kennedy when he told the visitors they wouldn't get lunch unless they voted for him.

"I was joking, but some may have taken me seriously," he says.

Actually, Harold notes the Kennedy name would be more familiar to foreigners than Romney's.

Anyway, they all got lunch at Harold's home, along with City Councilors Peter Kolson and Ted DeCristofaro and voter Registrars Bill Draicchio and Denis Tardo.

TOM GILMARTIN'S crystal ball was on target in last week's election. He had 11 out of 12 winners including Ted Kennedy, William Weld and William Galvin, and Republicans taking those crucial Senate and House seats and governorships.

He went wrong on the seat belts question predicting "No" when it came up "Yes."

HERB FONTAINE, former WJDA news editor, is sidelined with three fractured ribs and a possible fourth one, suffered in a fall.

FONTAINE

Fontaine was walking his dog in Caddy Park off Quincy Shore Drive last week when his feet went out from under him on slippery leaves on an incline.

He finally managed to make it to his Squanto Rd., Merrymount home and his wife, Barbara, drove him to Quincy Hospital.

Ironically, Fontaine fractured three ribs some years ago in a softball game at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce outing at the old Weymouth Fairgrounds.

Sheets Not Concerned Over Republicans In Control

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday he is unconcerned about the growing number of Republicans elected to state and national offices, saying that the plans of the City of Quincy will remain unaffected by the changing political landscape.

The city, long a Democratic stronghold, currently is home to more registered Democrats than Republicans and Independents combined.

Sheets said he remains confident that a number of projects connected with Quincy's future, including the return of shipbuilding to the Fore River shipyard, the Boston Harbor cleanup, increased tourism and other issues will be able to progress with little or no problems.

The mayor pointed out that the country still has a Democratic president and Massachusetts recently saw the re-election of two key Democratic leaders: U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy and U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, whose district includes Quincy.

Sheets admitted that both Kennedy and Studds could lose some clout in Congress since each will lose chairmanship of major committees: Kennedy the Senate Health and Human Services Committee and Studds the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

The mayor said he thinks Studds could suffer more in the new Republican Congress, since it has 435 members and is "more formal" than the Senate. Kennedy, a respected 32-year member of the Senate, is less likely to lose clout because of the fact because the fact that there are only 100 senators allows for a lot more cooperation and "networking," he said.

However, Sheets added, Studds will still be the ranking Democrat on the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, meaning that he will still have a voice on that board. More importantly, the mayor said, despite the fact that Gov. William Weld is a Republican, he has a good relationship with Quincy and has shown interest in a number of projects relevant to the city, most notably the revival of the shipyard.

Sheets speculated that a popular, prominent Republican governor like Weld will have no problems keeping any issues important to the city alive in a Republican Congress.

"The governor will be helpful to the city in terms of economic development and growth," said Sheets.

He added that a number of issues that currently concern the city are state matters and therefore will not be impacted at all on the federal level.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD WAS published in 1915 when the granite quarries were still an important Quincy industry. This view of Swingles quarry at a depth of 225 feet shows how dangerous the work was, especially in bad weather. Note the precariously placed ladders. Swingles was opened for over 100 years and was the last working quarry in Quincy when it shut down operations in 1963. By that time it had reached a depth of 350 feet. The beauty of Swingles special "extra dark" Quincy granite, after it was polished, can be seen on the lower level facade of the Bank of Boston building in Quincy Center, or in the two columns at the entrance to the Co-operative Bank on Quincy Avenue. These columns were removed from Jonathan Swingle's house when it was demolished in the early 1980's. The best sample of the stone can be seen in the monument on Swingle's grave on Greenleaf Street in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Ashmont To Braintree Rapid Transit Approved

By PAUL HAROLD

The Mass Transit Committee and its Advisory Committee approved an expansion of rapid transit on a route to the South Shore from Ashmont Station to a new station in South Braintree. The proposed eight mile, $19 million project would need legislative approval.

Included in the expansion were two bridges, one over the Neponset River and one over the Southeast Expressway, and a 500-car parking lot at the Granite Ave. interchange in Milton.

One proposal would have the new service paid for by a new South Shore Transit District. The new district would pay for its construction and would be billed for use of the MTA line between Ashmont and Boston.

TEACHERS' RAISES SOUGHT

The Quincy Teachers' Association presented a proposal to the School Committee for a 10 percent raise for the city's 686 teachers. QTA President Joseph Abbott said if approved, the raise would add $1.66 to the tax rate. The current average teacher's salary was $5,700.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa, who served as chairman of the School Committee, said he was "quite concerned about the taxes."

QUINCY-ISMS

SOME FOMs (Friends of Marilyn) Marilyn Birnie began her outreach to young pregnant girls as one woman reaching out and caring for another. Over the past ten years that caring has grown into the non-profit organization Friends of the Unborn, headquartered in Quincy. Some of Marilyn's earliest supporters gathered for the tenth anniversary celebration: (l to r) Mary Norton, Kathy Nichols, Helen Haas, Mary Davis, Marilyn Birnie and Pat Ruane.

Friends Of The Unborn: A Home Where The Heart Is Helping Unwed Mothers Feel At Home

By Rev. Joseph C. O'Brien
Special to The Quincy Sun

Most people would recognize Maggie Bellotti as the wife of the former Lieutenant Governor, three term Attorney General, and Democratic Candidate for Governor. Others realize she's the mother of Peter Bellotti, a political analyst who recently covered election night for Continental Cable, or another son Michael, a state representative following in his fathers footsteps.

But Maggie has several distinctions of her own in addition to being the mother of 12 grown children.

For the last five years Maggie has opened up her home each July and hosted a fundraiser to benefit Friends of the Unborn, a shelter for young pregnant women, headquartered in Quincy. Maggie personally prepares the hot dinner buffet for 100 guests and raises $2,500.

On the third Thursday of each month she also hosts a luncheon for close to 25 people who contribute what they would've spent on lunch and donate the money to the Friends shelter.

Maggie has become very good friends with Marilyn Birnie who started taking in young girls in crisis pregnancies back in 1984. The love and support of many volunteers and their financial donations have helped Friends of the Unborn provide pregnancy counseling and a place to stay while they prepare for the birth of their baby.

Id really like to do even more fundraising for Marilyn, said Maggie. Shes a miracle woman. Shes so special and works so hard. I really don't know how she survives.

What has kept Marilyn and Friends going over the last ten years has been prayer, faithful supporters, and the conviction that each person can make a difference.

The story of Friends of the Unborn started with just one woman trying to help a girl in need.

Ten months after opening up her home to shelter pregnant girls, Marilyn Birnie had run out of resources and food. What came from her heart was an earnest prayer:

A PROUD MOTHER—Briana, 11 days old in this photo, was born to Ana Sheehan, formerly of Norwell, who along with many other young pregnant women in need have found help and love at Friends of the Unborn in Quincy. Now celebrating its ten year anniversary, this outreach has been instrumental in the births of over 600 newborns. Founded by Marilyn Birnie and supported totally by donations, Friends is a pro-life choice for girls in crisis pregnancies.

Heavenly Father, we have to have some food come in. I know you've called me to this work. I need You to be faithful to me so that we can feed these girls.

While Birnie was visiting a neighbor, one of the girls came running over. Marilyn, some people just came and dropped off groceries, meat and fruit. The kitchen is filled with food.

Birnie rushed to thank the donors, but was told they had already left. They just said to tell you: Jesus came, the girl said.

That was probably the most faith-building moment for me, Marilyn recalls. Since that experience, I can say we've never again been without food over the past nine years.

What began as one Catholic woman's offer to shelter a homeless, pregnant teen has evolved over the past decade into Friends of the Unborn.

Totally funded by donations, this non-profit labor of love helps provide a home for up to 25 girls and assists them in finding housing once their babies are born.

Birnie is now full-time director and oversees the day to day details of four group-homes, one in Quincy and three in Hull. She personally interviews, advocates for, and provides much needed parental love for each of the young women whom she refers to as my girls.

I love the work I'm doing, said Penny Romano, assistant director of Friends of the Unborn since 1991. She left her position as manager at a homeless shelter because she felt the Lord calling her to use her background and faith to help women in need.

I found I wanted something that was more of a ministry. I've gone through a lot of what these girls are going through.

YOU ARE PRECIOUS in My eyes. Marilyn Birnie, director of Friends of the Unborn, is extremely proud of each residents baby and prizes their photos. Her walls of her Quincy office display the fruit of her labors. In ten years over six hundred children have been born with the help of Birnie, her staff, volunteers, and many donors. The young mothers frequently drop by to keep in touch with their extended family.

Now I find that God is using all these past experiences. My heart is with these girls, Romano added.

Many of the girls are escaping stressful situations of physical, mental, verbal and substance abuse. What they receive at Friends, is acceptance and a structure where they learn to take responsibility for themselves and one another. The house rules are explicit: no smoking, drinking or controlled substances, limits on telephone and television use, strict curfews, daily chores, and attendance at all programs.

The Hingham Visiting Nurse Association provides informative classes each Thursday afternoon on prenatal care, hygiene, parenting and dealing with stress.

Marilyn Terry and other volunteers from the Dove Shelter for Battered Women, Quincy, give workshops on violence prevention and breaking the cycle of abuse.

A six week life skills program teaches the girls how to prepare for living on their own, how to handle money and how to shop wisely. Through an association with the Quincy School Department and Bethany Congregational Church, Mary Maloney and Kathy Cryan tutor girls and help them earn a high school diploma. Last year two girls were at the graduation exercises in cap and gown. They received their diplomas and a gift of roses from the other residents and a very proud staff.

A Crisis Pregnancy Center has been established at the Quincy Home and offers free, confidential pregnancy testing, counseling and referrals to pro-life doctors. Leslie Collins, R.N., director of Pregnancy Help at the archdiocesan Pro-life office is on the board of directors of Friends. Collins was responsible for referring the very first girl ten years ago and still marvels at the scope of the work.

Marilyn's program has been one of the strongest statements for life. She provides a concrete alternative to abortion. She has opened up her home so that girls will be safe. And Marilyn does just that she opens up her heart to every girl.

Dr. Francis Nash, OB-GYN, of Seton Medical Group, Quincy and St. Elizabeth's Hospital, has been with us from the very beginning and has personally delivered many of the residents babies, said Birnie.

95 percent of the girls are local, but we have had a girl from Panama, Mexico, Barbados and a full-blooded American Indian from the midwest, said Sister Miriam Patrice

McKeon, SCH, a member of the board since its inception. With her helpers she teaches a weekly bible study, oversees the pastoral needs of the residents, and prays with the girls.

One of the highlights for me, Sister Miriam recalled, was the day we had three girls in labor at the same time. I was with a couple of female volunteers from Friends coaching and supporting each girl. That labor room was so filled with love one nurse asked Now which one of you is the mother of this girl?

After ten years of hard work its clear that Birnie has a soft spot in her heart for these girls and their babies but shes not soft when it comes to expecting great things from them or wanting them to live what they have learned.

They do come to know who the Lord is while they're here. And when the girls come back to visit, they tell me that they're going to Church, said Birnie, because they know that's one of the first questions I ask.

Sheets Named Christmas Parade Grand Marshal

Mayor James Sheets will be grand marshal of the annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade Sunday, Nov. 27 beginning at 12:30 p.m. at Quincy Ave. and Elm St., Quincy Center.

George White, Festival Committee chairman, said the mayor was selected because Sheets and Mayor Chuck Scholz of Quincy, Ill. were scheduled to serve as grand marshals last year. However, last year's parade was canceled due to inclement weather.

White said the Festival Committee voted unanimously once again to extend the invitation to Sheets in recognition of his years of dedication to public service and for spearheading the drive which provided food, clothing, and assistance to the flood-stricken people of Quincy, Ill. last year.

In addition, the 1993 parade theme contest winners, Sheila McKenna of Wollaston and Linda Saccetti of Weymouth, have been invited to join this year's parade as honored participants. Their winning theme was "What Christmas Means To Me."

This year's parade theme contest winner, Leonora Buirks of Quincy, will be honored as a parade participant for her theme "Joys of Christmas."

Up to 200,000 spectators line the parade route along Hancock St. annually to see the event.

Units march down the street in a northerly direction before finishing at North Quincy High School.

No property; no loan. It was an equation Roberto Izarray had heard time and again. And without a loan, the business to which he had dedicated himself over the past 5 years would be history. So instead of focusing our attention solely on his assets, we looked at the way he ran his neighborhood market instead. Though his rented space is relatively small, the market is extremely well organized and stocked. His hard work is clearly evident. And with only his efforts as collateral, we provided the money he needed to continue. That's the kind of thinking that's at the heart of our INCITY program for people and communities in need. INCITY has set aside $8 billion for loans to people just like Roberto Izarray - the most comprehensive lending commitment ever made by any financial institution in the country. And the program to date has already made over 27000 loans totaling $1.6 billion. So if you'd like to participate in the Fleet INCITY program, call 1-800-CALL-FLEET (1-800-225-5353). Bank's Donation Needed Boost For Food Pantry

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A local charitable organization participating in a holiday food drive has received a needed boost from The Co-Operative Bank.

The bank recently presented The Seaside Advocacy Group, which operates a food pantry for residents of Quincy's Ward 1, with a donation of $225. And while that amount may not seem like much, it is a godsend to the president of the Seaside group.

"It's about 1/10 of our total budget, or almost 1/10," said Peter Seppala. "I wish I had 10 more people like them (the bank) who donated that much."

Seppala said each of the bank's three Quincy branches--1259 Hancock St., 300 Newport Ave. and 85 Quincy Ave.--contributed $75 to the food pantry.

Joanne Gavoni, assistant manager of the Hancock Street branch, said the bank was impressed by the effort put out by Seppala and the others in the Seaside group who have helped to make the food pantry a reality.

"Basically, we just wanted to get involved with a worthwhile cause," said Gavoni. "They've really done a lot of work putting the food pantry together, and that's why the bank decided to get involved. We like to be an active part of the community."

The Seaside Advocacy Group is joining forces with the Germantown Neighborhood Center to provide full meals to needy Ward 1 families for Thanksgiving and/or Christmas. The center is providing the turkeys, while the Seaside group is supplying the canned goods.

During a recent telephone interview, Seppala said about 150 families had signed up to receive holiday meals.

"And we'll probably end up with more than that," he said. "We could end up with 175 to 200."

Seppala said his food pantry, which opened Aug. 20, began with an annual budget of $3,500: $2,000 from Project Bread, $1,000 in federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds, and another $500 from Project Bread to be used for the holidays. He noted that he had to use more than $2,900 of that total to secure the food for the holiday program because recent can drives held by the pantry did not take in as many donations as hoped.

The 221 cases of food will be purchased from James Ferrera and Sons Inc. of Canton, he added.

Seppala also said he hopes private food and monetary donations and can drives will be enough to get the pantry through the rest of the fiscal year. He noted that when the pantry first opened, it was completely stocked with food, but now its supplies are almost depleted.

"It's been difficult to keep up with this," he said. "I never knew there were so many hungry people in this neck of the woods. And since we opened, other food pantries in the city have sent people from our neighborhood back to us."

"Our major funders have been Project Bread and the Community Development Block Grant money. Anything extra, we'd really appreciate it."

The food pantry, which when filled to capacity holds 300 cases of food or more, is now down to "30 or 40" cases, he added.

Seppala said another of his immediate concerns is how to fund the upcoming annual Christmas Party for area children. The event usually draws 250 to 300 children and costs about $2,800, he said, and toys this year cannot be obtained from Toys for Tots because the U.S.

Marines are no longer at the Quincy Naval Air Station.

Hopefully, a local toy store or stores will be able to assist with the event, he said.

"I'm going to be out there looking for toys, too," said Seppala.

Don't Open Your Door To Strangers

On Thursday afternoon, around 3:15 p.m., a senior citizen on Granite St. heard a knock on the door. When she opened the door she saw a young man, about 30 years old, standing there.

The young man told her that there was an accident down the street and that her power would be out for about four or five hours. He then asked to go down into the cellar to check her power box.

When he came back upstairs he checked her light switches. The young man then told the senior citizen that she had been overcharged on her light bill. He proceeded to give her a $100 dollar bill and asked for $52 in change.

The senior citizen went to a location, where she keeps her money to pay her monthly bills. Once the young man saw that location he asked for the $100 bill back and said he would mail her a check instead.

A second man entered the home and continued to help the first man check out the light switches. Upon leaving, one man told the senior that if she has any problems with her lights to go down stairs to the power box and pull the handle up and down a few times.

Later that evening the senior went to the location that she keeps her money for bills, and found all the money missing. Over $400 was taken.

The men were described as in their 30's, about 6 feet tall, and about 160 pounds. Both were wearing dark clothing.

Lessons to be learned from this incident are:

•Never open your door to a stranger. Talk through the closed door.

•Get proper identification from strangers claiming to work for the city or a utility company. Have him or her slip their identification under the door. If you still have any questions about this person, call the police and have us respond to check him or her out.

•All utility workers and city workers carry proper identification.

•Utility workers NEVER give refunds to you in your home. All refunds are handled through the company's office and are paid by check.

•If a stranger comes to your door and asks to use your phone to make an emergency call, don't let the stranger in. Instead, offer to make the call for the stranger. If that stranger insists you let him or her in, call the police immediately.

Council On Aging Awarded $58,548 Grant

State Rep. Ronald Mariano recently announced that the Quincy Council on Aging was awarded $58,548 by the Commonwealth's Executive Office on Elder Affairs.

The grant size, which is a major increase over previous years, was made possible by Mariano's efforts during this year's budget debate.

"As the Quincy Council on Aging continues to be pressed to provide more and more services, I made it a priority to meet the needs of Quincy's seniors," said Mariano. "I was very pleased to be part of securing these monies, especially during a year in which few programs received increases."

Mariano said the funds, along with contributions supplied by cities and towns, will be used to create and supplement programs and services to the elderly. Many of these services fill the gap for individuals who do not qualify for various other home care programs. Some of the services the Councils provide are transportation, meals, health programs and education services.

The amount of each grant is based upon the population size in the service delivery area. During the FY'95 budget debate, the program for Councils on Aging realized a $2 million increase. This enabled the formula for the grant awards to increase from $1.75 to $3.20 per elder.

"Understanding the numerous contributions our seniors have made to Quincy, I feel it is our duty to reward them for their efforts," said Mariano.

"With senior citizen advocacy, as a top priority, I am proud to announce this reward in addition to our recent passage of medigap insurance reform, pharmacy freedom of choice and the defeat of the banking initiative to stop returning cancelled checks to account holders. This award is only part of a series of successful efforts we have made to improve the quality of life for Quincy's senior citizens."

Spotlight On Business

Marking 40 Years

At LeColson Fine Jewelry Customers Part Of Family

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

During his 40 years in the jewelry industry, LeColson Fine Jewelry owner and Quincy resident Al Coletti has seen many changes but the one constant in his business has been his customers.

"I enjoy the people. This is a close-knit family business and after a while, the customers become part of our family," the 63-year-old Coletti said.

Coletti moved his business in March to the former residency of friend Katherine Ryan at 795 Hancock St. The move took place shortly after her death, around the same time Hibernia Savings Bank purchased the building where LeColson Jewelry was previously located at 730 Hancock St.

"My sons used to be friends with her sons and when she died we moved into her residency. Now, I feel she is praying down on me," he explained.

With the help of two other entrepreneurs, Gerald LeBlanc and Leo Sonis, Coletti opened the business in 1969. To this day, he has kept true to his roots by not changing the business' name.

The road to success has not been an easy one for Coletti, who sometimes found the financial realities of running a business to be somewhat overwhelming.

"It's not been easy. It's hard because all the money you get, you put back into the business," he explained.

Coletti and his two other co-workers, Grace Sacco and Jennifer Higgins have managed to help make LeColson a warm shopping environment for consumers, he said.

"Our motto is 'to shop in a living room environment,' and we do everything we can to keep it that way," said Coletti, who retired five years ago.

Coletti changed his name from Angelo to Al for his first job in the jewelry industry at his employer's request in an effort to boost sales. He declined to name the company.

"My boss' wife didn't like my name and she thought that if I changed it to Al it would help sales. And, I've been known as Al ever since, but my friends still call me Angelo," he said.

A lay minister and daily churchgoer, Coletti serves as a Eucharistic minister at St. Anthony's Church in Falmouth, where he owns a second home.

"I have always had a close relationship with God," he said.

Helping people is the main reward of his business, he said.

"I had made a special pendant for a Boston judge to give to his wife for Christmas," said Coletti. "She called me on the phone crying, telling me how much she loved it. And that's what is really rewarding for me, to make a lot of people happy."

Coletti's white office walls are dressed with photographs and plaques give a nostalgic feel to his otherwise business oriented environment representing 40 years of involvement in not only his business life but also his social life.

An AIDS education training certificate, a Quincy Sons of Italy membership and a degree from Burdett College as well as a photograph of the business' three original founding members coat the walls of his office, tucked away at the rear of the jewelry store.

These momentos symbolize Coletti's philosophy of helping others.

"I feel it is important to get involved as much as possible and be in touch with the past," he said.

Coletti's parents moved

LeCOLSON FINE JEWELRY, which opened in 1969, has been a "close-knit" family business, says owner Angelo (Al) Coletti, second from right. Joining him in the store located at 795 Hancock St., are family members Grace Sacco, Dorothy Coletti, Mark Coletti and 4 1/2 month-old David Jacob Coletti.

to Quincy in 1900 from Santo Donato, a small village just outside of Italy.

The father of four children, David, George, Mark and Karyl, Coletti believes strongly in having close family ties.

"I feel it is important to have a close relationship with your family," he said.

As well as being a successful business owner, Coletti is the proud grandfather of four children; Tara, Cara, Daniel and David Jacob.

Although he has experienced a great deal of success in the jewelry business, Coletti said his first dreams of employment were in a much different line of work.

"If I hadn't gone into the jewelry business, I would have become a cop. But, I don't think I'd like that kind of work because I'm more of a big teddy bear," he said.

In his four decades in the jewelry industry,

Coletti has noticed a change in the jewelry business.

"When I started this business in 1954, I had $5,000. Today $5,000 won't even buy a ring," he said.

"The times have certainly changed," he said.

LeColson, 795 Hancock St., is open Monday through Friday 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and their phone number is 786-4972.

Quincy Hospital Program Wins National Award Again

The Quincy Heights Center for Emotional Health at Quincy Hospital was recently selected as the national winner of the Horizon Mental Health Management Clinical Program of the Year Award.

The award was presented at Horizon's annual meeting in Dallas.

Quincy Heights was chosen as the number one clinical program out of the more than 60 programs operated nationwide by Horizon. The program was honored for consistently scoring in the top 10 percent of all programs in the region in clinical adults, for significantly reducing its average length of stay, for the high quality of its clinical staff and for the quality of its in-service trainings.

In addition, the program was recognized for receiving the 1994 Blue Ribbon award by the New England Healthcare Assembly for innovation in clinical programming. Last year, Carol Hannon, a clinical supervisor was named Clinician of the Year by Horizon.

This is the second time Quincy Heights has won the prestigious national award. The program was also honored in 1992.

Since selecting Quincy Heights for the award, Horizon Mental Health Management has expanded its services to include 108 mental health programs in 34 states.

Quincy Group Teaches Wisconsin About Domestic Violence Program Here

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Police Chief Francis Mullen and other local law enforcement officials recently traveled to Wisconsin to educate authorities in Racine and Milwaukee about Quincy's domestic violence program.

The City of Quincy has received national attention for its work in the area of domestic violence. Mullen said Wisconsin officials invited the Quincy group to their state because of a report on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" which focused on domestic violence efforts in the city.

"I think it's good for the city if we're recognized," said Mullen. "We were honored to go out there."

Joining the chief for the trip were the Honorable Charles Black, presiding judge of Quincy District Court; Gwen Park DeVasto, director of the Violence Witness Office affiliated with the Norfolk County district attorney's office; Assistant District Attorney Krista Stanton, domestic violence prosecutor and Bruce Carr, assistant chief of probation for the Quincy District Court Probation Department.

Each of the five gave presentations at the Family Violence Prevention Conference at Gateway Technical College in Racine Oct. 27 and before a workshop/panel held by the Wisconsin Coalition Against Domestic Violence in Milwaukee the following day.

Mullen said Wisconsin officials, who paid for the Quincy group's transportation and expenses, were very impressed by what they saw.

"They thought well of the Quincy (domestic violence) model and they were very impressed by the cooperative effort we have here," he said. "It was very informative for them."

The chief added that the city's domestic violence program would not be as successful as it has become without the cooperation among the district court, police department and district attorney's office.

A letter dated Oct. 31 that Mullen received from Melanie Bohl of the Women's Resource Center in Racine confirms the enthusiasm of the Wisconsin officials, who plan to model their domestic violence efforts after Quincy's.

"We enjoyed your presentation and your graciousness," wrote Bohl. "Your enthusiasm for the team concept, your understanding of domestic violence, and your support for the need for police officers to gather evidence that can be used in court came through loud and clear. We are now ready to begin the even more difficult task of putting something together for Racine that will work smoothly."

The City Council praised the chief for the work he and the other local officials did in Wisconsin at its Nov. 7 meeting. Mullen noted that earlier this year, the Quincy group also gave presentations to authorities in Baton Rouge, La.

QUINCY'S TERRY BOWMAN grabs Barnstable's Adam Burnett from behind as Mike Sheffer moves in for the kill. The President defensive backs stifled highly-touted Red Raider quarterback Mickey Fein.

RECEIVER MIKE SHEFFER turns the corner as the Barnstable defense gives chase. Sheffer caught three passes for 44 yards against the Red Raiders. He leads the team with an average of 26.1 yards per catch this season.

Quincy Wins In Last Second, Plus One

By KERRY BYRNE

Quincy senior Ed Anderson did a little dance on the Veterans' Memorial Stadium turf. Sophomore Jon Ryan lay on the ground, stunned but giddy, his team's 14-13 win over Barnstable (5-4) the most memorable of his young football career. The result, even closer than the score indicated, if you can imagine that, left coach Jack Raymer glassy-eyed and dazed.

The Presidents (5-4) seemingly took control, 14-7, when Sam Brown crossed the goal line with 1:13 left in the game, but then danced with both victory and defeat in the final minute before choosing to go home with the former.

When Matt Miller intercepted a pass by Barnstable's Mickey Fein with 35 seconds left, the Presidents were one first down away (Barnstable still had four timeouts) from victory. But a Quincy fumble gave the Red Raiders the ball on the President 33.

A Fein-to-Matt Paddock pass put the ball on the 7. Two plays later Fein threw an incomplete pass as time expired, setting off a Quincy celebration that ended when the officials inexplicably put one second back on the clock. The Barnstable quarterback took advantage by connecting with Anthony Adams for a TD that brought the visitors to within one. A try for two was stifled when defensive tackle Butch Palaza batted away Fein's pass at the line of scrimmage.

This time the game was truly over.

"This was a big win for us," said Raymer when he was finally able to collect his thoughts. "It gives us momentum going into Thanksgiving."

The President defense, ripped apart for 68 yards and a touchdown on Barn-stable's first drive, was ferocious the rest of the way. The Red Raiders picked up only three first downs after their opening drive. They ended with 172 yards of offense.

"We've had good defense all year and tonight they did a job against the best passer in the league," said Raymer. Fein completed just nine of 22 attempts and was picked off twice (Miller and Chris McArdle). Ryan sacked Fein for a 9-yard loss and pressured the quarterback, along with Mike Flagg, Bill Dunn and Mike Feeley, a number of times.

Jason Bennett, playing like a monster since he was moved from linebacker to defensive tackle, made five solo stops and was in on a number of other tackles. He made one stop for a 3-yard loss.

Middle linebacker Dunn, who seems to make at least one devastating stop each game, made several against the Red Raiders. The most impressive: early in the second half Barnstable went for it on a fourth-and-two but was stopped when Dunn broke through a wall of linemen to stop Mike Duffley for a 3-yard loss on an attempted middle screen. A few minutes later, Fein threw to Paddock on a fourth-and-three but Quincy corner-back Terry Bowman ripped down the receiver just shy of the marker.

Bowman scored Quincy's first touchdown late in the first half when he was on the receiving end of a 23-yard Mark Glynn pass. The sophomore QB outplayed the highly-touted Fein with seven completions on 13 attempts for 120 yards, one touchdown and no interceptions.

Offensively, the Presidents were not spectacular but played well when it counted. "We moved the ball when we had to and stayed with what we do best - running the ball," said Raymer. "The [Barnstable] defense was overstacked to [guard] Feeley and [tackle] Palaza's side. Jeff Burrell and and Pete Kolson gave it to us when we needed it on the backside, and Sam came through, especially on that last drive."

Brown's touchdown run capped a punishing 10-play, three-and-a-half minute drive that began on Quincy's own 29. Brown carried the ball for 41 of his 134 yards on the game-winning march.

Now Preparing For Quincy

Raiders Pounce On Tigers In Second Half

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

It was a tale of two games Friday night at Taunton High School, but it will be the second half that North Quincy will remember as a 20-point explosion in the third quarter led the Raiders to a 37-20 victory.

With the win, North (6-3) assures themselves a winning season. Preparations are underway for the annual Thanksgiving battle with Quincy High.

Trailing 13-7 at halftime, North found themselves in a most-common position of playing catch-up. Shawn Nee returned the second half kickoff 81 yards for touchdown that tied the score. Nee eluded several would-be Tiger tacklers before breaking free down the sideline. He kicked the extra point to give the Red Raiders the lead for good.

Derek Epps had another fine game, catching four Sean Dolbear passes for 93 yards and two touchdowns. Epps' scored NQ's first touchdown late in the second quarter on a pass play that covered 54 yards. It was North's longest scoring pass of the season. Dolbear was 4 of 12 passing.

The Raider defense, led by a monster outing from senior Keith Martinson, was a major factor in the turnaround. The Tiger offense was unable to move against the fired-up defense in the second half.

Martinson was a man on a mission with 13 tackles and four quarterback sacks.

"Keith has been playing very well," said McPhee. "I think he has something like six sacks in the last two games."

McPhee added that Martinson was not alone: "The defense had an outstanding second half. We made some adjustments at the half and we came out and played one heck of a second half."

Among the other defensive standouts for North were Epps, Toby Odom, Gerry Fernandez, Glenn Peterson, Dave Carney and Brian Walsh. In the second half Walsh blocked a punt and sacked the quarterback.

The Raider dominance continued when Odom intercepted a pass at midfield and advanced to the Taunton 33. Four plays later, Dolbear and Epps connected for their second touchdown, a 21-yard play, and North led 21-13.

On the next series, the Red Raiders were forced to punt from deep in their own territory. Walsh's punt block gave North the ball on the 1-yard line. Dolbear punched in the score. The lead stood at 27-13 as Nee missed his first extra point of the season.

The Red Raiders have outscored their opponents 50-0 in the third quarter this season.

In the fourth, North took the ball over on their 36 and begin to march. A Jamie Karvelis 20-yard run and a Walsh 29-yard run gave the Raiders a first-and-goal. Nee booted his fourth field goal of the season to give his team a 30-13 lead. The field goal gave Nee 100 points on the season - the first Raider in years to accomplish that feat. Nee is currently fourth in the Eastern Mass. scoring race.

North's final touchdown drive began when Fernandez intercepted a pass and advanced 8 yards to the Taunton 32. Nee's runs of 14 and 9 yards set up Peterson's 3-yard touchdown run - his first of the season.

Taunton's Eddie Holt returned the ensuing kickoff 85 yards for a touchdown on the final play of the game. The score was Holt's third of the game. In the first quarter he hauled in an 18-yard scoring pass from quarterback Chris Cunningham and in the second he ran 47 yards to help his team build a 13-0 lead.

Nee ended the game with 71 yards on 16 carries.

Rendle Tops Rendle In Family Affair North Wins 4th Straight Sectional Title

It was a "subway series" and a "family feud" atmosphere at Eastern Nazarene College Saturday night. But after the North Quincy girls' volleyball team put all that aside, they put Quincy aside in straight games (15-12, 15-3, 15-12) in the MIAA Div. 1 East-Central sectional final.

North Quincy faces Milford in a state semifinal match tonight (Wednesday) at Eastern Nazarene College. Milford was a three games to one winner over Marlboro in the West-Central sectional. The state final will be held Sunday at Brandeis University in Waltham at 3 p.m.

"Before the match I not only wanted our girls to play their best, but I wanted to beat my father," said acting Quincy coach Holly Rendle, whose father, Jim, coaches North Quincy. "I'm now happy that my alma mater is moving on." Holly was a member of North's 1987 state championship team.

"Sunday dinner is going to be very interesting in the Rendle household," said Jim.

The Red Raiders were led by juniors Linda Jellison (nine kills, two blocks) and Sara Stanton (11 kills, four blocks), and senior Jen Teahan (two blocks). Others playing well were Amy Detwiler, Kerry Ginty, Amy Li, Karen Shea, Missy Roberts, Kim Ho, Ngan Ho, Kerry Jellison, Meghan Roche, Amber Maher, Rachael Repoff, Maryanne Patch and Erica Crawford.

The Presidents (12-9) were led by starters Kristen Priscella, Kerri Connolly, Toni Kabilian, Kristen Sheehan and Felicia Tam. Also playing well were Angela Hogrell, Erin Barry, Mary Chenette and Karen Goldrick.

Despite dropping three straight, Quincy made North earn every point. In two of the three games, the Presidents held leads for at least half the game. The strong serving and defense of Tam and Chenette kept Quincy in contention.

"Our strongest point was definitely our defense," said Holly. "There were some moments when all six of our girls were bouncing off the walls to go for the ball."

Quincy jumped to a quick 2-0 lead in the first game, but strong serving by Stanton helped lead North to four points and the lead. Quincy came back and the two teams traded the lead back and forth until the Raiders put the game away with two straight points for the 15-12 win.

The second game started the same way, but with the score tied 3-3, Stanton's serving allowed NQ to score 10 straight. One of the points came off a strong block by Linda Jellison. The game point came off a Li serve which fell between three Quincy players.

The third game was closer than the first two, and the points were few and far between on several occasions. Quincy led, 3-0, but North tied it then took the lead for good. But the Presidents, trailing 13-7, mounted a comeback bid. They scored four straight points, thanks to superb serving by Chenette.

The Raiders got the ball back on a Stanton block and Li served the points that gave North Quincy their fourth consecutive sectional title.

"You never get here easy," said NQ's Rendle. "It's a long road and you have to work hard."

In the sectional semifinals, North beat Boston Latin, 3-0, and Quincy topped Arlington, 3-1.

During the second game, Red Raider players and fans were treated to an appearance by JV coach Kipp Caldwell. Caldwell, on his wedding night, visited the match after his ceremony at nearby Wollaston Church of the Nazarene.

IMPROVED TIRE QUALITY

According to a grading system developed by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), the general quality of automobile tires has been steadily improving in recent years. The NHTSA's Uniform Tire Quality Grading System evaluates the treadwear, traction, and temperature (ability to resist heat buildup).

In terms of temperature and traction, tires are rated either A, B, or C. The treadwear rating is a relative measurement with a 100 rating being equated with a tire life expectancy of 30,000 miles. (A tire rated 200 would be expected to last twice as long as 100 rated tires, etc.) In the mid-1980's, only two tires rated A's for temperature and traction, as well as a treadwear rating in excess of 200. Today, more than 200 tires meet or exceed this standard.

HINT: Before replacing tires, correct any sources of abnormal treadwear.

Complete satisfaction begins at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO as we discuss with you any problems you have with your tires. It continues right on through our service department where skilled technicians and the latest diagnostic equipment assure you that your vehicle will keep you satisfied for many years to come. We are the perfect size to give you individual, personal treatment... treatment that makes you happy because we know happy customers spread the word. Stop by 258 Quincy Ave., E. Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

Dr. Allan Yacubian, a.k.a. North Quincy's infamous Yakoo, is a well respected professional and perhaps the most outspoken supporter of North Quincy High School athletics.

His youthful enthusiasm and desire to lend a hand whenever needed has earned him accolades from people on both sides of the city. He is a true pillar of the community; a role model for the people of Quincy at a time when they are in short supply.

When it comes to basketball, however, he's about as sharp as an eraser. No, that's being generous. He can't dribble without a bib and members of the Bricklayers Union cheer him on every time he shoots.

But he finally had his moment in the sun when he schooled the likes of Ted Stevenson and Jim Rendle during their weekly pick-up game at the Bernazzani School last Sunday.

As a wise man once said, every Doc has his day. Stevenson (North Quincy High School) and Rendle (Quincy High School) are both in the Basketball Hall of Fames at their respective alma maters and they usually have their way with the previously lead-footed Yakoo. But Sunday's performance left them in awe. "No matter what he did the ball went in," said a stary-eyed Stevenson.

Also getting burnt like toast were Frankie Santoro and Gus DeBoer, former stars on the North Quincy High hoop team. Adding insult to injury was the fact that they tried every dirty trick in the book - it's safe to say more than one foreign object was confiscated by police afterwards - in an effort to stop Air Yakoo.

Coach Ted Stevenson's top player from last year's North Quincy High School hoop team, Jason McLeod, is making a name for himself at Mt. Ida College in Chestnut Hill.

In his first game the former-center-turned-small-forward scored 20 points, grabbed 12 boards and blocked two shots.

According to Stevenson, Mt. Ida coach Rico Cabral is extremely excited about McLeod and his work ethic. And he should be.

As a high school junior, McLeod was just a gangly kid who got by on the court based on height alone. But, sensing a future in the sport, McLeod put his nose to the grindstone. He began working on his game and his strength and in his senior year it paid off. He proved to be the go-to guy for the Red Raider tournament team last fall. Some of his highlights included scoring 25 points, grabbing 21 rebounds and setting a school record with 10 blocked shots in one game against Bridgewater-Raynham, and scoring 27 points in one half against Barnstable.

But resting on his laurels is not McLeod's style. "He's doing everything he can to improve his game," said Stevenson. "He's playing constantly, he never stops; AAU ball, every tournament, every league he could get into he's played in."

He's also been working on bulking up his once less-than-impressive 6-foot-8-inch frame. "He's got a lot stronger than he was in high school. He's in great shape," said Stevenson.

McLeod is looking to play ball at a top-notch Div. II school after his two years at Mt. Ida.

I pride myself on being the Football Guy.

Where there is football is where I am. Since Sept. 3 I've been in 34 football games, in person. Thirty-four. That's just a bit over an average of three games every weekend - a task that is just short of being physically impossible.

But this weekend I committed a major gridiron gaffe, what the French call a football faux pas. I've actually only been to 33-1/2 football games.

Here is my pathetic story:

Like any decent, self-respecting Boston College alum, I was at the BC-Syracuse game Saturday. As I sat in section W watching the Eagles make fools of the Orangemen, my buddy said he had four tix to the Patriots-Vikings game Sunday. "Would I want to go?" he asked.

"Would I want to go? Hey, I am the Football Guy," I said with that sort of swagger one expects from someone does nothing but sit on their butt all weekend.

So there we are Sunday, drinking Sam Adams on a glorious fall afternoon, watching the Pats get spanked silly like a bunch sled dogs.

Now, I never leave games early. Never. I've sat through more high school and college games this year than perhaps any human alive, sat right through to the sometimes-it-can't-come-fast-enough final gun.

But what did I do Sunday? At halftime?

I left.

Yes, indeed. The self-appointed Football Guy, a veritable cornucopia of football knowledge and witticisms, left a game at halftime before one of the greatest single performances in football history.

Talk about destroying your credibility.

The two squads faced off in an earlier meet, but this time the contest was a more hotly contested affair. Penalties resulted for both clubs.

Quincy goalie Nick Manning saved shot after shot from the hard-charging Wellesley offense. The ringing of pucks deflecting off his stick, pads and face mask could be heard throughout the arena.

At the other end, Killer Bee forwards Liam Powers, Billy Jones and Taylor Reinhardt unleashed a series of shots at the Wellesley net. But they were held in check by the great play of the opposing goalie.

Moritz the lead. The Chiefs tied it up again, but Chris Fowlett of Hanover scored off a feed by Tom Hughes of Quincy.

Hughes scored the Devils' fourth goal in the third period before Steve Segalla netted the game-winner.

The game was not yet over as the Chiefs scored again, then fought hard for the tying goal.

Goalie Nick Sarno of Milton made a great glove save in the third to allow St. Moritz to hold their lead.

Mite A's Battle To Tie

The Quincy Mite A's battled to a 1-1 tie with Framingham at Fessenden Rink in Newton.

The two teams waged a long, defensive battle before Quincy's Ryan Conley got on the scoreboard with just five minutes left in the third period. Richie Stone and Andy McDonough assisted on the tally.

left to play and were able to find the back of the net with the equalizer as the buzzer sounded.

Board Satisfied With Burger King Plan To Eliminate Smoke Problem

The Quincy License Board said they were satisfied with the Burger King's plan to install a converter above the broiler at the restaurant at 670 Adams St in order to eliminate smoke and emission problems thus satisfying neighbors complaints.

The board first met with Burger King representatives in August after residents complained about clouds of smoke and strong scents filtering outside the restaurant through its ventilation system.

Health Commissioner Jane Galloway said she was mainly concerned with emission and odors and was pleased with the engineer's plan to replace broiler filters and which along with the installation of the converter, would help burn off gases.

Board member Matt

Mulvey said the new converter will have to be approved by the building department as it is a new piece of technology.

Representatives from the Burger King told the board that the he converter will be installed as early as Jan. 1.

An abutter, Al DeCross of Stedman St. complained about a fence that had replaced an eight foot stockade fence which allows them "no privacy" chairman Joseph Shea assured Mr. DeCross that the board would inspect the fence

Board members said they would review the area six months after the installation of the converter.

SCOTT DEWARE*A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

How often do you have doubts about your abilities or doubts about other people? It is healthy and wise to have doubts at times about certain things, but when doubts become chronic and cloud simple reasoning, then doubting has deteriorated to a sickness of skepticism. We see men of poise and serenity; we see them with all the trappings of faith and dignity and we doubt whether these men ever have a doubt about anything. They seem so sure of themselves.

But they, too, have doubts at times because to doubt is only human. This was true from the days of the Psalmists to and through the days of Thomas and is true today. When we find ourselves gripped with uncertainty, we are bound to have doubts. But promiscuous doubting should not be.

Doubts torment us only because we have too little faith. This is true whether it applied to people, science, religion or anything else. Obviously then, the best way to reduce doubt is to increase faith. Sounds simple? It is...

and race. They are men, and they are women. They are of every creed and belief, and they fit every physical description.

"Most are just ordinary citizens who answered the call to duty when it came. They are your neighbor next door, the merchant at the mall, the policeman on the corner.

"That call took them from the safety of their homes and families, and often led them to the hardship, danger, and death of war. They left the peaceful pursuits of farms, factories and offices to dedicate their talents and energy to becoming soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines.

"They are the more than 38 million Americans who have served in military uniform. More than one million of them died in that service. More than 26 million of them are living today, in every city and town and farm across this land.

"We gather here today to do what Americans have proudly done for decades. We take time to pay our respect to those . .

. living and dead . . . who have served our country, and served it well, as members of our Armed Forces.

"In doing so," Bradley continued, "we also reaffirm our faith in this nation and the principals for which it stands. We show our love for America and our gratitude for those who have protected it for more than two centuries."

Bradley explained the history of Veterans Day, back to its origin, after the conclusion of World War I in 1918.

The following year, 1919, President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed Nov. 11 Armistice Day, a day to honor veterans and to commemorate the end of "The Great War."

In 1921, the remains of three unknown soldiers were buried, one at Arlington National Cemetery, one at Westminster Abbey in England and the third at the Arc de Triomphe in France. All burials took place on Nov. 11, giving universal recognition to Armistice Day.

In 1954, Rep. Edwin Rees of Kansas proposed changing Armistice Day to Veterans' Day to honor those who have served America in all wars. President Eisenhower signed this change into law on Nov. 11, 1954.

In 1958, the remains of two identified soldiers were laid to rest next to their "comrade in arms" from World War I, in Arlington National Cemetery to represent both World War II and Korea. In 1984, the final burial was made at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier with the internment of an unknown soldier from the Vietnam War.

Besides being the 40th anniversary of the change from Armistice Day to Veterans' Day, Friday also marked another anniversary. On Nov. 11, 1944, the USS Swamp was sunk by Japanese planes in Tokyo Bay. The Swamp (SS-277) earned 7 battle stars for World War II service.

"With their blood, their sweat, and their tears," Bradley added, "America's veterans have earned their place at the table."

Interim College Head To Be Chosen Nov. 21

Each voted for three candidates, with Young and Wilson receiving 12 votes apiece, Kenney nine votes, Letteney three votes and Moore no votes.

Raymondi said he is pleased by the selection process.

"It's been an enlightening experience for the Board of Governors," he said. "The questions that have been asked have been extremely substantive and have covered a wide range of issues. It's been very good for the board, and very good for the college."

Among the matters discussed were the college's leadership role in the community, nursing program, financial status and others. Raymondi, who voted for the three finalists, said he feels each possesses a particularly strong knowledge of a number of issues that will affect the college's future, including school-to-work initiatives.

Young was appointed to the interim presidency of the college more than a year ago to replace former Quincy College President O. Clayton Johnson, who was fired. Johnson has appealed his termination and arbitration is still pending.

Young has received the support of nearly 100 college employees who have signed petitions to retain Young for another year. However, Raymondi said Young's support of quick implementation of a baccalaureate program at the college is "a dynamic that may be at work here" which could affect the final vote.

Raymondi said Kenney and Wilson favor the possibility of implementing such a program sometime in the future because of more pressing issues at the college, adding that he personally feels the same way.

"I tend to agree with those who say, 'go slow,'" said Raymondi. "It's a very expensive program."

Police Drug Unit To Double In Size

Program" that is one component of the federal Crime Bill. Those monies, he noted, will pay for the salaries of half of the six new patrol officers who will be hired to replace current department members who will be promoted to the Drug Unit.

"It will be like getting six officers for the price of three," he said.

After three years, the city will assume fiscal responsibility for the new positions, Sheets noted. However, he added that there should be money available in the departmental budget at that time because of retirements and attrition and that money will be used to fund the positions.

Currently, the starting annual salary for a Quincy patrolman is $25,304.

Mullen said he is excited that the mayor has agreed to double the size of the drug unit, which currently consists of one lieutenant and five other officers.

"I needed his support in order to do it (increase the Drug Unit's strength), and we both feel that we should do it," he said.

The chief added that he has not yet decided which members of his department will be named to the unit.

Mullen said that while there is a "strong likelihood" the federal funding for the new positions will be obtained by the city, there are no guarantees. Sheets, however, said he plans to fill any vacancies on the police force if even the city does not receive federal monies.

Both Sheets and Mullen said taking into consideration the various physical and psychological examinations and training process a new police officer must undergo, they hope to have the six new patrolmen on the streets in about six months.

Marijuana Use Doubles Among Quincy Youth

another of the panelists, agreed.

"We need to face these figures honestly and directly," Franceschini said. "But most importantly, we must come together as a community—schools, churches, neighborhood organizations, businesses—and provide our children with so many opportunities for positive activity that they will be able to avoid these problems."

Other panelists included Kathy Mitchell, chairperson of the Quincy Parks and Recreation Commission; Mary Kelly, a junior at Quincy High School; Mary Moore of the South Shore YMCA and Lt. Anthony DiBona of the Quincy Police Department.

Finnegan had a final reminder about the implications of the survey results.

"There is a tendency to interpret information like this as indicators of 'problems with our youth,'" he said. "However, as a very insightful middle school student reminded us several years ago, 'What adults start, kids continue.'"

If we are serious about reducing the risks and negative effects of alcohol, tobacco and other drug use among our children, we must look at the norms and attitudes that we communicate to them."

Morrissey, Bellotti Address Central Middle Students

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Michael Bellotti recently visited the home economics class at Central Middle School.

The 12 seventh grade D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) students, along with teacher Jane Cammack, invited the legislators to come and talk about the important issue of smoking prevention and tobacco control legislation. They told the students about the status of the tobacco bills in the Senate and explained how a bill becomes a law.

The D.A.R.E. students showed the legislators a program that they present to Quincy fourth graders, explaining the harmful effects of tobacco, why kids may choose to smoke and the role of the media in influencing young people to smoke.

The goals of the D.A.R.E. program are to help enhance self-esteem, teach positive alternatives to tobacco, alcohol and other drugs and to help children make decisions that will have a positive impact on their lives.

Wal-Mart Purchases Quincy Point Land For New Store

Wal-Mart has purchased the property on which its new store in Quincy Point near The Falls condominium complex will be built as part of the Granite Crossing shopping center.

Developer Donald MacKinnon, president of Atlantic Development Corp. of Hingham, the developer of the project, announced last week that N.H. Funding Corporation, a subsidiary of his company sold the 17-acre piece of property to Wal-Mart for $5.2 million. The deal was closed last Thursday, he added.

MacKinnon said the purchase price includes both the cost of the land as well as "numerous other development costs including, but not limited to, site and roadway improvements."

"We are currently bidding the sitework for the development and look forward to starting construction on the shopping center soon," he said. "The decision by Wal-Mart to exercise their purchase option at this early stage shows their strong commitment to the City of Quincy. Although Wal-Mart will own their portion of the shopping center, Atlantic Development will develop the entire site as a single integrated retail shopping complex."

Construction could begin as early as next month, MacKinnon said. The store is expected to open in late 1995 or early 1996.

Nominations Open For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

(Cont'd From Page 1)
Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police officer or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense, 1985).

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

The late Richard J. Koch Sr., for his work with charitable and community causes over four decades, posthumously in 1987.

Martin Finnegan, retired Quincy high school athletic director, for coordinating the drug and alcohol program Project Impact, 1988.

Clara Yeomans, a long-time environmentalist and charter member of the Quincy Conservation Commission, 1989.

Gerald Gherardi, for his contributions to charities and service organizations over a half century, 1990.

Frank Kearns, for his innumerable volunteer contributions as a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor, 1991.

Stephen Cantelli, an innovative Quincy public school teacher and advocate of community education, 1992.

Those nominated the past nine years are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, a person receiving the most nominations will not necessarily be the final winner.

Anyone nominated just once has an equal chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Saturday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Steps Off At 12:15 P.M. Sunday

71 Units Featured In Christmas Parade

The Quincy Christmas Parade, cancelled last year for the first time in 42 years, will return (weather permitting) Sunday as the 43rd annual event kicks off at 12:30 p.m. at School and Elm Sts. and proceeds north along Hancock St. to North Quincy High School.

Approximately 200,000 people are expected to line the 2.8-mile parade route which will feature more than 71 marching units, including floats, bands and returning favorites as well as some new attractions.

This year's parade theme is "The Joys of Christmas." It will feature 17 floats, 18 bands, 22 specialty units and 14 color guards, more than last year.

Mayor James Sheets will be the parade's grand marshal. He and Mayor Charles Scholz of Quincy, Ill. were to serve as grand marshals last year as coordinators of the "Quincy to Quincy" flood relief effort. Unfortunately, inclement weather on two consecutive Sundays cancelled the parade for the first time in the event's history.

Parade participants will include some new faces and attractions and as well as some returning favorites. Among the new floats will be entries by Nantucket Light Ship, Thomas Crane Public Library and Star of the Sea Church.

Other float participants include:

Quincy College, Quincy Hospital, South Shore Plaza, Citizens Bank, Woodward School, Jack Conway Real Estate, Koch Club, Quincy Partnership, Continental Cable, Quincy 2000, Quincy Fire Department, Quincy High School, and Quincy Point Congregational Church.

Of course, Santa will wave to spectators from his float sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and Quincy Christmas Festival Committee.

Floats will compete for seven awards and a total of $4,250 in prize money. The grand prize winner for the best overall float will receive the Fr. Thomas Tierney Trophy and $1,500 cash. Other cash prizes are $1,000 for first place, $750 second, $500 third, and $250 each for fourth and fifth places.

Other awards are the Mayor's Trophy for best Quincy float; best commercial float; and the Christmas Festival Committee Trophy for the best specialty unit.

Judging the floats will be Gilda Barclay of Quincy, a sixth grade elementary school teacher in New Bedford; Marilyn Reisberg, past president of the Quincy Art Association and member of the Board of Governors "Copley Society," and Christopher Neil, a member of the Quincy Art Association and the Excalibur Fine Arts Gallery.

Featured bands are:

Quincy High School, North Quincy High School, Bourne High, Abington High, Holbrook High, Agawam High, New Bedford High and New Bedford Junior High, David Prouty High, Southbridge High, Douglas Junior-Senior High, St. Peter's of Still River, Mass.; Conant High, Waltham American Legion Post, Canton Legion Post, The Klassy Clowns and Pittsfield High School.

The Boston Gaelic Fire Brigade will possibly appear if Sunday is not a very cold day, parade committee members said.

Bands will be judged in the vicinity of Cottage Ave. and Hancock St. The winning high school band will be eligible to appear in the 1995 New Year's Day Cotton Bowl Parade.

Chief judge is Joseph Nee.

Specialty units expected to appear are:

Winners of the Festival Committee poster contest, Quincy High and North Quincy High beauty queens, Ronald McDonald and characters, Hallamore Clydesdales, Scituate Safety Car, Toys for Tots, costume characters, Rick Cobban on stilts, Red Cross vehicle, Quincy Fire Department pumper and vehicle, Norfolk County Sheriff's Department, Bare Cove Museum antique fire engine, MBTA vehicle with transport carrying McGruff the "Crime Dog," Civil Air Patrol, Norfolk/Bristol Ambulance, Rockland Police Department Safety Car, Hi Wheelers antique autos, a toy train for elves, an ATM costume from BayBanks, and sponsor/pennant marching group.

As has been the case in past years, the parade theme winner will march in the event. This year's theme winner is Lenore Birks of Quincy who suggested "The Joys of Christmas."

The color guard competition will feature the Quincy Police, Mass State Police, Milton Police, Cambridge Police, Quincy Fire Department, Marine Corps League Caddy Detachment, George F. Bryan Post, Department of Mass VFW Ladies State Color Guard, Taleb Grotto, Shriner's Military Color Guard with van, Morrisette American Legion, MDC and Rockland Police.

Fifteen minutes before the start of the parade, a contingent of First Night revelers will walk the route informing parade goers about the city's third annual First Night celebration New Year's Eve. First Night buttons will be available at several locations along the route at discount prices.

Comfort stations will be located at the Quincy District Court House and Kelly's in the Square. Portable units will be located at Shaw's parking lot and North Quincy High School.

The parade is expected to last two hours. Following the parade, band and float awards will be presented at an awards ceremony in North Quincy High School auditorium at 3:30 p.m. Capacity is 500 people.

Turning On Christmas Lights Friday

The holiday season will officially begin in Quincy Friday night, Nov. 25 when the Christmas lights are turned on at First Parish Church, across from City Hall in Quincy Center.

Rick Cobban, the "One Man Band," and costume characters will entertain from 6:30 to 7:15 p.m.

Following the introduction of local officials and winners of the elementary school illumination, candy canes will be distributed to children in attendance by Santa and costume characters.

Winning posters will be displayed in the South Shore Bank windows, and other posters will appear in other storefronts along Hancock St.

In the event of inclement weather, the ceremony will take place inside Presidents Place Galleria.

Cattaneo Retiring Koch To Park Dept., McFarland Exec. Secretary

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Thomas Koch, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, will become executive director of the Quincy Parks, Forestry and Cemetery Department within the next four weeks.

Koch, 31, will replace Raymond Cattaneo, 64, who is retiring after 22 years of service to the city. City Purchasing Director Michael McFarland will take over as executive secretary, while a replacement for McFarland has not yet been chosen, Sheets said Monday.

The mayor said Cattaneo is not scheduled to officially retire until Feb. 1, but he will leave the position prior to that because of vacation time that is owed him. He said he hopes Koch can move into the position "within the next four weeks," and also plans to have McFarland and his replacement move into their new positions at that time.

Sheets, who appointed Koch to the new position, said Koch had expressed interest in the job in the past and had requested to be considered for the post if it ever opened up. The first executive director of the department was Koch's father, Dick Koch, who held the position from 1962 until his death in 1987 when he was replaced by Cattaneo.

"I'm going to miss him," Sheets said of Koch. "But I'm sure he'll do a good job as executive director."

The mayor added that he feels now is a good time for Koch to assume the executive director's position since the City Council passed Sheets' bond package which contained about $3 million for the city's parks and playgrounds earlier this year.

Koch said he is thrilled by the honor.

"I'm ecstatic," he said. "I look forward to the challenge of bringing the department through the rest of the '90s, and I'm very pleased by the mayor's confidence in me. It will be a great experience."

Koch previously served as director of the Quincy Council on Aging from February 1988 until being appointed to the executive secretary's position when Sheets first took office in January 1990. Prior to that, he worked as a self-employed landscaper.

Cattaneo, who served as assistant director of the parks, forestry and cemetery department from 1972-87, said he feels now is the right time for him to retire.

"I'm going to miss the job, but I've been quite busy over the last few years, and I'm now going to maybe try to relax a little bit," he said.

Sheets said he feels McFarland has the temperament, patience and intelligence for the executive secretary's position and expects "the same kind of strong relationship" with him that he has developed with Koch.

Gillon To Leave Traffic Post

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Quincy Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon has resigned from his position and will become director of traffic engineering for the City of Boston effective Dec. 14.

Gillon's last official day on the job in Quincy will be Friday, Dec. 9. Mayor James Sheets, in making the announcement, said he received Gillon's resignation last Friday. The mayor added that he currently has no one in mind for the position but he hopes to appoint a replacement for Gillon as soon as possible.

"It's a tremendous loss for the city," Sheets said

Monday. "In my opinion, Jack Gillon is the finest traffic engineer in the state. He will be missed."

Sheets called Gillon a "great team player" who has helped saved the city "hundreds of thousands of dollars" through his expertise.

Gillon, 46, is leaving Quincy because the city could not match Boston's lucrative offer. Gillon, who makes an annual salary of $54,500, will be given approximately $20,000 more a year and an automobile, as well as a guaranteed raises his first two years on the job.

City To Receive $1.1M In State Sewer Funds

Quincy will soon receive $1,113,178 in Commonwealth Sewer Rate Relief Funds.

The city's State House delegation has announced that $30 million in sewer funds were being released statewide. The grant program, which the four members of Quincy's delegation were instrumental in creating to offset rising water and sewer rates, contains an additional $10 million which will be released sometime in the spring.

"Having made rate relief a top priority, it is truly pleasing to see a rate mitigation program that I worked hard to enact pay dividends for Quincy residents," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

Rep. Michael Bellotti added, "This battle having been won, I will continue to vigorously pursue further assistance for the already beleaguered ratepayers of Quincy."

"The Commonwealth Sewer Rate Relief Fund was created by our delegation and our fellow rate relief advocates to combat sewer rate increases due to debt service obligation for sewer construction projects," said Rep. Ronald Mariano.

Debt service, which is the repayment of bonds issued to finance reconstruction, is the most significant factor driving rates up, according to the delegation members.

Rep. Stephen Tobin said, "proof of the fund's effectiveness is reflected in lower sewer rates. Projected double-digit rate increases in the MWRA (Massachusetts Water Resources Authority) service area for both FY94 and FY95 were averted."

Morrissey added that "in FY94, projected community assessment increases were reduced to 4.5 percent from 13 percent, and in even better news for ratepayers, there were no increases to community assessments for FY95."

Also contributing to these reduction successes was the Quincy delegation's actions to scale back the size of the harbor project and to advocate Washington for increased federal monies, he said.

THE SIGNS OF ALZHEIMER'S

Sometimes the concern sneaks out in the form of a half-serious joke: "I must have Alzheimer's," quips the person who can't locate the car keys or remember an acquaintance's name. Still, many people do worry about symptoms that they fear might be early signs of the debilitating disease known as Alzheimer's. To direct people toward help, the Alzheimer's Association gives the following list of things to watch for in identifying the disease: recent memory loss that affects job performance, difficulty performing familiar tasks, problems with language, disorientation of time and place, poor or decreased judgment, problems with abstract thinking, problems misplacing things, and changes in mood, behavior, or personality.

P.S. Memory loss or behavioral changes may have many causes. A professional diagnosis is critical to proper treatment.

As you age, concerns about your health may increase. Don't worry unnecessarily about symptoms you can't diagnose—consult your physician for assistance. That Sheets Speculation

Gov. Bill Weld's smashing win in Quincy in the Nov. 8 state election has triggered new speculation that Mayor James Sheets might be in line for a cabinet post appointment.

Weld spent a lot of time in Quincy this election year—probably more than any other governor in recent years.

And whenever he came to town he was sure to bring good news and a ceremonial check or promise of something good to come. And while here, he hobnobbed with Sheets, a popular Democrat, which certainly didn't hurt.

SHEETS

WELD

Sheets didn't officially endorse Weld as some other Democrat mayors did but he did pretty much the equivalent when he said he was going to vote for him.

Weld badly wanted to carry Quincy, a long-time Democrat stronghold where Democrats outnumber Republicans and independents combined. Although he carried the state four years ago, Weld lost Quincy to John Silber. He didn't want to lose it this year to Mark Roosevelt. Another win in Democratic Massachusetts including a Democratic stronghold such as Quincy would help enhance his image as a future GOP national figure.

Weld and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci crushed the Democratic gubernatorial ticket of Roosevelt and Robert Massie here by a whopping 21,497 votes to 9,582.

Weld even outpolled Senator Ted Kennedy by 2,771 votes here in what has long been Kennedy country. Kennedy's vote was 18,726 to Mitt Romney's 12,443.

Weld and Sheets have developed a close friendship and mutual respect for one another although as a Republican and a Democrat they make a political odd couple.

The first big question is: will Weld offer Sheets a cabinet post? And the second big question: would Sheets accept it?

Sheets looks and sounds like a man who has an agenda he wants to complete before stepping down as mayor. It includes locating a commuter rail station in Quincy Center, construction of the proposed Quincy Center Concourse, the rebirth of the Quincy shipyard, the completion of the U.S. Naval & Shipbuilding Museum now that the USS Salem is finally back home, and revitalizing the retail district among other goals.

All of this will take time. Another term or two. That would be five terms and take him to 1999. And if it goes that far, why not one more, and become Quincy's first mayor of the 21st century?

Politically, that might seem a little far-fetched. But, if his popularity rating stays up as it has these past five years, it's a possibility.

Of course in politics anything can happen. You can be up and then suddenly down. Ask George Bush.

If Sheets did get and accept an offer from Weld it would turn Quincy's political scene upside down.

It would result in a mayoral battle royal and open up councillor at-large and ward seats down the line.

No doubt, along with the political speculation there's a little political wishing—among potential hopefuls.

THE SPECULATION ON a possible appointment for Mayor Sheets no doubt will go on until Gov. Weld makes all the appointments he's going to make come January.

But it doesn't seem that Sheets is really looking for one or expecting one. He appears to have his sights trained on next year and a run for a fourth term.

And a good indication of that is the holiday reception being held for him Thursday, Dec. 8 (6 to 9 p.m.) at The Four's Restaurant, Cottage Ave.

The event is being held by his election campaign committee. Tickets are $100.

Sounds like a campaign fundraiser for the 1995 city election.

SPEAKING OF SPECULATION, we reported here last January that Tom Koch was expected to leave as Executive Secretary to the Mayor to succeed Ray Cattaneo as Executive Director of the Parks-Forestry-Cemetery Department, a job his father, the late Dick Koch, held for a number of years.

KOCH

This week it became official along with Mayor Sheets' announcement that Purchasing Agent Michael McFarland would move upstairs to the mayor's office to succeed Koch.

Back in January word was that Cattaneo would become supervisor of the golf course and recreation area planned for the West Quincy quarry area. But that project is still in the planning stage and Cattaneo opted to take retirement instead.

If you're interested in a little more speculation, one name being prominently mentioned as McFarland's successor in the Purchasing Department is that of Joanne Condon Walsh, former Ward 6 City Councillor and one-time mayoral candidate.

Scenes From Yesterday

DURING THE 1920's, there were many small restaurants and refreshment stands along Wollaston Beach. This 1928 postcard is a picture of the Beach Lodge Tea Room which was located on the boulevard at the corner of West Elm Ave. Besides tea, refreshments here included a wide variety of temperance drinks, as well as ice cream, served inside and out under shaded tables along the sidewalk. This shop was open in the summer from 1921 through 1929 which happened to be the year when Howard Johnson opened his first ice cream stand two blocks away. This site later became home of a Dairy Freeze but today it is the location of a seldom used MDC restroom. One by one these business sites across from the beach are becoming 'open space' or some other government owned facility. It won't be too many years before you won't be able to buy ice cream or any other refreshment along the boulevard.

Asks State Education Department To Rethink Proposed Mandates

(The following letter was written by the author as an open letter to the state Department of Education and citizens of Quincy.)

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I am a parent of three children from elementary school to college. My active involvement has given me an awareness of the concerns at all levels. I am also a member of the Quincy School Committee.

Everyone who attended the Massachusetts Dept. of Education hearings on proposed changes in time and learning is working towards the same goal. We all want the best possible education for our students. We all want Massachusetts' public education system to be second to none. How we differ is the avenue each school system takes to achieve that. Each city and town in our state has a different makeup because the people within the community has different needs that must be met.

The same is true for our schools. Students come from all different backgrounds and have different needs. Some are at-risk, some are ready and eager to learn, some do not speak English and some have special needs whether it is Chapter 766 or being academically talented. The teachers, support staff, administrators, school councils, and school committee members all work very hard to meet the challenges and changing educational needs of our students.

Many of our educational goals in President Clinton's Goals 2000 and those in the Mass. Educational Reform Law, we in Quincy are doing and have been doing. We have Early Childhood Education, programs for academically talented and at-risk students, summer and evening programs that extend the school year and day. We are especially proud of our emphasis on keeping class size down; for we feel it is one of the main ingredients to educational success.

As a school committee member working with all the federal and state mandates, I find myself wondering if there will be any local control to meet the individual needs of all of our students. If the proposed regulations pass as is, I feel they will have an adverse effect in Quincy.

The commission's proposals are very costly and specific on time and which academic subjects must be taught. This will leave little time if any for our health education programs, physical education, business education, school-wide educational assemblies and events, sports, computer courses, training in peer leadership, peer mediation, and peer education programs which students must leave their classrooms to participate in. These are all important and add to a well rounded education plus self-esteem and responsibility to help mold our students into productive adults.

The proposal mentions that the educational reform law is providing additional funds. In Quincy since we are above the foundation level we receive very little additional funding. So where will the funding come from? Our budget needs rise each year as our enrollment continues to grow. We are working towards making all our buildings handicapped accessible, we have built new classrooms to relieve overcrowded buildings and are in the process of putting another school on line next Sept. We are able to do all these things because we have elected officials and a community that values education.

I ask you to rethink the proposed mandates and not make them so strict that there is no flexibility at the local level. Give us guidelines to improve education and allow us to work with the school councils on addressing the needs of each unique school in our city. Isn't this what site-based decision making is all about? Mandates without additional funding are not going to work. Please do not tie our hands. Give us more time to gradually phase in changes into the school schedule.

Marching Band Championships At Stadium 'A Huge Success'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On Sunday, Nov. 6, the New England Scholastic Band Association held their annual marching band championships at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Over 1,500 high school band members from Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island from 25 bands competed. In addition, over 150 volunteers from NESBA and the various high schools helped run the event.

The day was a huge success, due in no small part to the total and fully appreciated cooperation from the Quincy Public Schools, the Quincy Police, Auxiliary Police, Emergency Management Services, and the Park Department. All parties went out of their way to do not only what they were assigned to do, but when asked to do something extra or seeing that extra help was needed they followed through in a professional and congenial manner.

I am very proud to have been a part of the day, not only because it was successful, but because I am a citizen of the City of Quincy, and the city was a "shining star" over the activities.

200,000 View Santa Parade

By PAUL HAROLD

A record crowd of 200,000 viewed the city's Santa Parade from St. John's Church to Beale St.

Sixty units were entered by the following groups: Sacred Heart Catholic Youth Organization, Elks, Amvets, Koch Club, Camp Fire Girls, St. John's School, Curtain Call Theatre, N. NORTH DEFEATS QUINCY North Quincy defeated Quincy 14-6 in the annual Thanksgiving Day game, before 1,300 fans at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

It was not an easy game, made more difficult because of the quagmire like conditions of the field, caused by the unusually wet weather.

The first touchdown pass by North was by quarterback Bob Sleeth to Rick Trubiano. Despite an attempted grab by Quincy, the ball "slipped" into Trubiano's arms.

OPERATION CHRISTMAS

State Veterans' Commissioner Charles Collatos commended the city for "Operation Christmas," which provided cards and greetings for the 169 Quincy residents serving in Vietnam.

The project, initiated by Mayor James McIntyre, raised $1,500 in contributions. City Veterans' Director William Villone and Graves Registrar Anthony Famigletti directed the work.

Last-Minute Challenge To College Vote Possible

The Quincy College was scheduled to select a new interim president of the college Monday night, but a last-minute challenge to the vote loomed at press time.

The college's Board of Governors was to choose among three finalists for the job, which will be a one-year position, Monday night. The Sun went to press Monday afternoon because of the Thanksgiving holiday.

However, City Council President Michael Cheney said Monday he was planning to ask his council colleagues to adopt a resolution that supports keeping current interim President Donald Young until the board is ready to look for a new permanent president. The council was scheduled to meet one hour before the board began final interviews with the three remaining candidates.

Board Chairman Daniel Raymond criticized Cheney for interfering with the selection process "in the 11th hour." Cheney, however, said he only wants the college to get off to a good start under the recently appointed Board of Governors.

At press time, city councillors were divided about how they would vote on Cheney's resolution.

The three finalists for the position were Young, Stephen F. Kenney of Quincy, director of developments and grant services at the college and Linda B. Wilson of Rockland, director of the Quincy Public Schools Drop-Out Prevention Program. They were chosen from a field of five candidates, who were recently selected from an overall field of 92 applicants, last week.

The other two candidates selected to the final five were Alice V. Letteney, until recently executive dean of academic affairs at Mount Wachusett Community College in Gardner and Carol A. Moore of Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., a provost and vice president of academic affairs at Mercy College.

Twelve of the board's 13 members were present for last week's vote, with Rev. Michael Wayne Walker of Brockton unable to attend the meeting. Each voted for three candidates, with Young and Wilson receiving 12 votes apiece, Kenney nine votes, Letteney three votes and Moore no votes.

Young was appointed to the interim presidency of the college more than a year ago to replace former Quincy College President O. Clayton Johnson, who was fired. Johnson has appealed his termination and arbitration is still pending.

Prior to Monday night's meeting, Young had received the support of nearly 100 college employees who had signed petitions to retain him for another year.

"Madeline Vega at Fleet worked for two months to put together a mortgage I could afford so I could keep my home. And I'll tell you, I'd be living on the street if it wasn't for her."

Bea Carey-Canty Homeowner

After a 5 year property dispute, Bea Carey-Canty couldn't afford the home she'd fought so hard to win. She had no one to turn to. Until she met Madeline Vega at Fleet. Madeline worked hard to get Mrs. Carey-Canty a mortgage she could afford. And thanks to all those efforts, she kept her home. Because the way we see it, every investment we make is an investment in the community. And that benefits us all. That's the kind of thinking that's at the heart of our INCITY program for people and communities in need. INCITY has set aside $8 billion for loans to people just like Mrs. Carey-Canty - the most comprehensive lending commitment ever made by any financial institution in the country. And the program to date has already made over 27,000 loans totaling $1.6 billion. So if you'd like to participate in the Fleet INCITY program, call 1-800-CALL-FLEET (1-800-225-5353). NQ Knights Of Columbus Remember The Unborn

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On Friday, Nov. 11, Veterans Day, we honored the veterans of all wars, with a special remembrance of those who had paid the supreme sacrifice.

On Sunday, Nov. 13, the North Quincy Knights of Columbus memorialized the victims of another war: the war on the unborn.

That day, on the Council grounds, members dedicated a Memorial to the Victims of Abortion, all of whom are paying the supreme sacrifice in an escalating war which claims the lives of 40,000 baby girls and baby boys each year in this state alone.

The dedication ceremony by the Knights of Columbus was a sorrowful reminder of the terrible waste of human life. These tiny victims will have their Armistice Day only when the deadly weapon of abortion is abolished.

Olsen Grateful For Support In County Commissioner Race

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I guess it couldn't have been any closer for a county-wide race. Evidently Peter Collins was able to get his message across more effectively than myself.

I would like to thank all of the thousands of Independents, Democrats, Republicans and the Republican State Committee who supported and voted for me these past years, and I would like to apologize for not winning this seat again for them.

Also, I would like to mention that the people who work for Norfolk County are good, hard working, dedicated employees that I personally was able to observe over the past four years with very few exceptions.

The four commissioners and administrative staff that I worked with have been great and anything I accomplished was with their help and support. We worked as a team as commissioners and trustees at Massachusetts Respiratory Hospital and Norfolk County Agricultural School.

Lastly I know Peter Collins personally and know that he will be a great commissioner and supportive of Norfolk County and I wish him the best.

Bruce D. Olsen
Norfolk County Commissioner

Ronald Dubois Honored For Quincy Crisis Volunteer Work

Ronald L. Dubois was recently recognized for his contributions to the Quincy Crisis Center by his employer, State Street Bank and Trust Company.

Dubois, a Braintree resident, received the William S. Edgerly Community Service Award for his six years of volunteer work at the Quincy Crisis Center.

During that time, Dubois has helped the center provide a range of services including emergency and disaster relief to South Shore residents. He also serves meals to "shut-ins" and has led plans for the development of a Quincy

Elders Center. In addition, he has assisted in establishing an educational facility, the Mary Martha Learning Center, for homeless mothers with babies. The Edgerly Community Service Award was instituted one year ago in honor of State Street's Chairman Emeritus, William S. Edgerly. The award is presented to State Street employees who make significant volunteer contributions within their communities. Award recipients and a non-profit organization of their choice each received cash awards from State Street.

Contract Awarded For MWRA Building Rehabilitation

The MWRA has awarded a $2.3 million contract to Thomas O'Connor and Co. Inc. of Canton for the rehabilitation of Building 19 at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy.

The work is scheduled to begin this week.

The MWRA's Transport Department's South Maintenance Yard, which is responsible for maintaining the authority's South Interceptor System serving 22 customer communities, operates out of Building 19. Officials said the location of the Quincy building enhances the department's ability to respond to emergencies which can occur at any hour of the day or night, thus minimizing response time and costly damage.

Building 19 is also currently used for confined space training for construction workers, line staff and municipal employees.

The Wastewater Engineering Construction Department, responsible for performing Project Administration and Resident Inspection for new construction projects within the Sewerage Division, will expand its operation in Building 19 after renovation work is complete. In addition, the building will be used by resident inspection and construction staff working on projects in the area, such as the expansion of the pelletization plant, Quincy pump facilities, and the Braintree/Weymouth interceptor projects.

The rehabilitation will include replacement of the entire electrical system, asbestos removal, replacement of doors and windows, installation of a fire protection system, construction of a new elevator for handicapped access, and installation of new plumbing interior patterns, floor coverings, ceilings, and new interior staircases for emergency use.

At present, there are 15 employees working in Building 19. After the renovation work is complete, 35 additional people will be added to the Transport and Wastewater Engineering Departments already established in the building.

Candidates Sought For Mayor's Family Council

Mayor James Sheets is seeking candidates for the Family Council, an advisory board that will keep his new Family Commission informed about the changing needs of families throughout the city.

All Quincy residents, especially parents and others caring for children, such as grandparents, siblings and other relatives, are eligible to apply. The Family Council will consist of 15 to 25 people representing different ethnic groups, neighborhoods and types of families, the mayor said.

Sheets distributed 6,500 applications through children in the city's elementary and middle schools last week to begin the search for potential members. The forms are also available at City Hall, the Thomas Crane Public Library and the city's seven neighborhood centers.

The Family Commission, a group of social service providers and department heads, will meet by the end of this month to appoint the Family Council members, the mayor said.

Sheets added that in order to truly do its job, the Family Council must represent all kinds of families, including those with one parent, two parents, stepparents, teen parents, grandparents raising grandchildren and siblings raising younger sisters or brothers.

The Family Council will meet regularly to discuss the problems families face in today's society, including youth violence, drug abuse and unemployment, Sheets said. Four of the council members will also serve on the Family Commission and advise the board about what its priorities should be, he added.

Sheets also said results of a citywide survey will be used to help develop new programs to better meet family needs.

The mayor noted that he expects interest in the Family Council to be high, based on the many people who have inquired about it during the past year.

For more information about the Family Council, call the mayor's office at 376-1990.

Officials Investigate, Seek I.D.

Woman's Body Found In Granite Rail Quarry

Authorities are still investigating the partially-clothed body of a young woman that was recovered from the frigid waters of the Granite Rail Quarry Sunday afternoon.

Officials are treating the case as a murder, although the exact cause of death was not known as press time.

Quincy Police Chief Francis Mullen said the body was weighted down by a cement block. It was found in the same quarry authorities have been searching for the body of Patrick "P.J." McDonagh, a 19-year-old Irish student who has been missing since June 24.

Investigators said the victim was a white woman in her late teens or early 20s between 130 and 140 pounds with olive skin and brown eyes and hair. She was 5 feet, 6 inches tall and wearing a silver loop in her left ear and two medal studs on her right ear.

Mullen said the case is being handled by the State Police through the Norfolk County district attorney's office.

Dr. Peter Leahy, a state medical examiner, said the initial investigation indicated that the body was probably in the water a relatively short period of time, in all likelihood between a day and a week.

State Police spokesman Larry Gillis said the body was discovered about 1 p.m. by two hikers. Mullen said the body was quickly recovered by members of the Quincy Police Department's Underwater Recovery Unit.

The body was resting on a ledge about 13 feet below the water's surface, according to Gillis. He added that the body showed evidence of trauma, and autopsy results would reveal exactly how the woman had been killed.

Gillis said police don't know whether the woman was sexually assaulted, and it was too early to speculate about the cause of death.

The autopsy was still in the process of being conducted at press time, according to Nina Flaherty, a spokesperson for the district attorney's office.

Gillis said McDonagh's family was notified that the body found at the quarry was not that of their missing relative. Authorities have searched the quarry several times in recent months in an attempt to find McDonagh's body, and another search of the quarry with sophisticated underwater cameras was scheduled for yesterday (Tuesday).

22 Firms Bid On Library Expansion

Twenty-two architectural firms have submitted design proposals to build a 40,000-square-foot addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center.

Library Director Ann McLaughlin made the announcement last week. Plans for expanding the library, which has been designated a National Historic Landmark, have been in the works for some time.

McLaughlin said three Quincy firms submitted proposals: John M. Sheskey and Associates, Holmes and Edwards, and SAR Engineering.

Other firms among the 22 were Graham Gund Architects of Cambridge, which designed the Regency Hyatt Hotel and 19-century-style library in Lincoln; Stahl Associates of Boston, which has done restoration plans for the Park Street Church and the Old South Meeting House; and Shepley Bulfinch Richardson Abbott, also of Boston, which is the successor of two famous architects: H.H. Richardson, who designed the original Crane building in 1882 and Charles Bulfinch, the architect for the State House and mansions on Beacon Hill.

The new Crane expansion, which will be the second addition to Richardson's original building, will be adjacent to the existing library on a site currently occupied by a Washington Street commercial building. McLaughlin said the project, which will include at least 100 parking spaces, will cost about $9 million and begin late 1995 or early 1996.

The library's Design Selection Committee will choose five firms as finalists Dec. 7, and its Board of Trustees will interview the five and select the design firm by the end of December, McLaughlin added.

The winning firm will prepare floor plans and other designs while the library applies for state funds for the library construction, and McLaughlin said the library should be a prime contender for a grant. The grants will be awarded in June. If the city is chosen to be a recipient, it will then have to commit its share of funding within four months.

In the meantime, a $170,000 project to replace the old paved walkways at the library is still being completed. McLaughlin said the project was designed by Stahl Associates, the ground work is being done by Ledgewood Construction Co. of Canton., and the project should be completed in about two weeks.

Morrisette Post Sells Hall, Plans Move To New Site

The Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post has sold its hall located at 54 Miller St., West Quincy to a Boston auto dealership, Saturn of Boston.

The news was confirmed last week by Paul A.M. Hunt, a past commander of the post. Hunt said Saturn has purchased the hall and 1 acre at the site, located at the Furnace Brook Parkway exit of the Southeast Expressway.

Although the sale price was not disclosed, it is believed to be about $1 million. Post officials said they are considering building a new hall on a city-owned site off Quarry Street, next to the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

Recently, the City Council took a preliminary vote to declare two lots totaling 107,532 square feet off Quarry Street as surplus, a first step in selling the property.

The matter will now go to the Quincy Planning Board for its recommendation, then to the council's Land Conveyance Committee. A favorable vote by the full City Council would then be needed before the matter could receive the final approval from Mayor James Sheets.

The initial vote enables the post to begin exploring building on the land, according to Ward 4 City Councilor Thomas Fabrizio. The city would review plans and require an environmental study before approving a sale, he added.

Hunt, who served as chairman of a post committee the negotiated the sale of the hall, said an engineer was scheduled to begin looking at the site this past weekend to study to begin looking at the feasibility of building there.

Both Fabrizio and City Council President Michael Cheney said they hope the post can stay in West Quincy. Post officials have said they plan to remain in the area.

Last June, post officials confirmed that the post was negotiating with the car dealership. McDonagh's also expressed an interest in the site, but the restaurant's offer was not as high as that from Saturn, he said.

Although the 50-year-old post hall has been rented for years for functions such as weddings and parties, the post wanted to shrink its operations, officials said.

Stacked New Bedford Squad Too Strong North Falls To Whalers In Div. 1 Title Match

Has College Coaching Opportunity Raymer Stepping Down As Quincy Head Coach

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

North Quincy's plans for a fourth girls' volleyball state title were postponed for another year as favored New Bedford fought their way to a 16-14, 16-18, 15-5, 15-4 victory in the Div. 1 state final Sunday at Brandeis University.

New Bedford, winning their first girls' volleyball state title, finished with a 22-1 record. The Red Raiders finished at 18-7.

"We played great the first two games, but I don't know what happened in the other two," said North Quincy head coach Jim Rendle. "I think the girls felt intimidated by their size and power."
